Ed Kane, owner of the WaterWorks said on the night of June 9, the New England Patriots had a party at his place, and that from the usual 20 persons he usually hires, he hired 40 security persons.

Kane said he also had two extra policemen on detail (one with a car) and four extra managers. Kane said he remained there until 2 a.m. and did not see any police officers consuming alcohol.

Kane said since the inception of WaterWorks seven years ago, has never had a violation, and that he had been under "incredible scrutiny" from members of the License Board and said he is always the first one to address any issue.

He said he has always respected building and fire codes and said out of the 80 employees on that specific night, not one of them drank on the premises after work.

He said with the large crowds that he usually has at WaterWorks, he has about seven cleaners to remain after 2 a.m. and has security 24 hours a day.

He said he did not see anyone drinking after hours and said "I don't police the police," adding that "my violation is not seeing them."

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard liquor inspector and license board agent, said in a large operation that Kane has it is not unreasonable to have so many persons cleaning after hours, and said he gets calls almost nightly from Waterworks stating that they will be persons cleaning or repairing things when no one is around.

Although at the onset of the meeting Chairman Joseph Shea told a sizable group in the city hall chambers to limit their remarks to June 9 and 10, some persons still came forward to voice their complaints about noise.

Elaine Crowley a member of the Marina Bay Civic Association suggested that closing of entertainment should be at 11 p.m., and also questioned the delay in the hearing indicating that Kane's summer business is almost coming to a close.

Shea explained that all of the information was unavailable for a planned but canceled August meeting.

One other Marina Bay

resident said she called the police the night of June 9.

However, Jay McRitchie, the city solicitor cautioned the board not to listen to other testimony because it was "not an appropriate forum" and could impact the board's decision.

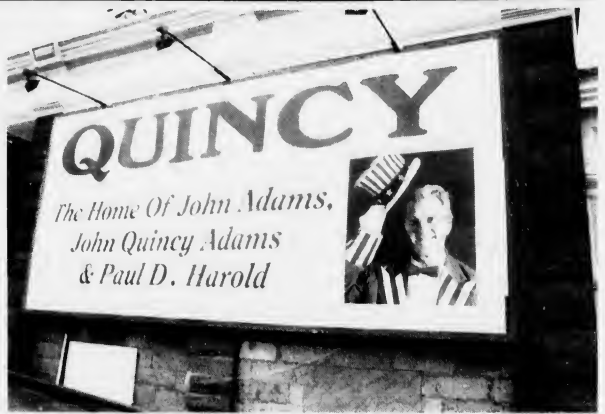

Falco later commended Kane for "doing a very good job" for such a large operation. But added that any big operation brings other problems.

He said that as far as the police officers were concerned, they will be dealt with in a separate fashion.

Falco wanted to roll back the entertainment license to midnight, but failed to get a vote.

Atty. Richard Barry representing Kane said he wanted Kane to be "treated reasonably" without random resolutions.

He said there were detailed officers on site and no where is writing on all the directives about police officers consuming alcohol after hours.

A SPECIAL TRIBUTE -- Uncle Sam Rounselle has changed his billboard at Newport Ave. and Beale St., Wollaston in tribute to Paul D. Harold, late City Council president and Norfolk County Register of Deeds who died Aug. 12. It reads: QUINCY -- The Home of John Adams, John Quincy Adams & Paul D. Harold. "I did it so that Paul's legacy will live on," Rounselle said. "I want people to know that Quincy was his home." (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

17th Infected Bird Found City Trapping Mosquitoes

The 17th dead bird, infected by the West Nile Virus (WNV), has been found in Quincy and the Department of Health has reminded residents of protective measures that should be taken to prevent mosquito bites.

No humans have been reported infected and acting

Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele cautioned that even those people who may have been bitten by infected mosquitoes have little reason to panic.

"Less than one percent of those who get bitten by an infected mosquito show signs to the West Nile Virus."

he said. "For all I know I may have been bitten and nothing happened."

Scheele said one WNV-positive Culex Species mosquito pool has been located in the city and the State Department of Public Health's Arbovirus Surveillance Pro-in the stock market.

Not anymore!

Not long ago, some people thought having a Certificate or Passbook Savings Account was hopelessly old-fashioned. Today those former "stock market wizards" -- the ones who couldn't talk about anything else! -- have developed a new appreciation for the safety insured bank accounts provide. There's nothing like the peace of mind that comes with having money in the bank. And that's a fact that will still be true even when the market starts going up. Come see us today for an FDIC-insured investment that will give you your money back plus interest.

How About A 70th Class Reunion!

It's the season for high school class reunions. And for each class, regardless of which year they graduated, it's a reminder that time really does fly.

Among reunions coming up:

QHS 1972, 30th Nov. 30 at the Pembroke Country Club. NQHS 1982, 20th Nov. 29 at the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

But they're just kids.

QHS 1942 has its 60th coming up Sept. 19 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. And NQHS 1943, its 59th get together, a luncheon, Sept. 27 at the Red Parrot Restaurant in Hull.

And, Mrs. Helen Scurtis of South Artery, Quincy, might consider them kids, too.

She and some 40 of her Whitman High School classmates are going to their reunion tonight (Thursday) at Christo's in Brockton. It's their 70th.

Mrs. Scurtis, who is 88, and her friends graduated in 1932 when Herbert Hoover was still president and World War II was still nearly 10 years away.

She is the aunt of Dick Dale, who grew up in Quincy Point and went on to become a nationally known surf guitarist. He has appeared on TV, in the movies and is currently touring Europe.

He has a real young-at-heart aunt. Her classmates are young at heart, too.

They're thinking of their 75th.

TOM KOCH, running for Norfolk County treasurer, could probably count on some extra votes if Olathe, Kan., was part of the county.

Lynn Alferts, from that Kansas town, was recently visiting in Braintree when she spotted one of Koch's campaign bumper stickers.

And she just had to have one.

Seems she has a friend named Tom Koch who is an elected official out there and she wanted to bring him one back as a souvenir. And have a little fun since her friend is a Republican and the Koch bumper sticker declares him a Democrat.

Candlelight Vigil To Honor 9/11 Terror Attack Heroes

The Harborview Residents Committee will hold a candlelight vigil Wednesday, Sept. 11, to remember those who perished a year ago in the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington.

The vigil will be held at the new Thelma Rogers Memorial Site on the hill in front of the Manet Health Center on Bicknell Street at 6:30 p.m. Candles will be provided.

Refreshments will be served following the vigil at the Residents Committee office at 12 Figurehead Lane, Germantown.

Quincy Animal Shelter Benefit Cruise Sept. 8

The Quincy Animal Shelter will host a benefit cruise on Boston Harbor aboard The Spirit of Boston Sunday, Sept. 8, from 6 to 9 p.m. Boarding will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the Commonwealth Pier, 200 Seaport Boulevard, Boston. Proper dress is required.

Tickets are $100 per person ($50 is tax deductible) and include gourmet dinner buffet, live musical floorshow, celebrity guests, dancing and six hours parking at the Seaport Hotel Garage.

All proceeds benefit animals currently waiting for homes.

To reserve tickets call 617-376-1349 through Saturday, Sept. 7. Tickets may be purchased the day of the cruise at the Quincy Animal Shelter table on Commonwealth Pier from 5:30 to 6 p.m.

Anyway, she tracked Koch down to his home in North Quincy and talked with his wife, Christine. Could she get a bumper sticker. "Sure," Christine said, and mailed her not one but two.

Alfers was so pleased, she sent back a campaign donation.

MILESTONE: Former Mayor and First Lady Arthur and Shirley Tobin recently became grandparents — for the 20th time.

ARTHUR

SHIRLEY

No. 20 is Brenna Marie, born to son Quincy Police Sgt. Brian and daughter-in-law Lynn Tobin in June. Brenna is their fourth daughter.

Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's Church, who has baptized all the grandchildren, did the honors again this time.

And, turning to the former mayor now clerk magistrate at Quincy District Court, he mused: "Now you can start your own parish."

Incidentally, the granddaughters still hold the upper hand: Brenna makes it 11 granddaughters to nine grandsons.

The older granddaughters proudly call it "Girl Power!"

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, vice chairwoman of the Quincy School Committee, is now an author.

Cedrone, a paralegal in the law office of Atty. Tom Williams and associates, recently had an article published in the Elder Law Journal.

The article deals with the problems facing the elderly in public housing.

The title is a long one: "How Federal and State Disability Laws and Regulations Have Created A Sense of Confinement."

It focuses on the issue of "mixed housing" and the effects of the Massachusetts Law: Housing For the Elderly and the Handicapped of Low Income."

The law, Cedrone notes, "mixes" the alcohol and drug-addicted and elderly in the same housing units.

And that has become a serious problem.

Cedrone joined the Williams law office in November, 2000 following her graduation from the New England School of Law with a Juris Doctorate degree.

FORMER Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott and his wife, Tracy, are expecting their first little constituent at the end of October.

Married last year, they met on the campaign trail in 1997 while he was running for the Ward 3 seat and she for the school committee.

You might call him a true romantic. He popped the big "will you marry me?" question on bended knee while they were on a date and slipped a diamond on Tracy's finger.

McDermott is now administrative assistant in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds office and a candidate for Register of Probate.

Tracy became an assistant district attorney in DA Bill Keating's office and is now in private law practice.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1910 POSTCARD shows the Harvard Trophy awarded to British aviator Claude Graham-White, winner of the $5,000 bomb dropping contest held at the Harvard Aero Meet in Squantum 92 years ago this week. The "bombs" were made of plaster-of-Paris and were the size of softballs. The pilots had to drop the bombs at levels from 100 to 1800 feet above, and into, the smokestacks of model naval warships on the ground. Military leaders from around the world were present to witness the event, including the US Secretary of the Navy, army generals, the Russian Ambassador and President William Howard Taft. The success of the pilots at Squantum first proved to the world that the airplane was an important new weapon-of-war.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Over 10,000 Expected For Ship Launching

By TOM HENSHAW

Plans for handling what was expected to be the greatest traffic problem in the history of Quincy were tackled at a meeting of city and state officials, police and Fore River executives. The occasion was to be the launching of the USS Massachusetts.

It was expected that more than 10,000 visitors would come to Quincy to witness the launching.

Police Chief John Avery said tentative plans called for blocking off of all streets between River Street and the South Artery and between Washington Street and Quincy Avenue.

COAST GUARD TAKES OVER MAYOR'S YACHT
The U.S. Coast Guard officially took over Mayor Thomas Burgin's 34-foot power cruiser "Aries" at ceremonies at Quincy Yacht Club.

The "Aries" would be painted gray and designated the CGR-7. She would be used for general patrol in Massachusetts Bay waters.

The boat would be returned to her owner at the end of the national emergency.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT UP

Quincy's annual decreasing school enrollment was expected to increase, though actual figures would not be available for several days.

It was reported that there were more out-of-town students registering this year because of the number of new people working in Quincy defense plants.

At Central Junior High School, principal David Goodspeed reported that 75 out-of-town students had registered to date.

USE OF NON-QUINCY GRANITE QUESTIONED
Costanzo Pagnano, business agent for the Quincy Granite Cutters Association, protested the use of non-Quincy granite for the curbing of Centre Street (in the heart of the city's granite district).

He met with John Lane, city purchasing agent, and Commissioner Ezekiel Sargent to ask for an investigation of why Chelmsford granite was being used in the city.

Unfair To Blame Officials For School Bus Cutbacks

The Quincy School Committee recently was forced to change the city's school bus policy for elementary students. Many parents have expressed anger over the change saying young children can't possibly walk to school. Some parents have stated they will be forced to give up their jobs or change work hours in order to drive their kids to school.

You know, the school committee was caught between a rock and a hard place. I'm sure members of the school committee hated to change the school bus policy. The school board, doing the best they can in these terrible economic times, has been forced to cut spending and decided not to bus elementary school students this year who live less than three-quarters of a mile from school. The old policy allowed these children who lived more than a half mile from school to have a bus ride.

I agree with Christine Cedrone, vice chair of the school committee, who said,

"It was a decision we all struggled with. None of us wanted to do it. We didn't have any extra money to work with. ... I think we did the right thing."

Quincy elementary school parents are still luckier than parents in many other South Shore communities where students must live a mile or more from their schools in order to ride a school bus.

The Quincy School Committee isn't telling young kids to walk to school. It's telling parents the City of Quincy wants to ensure that classroom sizes are kept down and programs kept intact.

The new bus policy will save $647,000, and in an economy where every penny counts, that kind of money is hard to sneeze at.

JoAnn Bragg and the other members of the board are not mean-spirited. Bragg says if there are empty seats on buses, the school committee is willing to add more children to the bus routes.

Meanwhile, parents will have to do the best they can for their children. It won't be easy for some parents. Hopefully, many of them can organize car pools. However, it does seem unfair to blame public officials who are doing the best they can to continue to make the Quincy Public Schools the best school system it can be. If we had more money, the old school bus policy would still be in place.

A float builder seminar for the 50th annual Quincy Christmas parade will be held Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Access Television studio, 88 Washington St., Quincy Center.

"This year's parade theme 'Golden Jubilee of Christmas Treasures' offers much latitude in the planning and construction of the floats," said George White, general chairman.

Paul Kennedy, float activity coordinator, said the seminar is open free of charge to all amateur float builders planning to enter floats.

He urges participants to arrive early as the seminar entrance to the TV studio is off the Washington Street parking lot. A parade float activity film will be shown exactly at 7:15 p.m.

A presentation on float building, amateur and professional, will follow.

Float judging concerns will be given by float judges after which a general audience discussion will be held.

For more information contact Kennedy at 9 Trevor St., Quincy 02171 or by calling 617-328-1059.

O'Brien Receives 7 Endorsements Here

Shannon O'Brien received seven political endorsements in Quincy Tuesday in her bid for governor. They came from:

Sheriff Michael Bellotti, state Reps. Steve Tobin and Ron Mariano, City Councilors Bryan Connolly, Doug Gutro and Joseph Newton and School Committeeman Michael McFarland.

The endorsements, which came at a gathering outside Quincy District Court, declared O'Brien "the strongest and most qualified candidate to lead Massachusetts into

O'Brien thanked them for their support and said she "is ready to provide strong, independent leadership."

Bellotti said O'Brien "has a proven record of fixing problems in state government and she's ready to do it again. ..."

Tobin, chairman of the House Criminal Justice Committee, said he was confident an O'Brien administration "will put the proper priorities in place to make our communities safer."

He cited her proposal to collect DNA fingerprints from all convicted felons and her "tough gun control measures."

City Trapping Mosquitoes

gram is continuing to trap mosquitoes.

He declined to say where in Quincy the mosquito trap was installed for fear it might be damaged by vandals. He did, however, say that most of the dead birds were located in the Wollaston area.

He said he and Mayor William Phelan are scheduled to appear on Quincy Access TV this week to field questions about the virus in the city. The exact date and time have not yet been worked out.

Thus far, 224 WNV-infected birds have been found in 61 cities and towns in Massachusetts during the 2002 season and 12 communities have had at least one WNV-positive mosquito pool.

In one of the latest reported cases, a llama was reported to have died of WNV in Halifax in June, the first such case in the United States, although cats, horses and rabbits have been reported to have it.

WNV primarily affects birds, crows and blue jays particularly, but it can be transmitted to humans by a bite of a mosquito infected with the virus.

Most WNV infections do not cause symptoms. Mild cases cause fever, headaches and body aches, often with a skin rash and swollen lymph glands. More severe cases disorientation, coma, convulsions, paralysis, even death.

Scheele reminded folks that the best way to avoid mosquito bites is to avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.

If you must be outside during those hours, wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants or use a DEET (N,N-diethyl-metatoluamide)-containing mosquito repellent when out of doors.

When using the repellent, care should be taken to read the instructions on the can, use a low concentration on children and do not use repellents at all on infants.

Other protective measures include checking household window screens for holes and eliminating pools of stagnant water, such as accumulate in old barrels and tires, where mosquitoes can breed.

Norfolk County Mosquito Control plans to expand its surveillance activities with the addition of at least one mosquito trap location in the city. Aerosol logging for nuisance control will continue through mid-September.

The County will also continue larval control measures in the salt marshes. Catch basins continue to be treated, especially in the areas where birds have tested positive for the virus.

The State DPH is continuing to track birds to help in the surveillance effort. Residents are urged to report all dead birds to the MDPH at 1-866-MASS WNV (1-866-627-7968) or the Quincy DPH at 617-376-1278 or 1285 or 1286.

For further local information, call Andrew Scheele at 617-376-1273, or Cindy DeCristofaro at 617-376-1278, or Karen McKim or Ruth Jones, both at 617-376-1285.

'Understanding Islam' Discussion Series Begins Sept. 25 At Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library is one of 12 libraries in the Greater Boston area selected by the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities to host a new library reading and discussion program called "Understanding Islam."

Developed by the Humanities Foundation with funding from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay, the free program provides an opportunity to learn about the religion, politics and culture of Islam.

The four-part program offered the general reader an opportunity to explore the roots of Islam and some of the crucial issues facing Muslims in the Middle East and throughout the world.

Held every other week over an eight-week period, each two-hour session will begin with a brief presentation by a specially trained scholar from a local college or university. The scholar will then lead the discussion of the book read for that session.

Program participants will read the following books: Muhammad and The Quran, A Very Short Introduction by Michael Cook, Children of the Alley, an allegorical novel by the Egyptian Nobel Prize Laureate Naguib Mahfouz, Woman and Gender in Islam, Historical Roots of a Modern Debate by Leila Ahmed, and, lastly, The Mantle of the Prophet: Religion and Politics in Iran by Roy Mottahedeh.

The books are provided by the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities and the United Way of Massachusetts Bay, and will be distributed by the library on a first-come, first-served basis. The books must be returned at the conclusion of each session so that they can be sent on to the next participating library. Those who register for the program should commit to attend the full series.

"Understanding Islam" discussion sessions will be held Wednesday evenings from 7-9 p.m. in the main library meeting room in Quincy Square on Sept. 25, Oct. 9, Oct. 23, and Nov. 6.

"Understanding Islam" brochures describing the books in more detail are available at the library. To register for the discussion series or for more information, contact Megan Allen at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy 02169 or call 617-376-1319, or e-mail "mallen@ocln.org."

A CHECK FOR $1,000 was recently presented by the Quincy Sons of Italy to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation to help children and adults afflicted with the disease. Making the presentation to Nicole Bruno, director of Special Events for the CFF, are, from left, Salvatore Masotta, treasurer of the SOI lodge beano program; John DeCarli, lodge president; and Harold DiMaggio, beano program chairman.

Rosemary Nolan To Speak At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting

Rosemary Nolan, program manager at the Quincy Department of Public Works, will be the guest speaker tonight (Thursday) at the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association meeting.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room at Work, Inc., 3 Arlington St.

Nolan will discuss the DPW's solid waste, yard waste and recycling programs.

A total of 90 students participated in the Norfolk County District Attorney's two-week DARE summer program held recently at Pageant Field.

Participants hailed from Quincy, Braintree, Hollbrook, Randolph, and Avon and were joined by 18 peer leaders from high schools in each community. DARE officers were present each day along with Assistant Director Laurie Higgins.

The purpose of the summer program was to reinforce the DARE curriculum taught by the officers who not only promote a positive influence during the school year but also educate students about the dangers of drug abuse, tobacco, alcohol abuse, and violence in society.

Project Director Sandy Sullivan arranged for a variety of speakers and programs, including: a performance by a professional group on bullying; a substance abuse program; an appearance by motivational speaker Wayne Soares from ESPN; a canine unit demonstration by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department; a health information session with Dr. Fitzgerald from the emergency room of South Shore Hospital; and a presentation by the Tobacco Control Program. The group also spent a day at George's Island and the Omni Theater at the Museum of Science in Boston.

On the final day of the program, students performed skits and songs they had developed during the two weeks and both the program participants and their parents were entertained by a group from Braintree known as "Jada" and Massachusetts State Police Sgt. Daniel Clark, who donated his time to sing for the group.

Participants and family members enjoyed a cookout on the final day of the program.

JOHN GRAZIOSO, a member of the Quincy Police Department and a DARE officer for the city, serves hot dogs at a farewell barbeque for students who recently participated in the Norfolk County District Attorney's DARE summer program at Pageant Field. The two-week camp reinforced DARE messages about the dangers of drug abuse and violence in society.

Taxpayers Still Undecided On New Quincy High School

Members of the Quincy Taxpayers Association still haven't made up their minds whether or not a new Quincy High School is needed and where it should be built if it is deemed necessary.

The 38 members in a recent poll were asked if the new building was necessary, 42 per cent said they would need more information before making a judgement.

Twenty five per cent said it was a bad idea, 21 per cent said it might be a good idea, provided it was built someplace other than Faxon Field and 12.5 per cent thought Faxon Field was the ideal spot.

Those responding were almost unanimous (almost 96 per cent) in their feeling that city departments should have to justify their expenditures and staffing. The rest had no opinion.

Seventy nine per cent felt that, generally speaking, city employees' annual salaries should not increase more than the rate of inflation. Only 12.5 per cent disagreed, 8.33 per cent had no opinion.

Forty-two per cent said the commercial property tax classification should remain at the present 169 per cent next year; one-third thought it should be higher, 8.33 thought it should be lower; 16.67 per cent didn't know.

Alan H. Cousin, president of the QTA, said members were asked their opinion on how much municipal funding, ore or less, should go to police, fire, street and sidewalk repairs, education, children's activities and services for seniors.

"Not surprisingly, fully two-thirds said more money should be spent on street and sidewalk repairs," said Cousin.

"What did surprise me was that 48 per cent said they would need more information about police expenditures and 46 per cent said that about the Fire Department.

"And about 17 per cent said less money should be spent on education and fire, and 30 per cent said less should be spent on police."

"Thirty-five per cent said they didn't have enough information about the city's educational expenditures."

Respondents ranked their spending priorities like this: 1. Police, 2. Education, 3. Fire, 4. Streets and sidewalks, 5. Activities for children, 6. Services for seniors.

When members were asked to list their top three concerns, the area attracting most attention were city employees' salary and benefit increases, Education and lack of employment controls were tied for second place.

Cousin acknowledged that the survey was unscientific, but said it pointed up residents' need for more information in order to be sure they are getting their tax dollar's worth.

Richard Pierce Elected Chairman Of South Shore Mental Health

Richard Pierce has been elected to a one-year term as chairman of the South Shore Mental Health Board of Directors.

Other officers elected to single year terms are Wesley A. McClure, vice chairman; Harry Shulman, president; Stephen Wojcik, treasurer; Sandra Slavet, clerk.

Directors elected to three year terms include:

Thomas F. Collins, James F. Comerford, Paul G. Curtis,

Herbert D. Glanz, Leslie F. Leahy, Anna Marie McReynolds, Kevin Meskill, P. J. O'Sullivan, Nathan Nuel Rosenhek, George A. Rodriguez, Valeri J. Semensi, Helena Seymour, Ruth E. Walsh, Thomas L. Wesner and Laura A. Zirlo.

Connolly Endorsed By Three Congressman

Joseph Connolly of Weymouth, candidate for Norfolk County treasurer, announces he has received the endorsement of three congressmen.

The endorsements, he said, are those of William Delahunt, Stephen Lynch and James McGovern, and also Tom and Robert Moakley, brothers of the late Congressman Joe Moakley.

Connolly was a legislative aide to Congressman Moakley.

Delahunt said Connolly "has the integrity, experience, educational background and proven record of professionalism necessary to effectively represent the residents of Norfolk County."

Lynch said Connolly "demonstrates the best in public service as well as anyone. Without a doubt he has been one of the true leaders for the working families of Norfolk County in recent years."

5th Annual Walk Sept. 15

Business Community Rallies Support For Marie Curry Walk

The South Shore business community is rallying support for the fifth annual Marie Curry Walk to be held Sunday, Sept. 14.

The four-mile walk begins and ends at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park, Quincy, following a route largely along Quincy Shore Drive.

Event registration begins at 8 a.m. The walk steps off at 9:30 a.m.

To date, more than 40 area businesses have pledged their support to the walk. They include:

Boston Medical Center ($5,000); Commonwealth Building Inc. ($5,000); Jobfind.com ($5,000); Aslanis Seafood ($2,500); Citizens Bank ($2,500); Eastern Bank ($2,500); Select Energy ($2,000); The Boston Globe ($1,500).

Also, Fallon Ambulance ($1,500); Granite City Electric ($1,500); Medical Contracting Services ($1,500); South Shore Savings Bank ($1,500); State Street ($1,500); Hart Supply Company ($1,500); The Flatley Company ($1,000); and Sprague Energy ($1,000).

Many other community businesses and organizations have committed employee teams to the walk, including The Boston Globe, Quincy Municipal Credit Union, South Shore Savings Bank, and WORK, Inc.

Nearly 1,000 people are expected to participate on Sunday, Sept. 15.

"The business community has been a central part of this important fund-raiser ever since we began walking five years ago," said Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Walk Committee member. "Giving support to the Marie Curry Walk is part of our teamwork ethic."

Following the walk, the "Images of Honor and Memory" will take place at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

Many area residents, hit hard by economic woes, may not have health insurance or adequate coverage to cover the cost of screening mammograms, according to walk organizers.

Funds from the walk will insure access to these annual radiological exams, part of the American Cancer Society's (ACS) recommendation for the early detection of breast cancer.

The walk was established by Robert "Bob" Curry, owner of the Curry Ace Hardware Stores in West Quincy and East Braintree, to honor the memory of his late wife, Marie A. Curry, who lost her battle with breast cancer in 1995. The walk also supports women in need throughout the South Shore.

To date, the walk, which is sponsored by the Quincy Medical Center and the Mayor's Commission on Women, has raised more than $500,000.

Early detection of breast cancer provides a greater chance of survival and more treatment options for patients, according to ACS. Uninsured women are more likely to be diagnosed at a later stage of breast cancer than privately insured women and death rates among this group are 40 to 60 percent higher than among privately insured breast cancer patients, according to the Kaiser Commission on Medicaid and the Uninsured.

Many business sponsorships levels are still available, and teams of any size are welcome. Call 617-376-5493 or visit www.quincymc.org for more information about sponsorship opportunities or forming a team.

Donations may be sent to the Marie A. Curry Fund, c/o Quincy Medical Center Foundation, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, MA 02169. Walk pledge sheets and "Images of Honor and Memory" order forms are available at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy; Curry Hardware, 370 Copeland St., Quincy; the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, 1416 Hancock

St., Quincy Center; and at other area locations.

This year's walk will culminate with a special post-event celebration, including a striking visual tribute, "Images of Honor and Memory." The tribute, a dramatic path of pink and white sand-filled containers, will represent the impact breast cancer has had on individuals and families living on the South Shore by honoring cancer survivors and those who have lost their battle with the disease. Each bag will be inscribed with the name of the person being honored or remembered.

QUINCY MAYOR William J. Phelan (right) was recently named honorary chairman of the fifth annual Marie Curry Walk to be held Sunday, Sept. 15. With the mayor are Robert "Bob" Curry, chairman of the Quincy Medical Center Board of Directors; and QMC President and CEO Christine Schuster. Bob Curry established the walk to honor his late wife, Marie A. Curry, who lost her life to breast cancer in 1995. The walk has grown into a community-wide fundraising event, raising more than $500,000 to provide cancer screenings to uninsured and underinsured women. Each year, the Curry family serves as co-chairmen of the walk which is organized by the Quincy Medical Center and the Mayor's Commission on Women.

Fair Housing Workshop Sept. 26 At Weymouth Police Station

The Fair Housing Consortium, in collaboration with the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors, will sponsor a Fair Housing/Section 8 Rental Voucher Program Workshop for real estate professionals and members of the public.

The free workshop will be held Thursday, Sept. 26, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the training room at the Town of Weymouth Police Station, 140 Winter St., Weymouth.

The Fair Housing Consortium is made up of three communities: Quincy, Weymouth, and Braintree, which work together to share fair housing information, co-sponsor events for the public and educate residents of the three communities on key fair housing issues.

A representative from the City of Quincy Housing Authority will discuss a range of critical issues related to Section 8 rental housing from both the perspective of the landlord and that of the tenant.

The workshop will help eligible renters take full advantage of Section 8 rental vouchers and help landlords efficiently meet the requirements associated with accepting Section 8 tenants.

Attorney James Cantwell will then explain a number of fundamental fair housing issues that real estate professionals must always consider during any transaction.

Inadvertently in an attempt to respect a buyer's or a seller's preferences, the real estate professional sometimes will violate fair housing laws. This workshop will train them to first recognize these easily avoid many of the pitfalls associated with current fair housing laws.

"This great, new workshop will both inform the public and provide an opportunity for real estate professionals to obtain continuing education credits at no charge, during the evening hours," said Debbie Kidd, program manager of Neighborhood Housing Services and co-chair of the Weymouth Fair Housing Committee.

For more information about the Fair Housing/Section 8 Workshop, call Kidd at 617-770-2227, ext. 24.

Financial Fundamentals

Tips For The Homebuyer

(NAPS) — Record low mortgage rates continue to keep the housing market hot. But for prospective homebuyers contemplating building or purchasing a new home, the process can be daunting.

Builder, author and Today show correspondent, Lou "Mr. Fix-It" Manfredini, says it's easy when homebuyers arm themselves with a simple checklist of spots to look to assure they're looking past model-home frills to find real value hidden underneath the showy finishes.

"For most people, a new home is not only their most important purchase, but also their most important financial investment," Manfredini says. "Homebuyers should make their purchase decision based on fundamentals because the foundation and framing are forever."

To help homeowners make the right decision, Manfredini has developed a booklet of 10 tips for touring new homes. Among his top items are:

Start With A Solid Foundation: "The foundation is the rock on which your home is built — it may even provide the walls of a future living area," Manfredini says. "Make a visual check to see that walls and floors are true and straight, with no waves. Ask the developer about waterproofing, drainage tiles and backfill — elements that keep the foundation dry."

Ensure A Strong Framework: "Framing homes with wood is recommended for unsurpassed strength, durability, affordability and flexibility, and for wood's environmental edge compared to other materials," Manfredini says. "Wood is the only renewable and sustainable building material, and manufacturing wood uses less energy and produces far fewer greenhouse emissions than manufacturing steel or concrete. It's also a superior sound-proofing material."

Ask About Energy Efficiency: "Ask developers about any special energy-saving measures," Manfredini says. "If they're building with wood, you're ahead of the game — wood is the best natural insulator against cold and heat, which can actually help keep utility bills in check. Radiant barrier panels reduce attic temperatures by as much as 30 degrees thereby significantly lowering air-conditioning costs."

Look Behind Window Treatments: "Energy-efficient thermal pane windows drastically reduce energy bills," Manfredini says. "As an insulator against heat and cold, solid wood windows will have less draft around the window edges. Recent studies also show that wood windows consume less energy and generate about half as much waste as vinyl in comparative life cycles from manufacturing through their use in a home.

"Insulated glass is usually standard, but upgrading to low E glass can help reduce UV rays and increase the energy efficiency of your new home. Heat mirror glass is an even better idea."

Walk About: "Floors are the most heavily used surface in a house," Manfredini says. "Hardwood flooring is not only durable, but an elegant way to add value and beauty to your home. And in five to seven years if the floor needs maintenance, it can be refinished for around $2 per square foot — about a quarter of the cost of replacing carpet or other flooring options. An added benefit of hardwood flooring is that those with allergies should suffer less because, unlike carpeting, wood does not trap mold spores and dust that cause many household allergies."

To obtain a free copy of Manfredini's Home, New Home: Touring New Homes—10 Tips to Smarter Touring or for more information and tips for new homebuyers, visit the special Lou Manfredini section of www.bconstructive.com or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Home New Home, c/o Wood Promotion Network, 676 North St., Clair, Chicago, IL 60611.

On May 15th, Jack Shaddock returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Century 21 Annex Realty Hosts 'Summer Splash' Celebration

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., 49 Beale St., Quincy, recently hosted its first "Summer Splash" celebration at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy. "Summer Splash" was created as a way to bring together Century 21 Annex's Realtors, co-brokers and business associates, as well as local officials, for an evening of summer fun.

Rain showers did not deter this group from having a great time, as 70 attendees enjoyed a barbecue dinner with dessert and later danced under the stars on the banks of the Neponset River.

Bellotti Endorses Koch For County Treasurer

Thomas P. Koch, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County treasurer, has received the endorsement of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

In announcing his endorsement, Bellotti cited Koch's experience in government finance.

Koch served 10 years as a member of the Norfolk County Financial Advisory Board before stepping down earlier this year to run for treasurer. Koch currently serves as the executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"Tom Koch is the only candidate for county treasurer with proven county financial experience," said Bellotti. "But more importantly, he has an unsurpassed reputation of honesty. I have known Tom for many, years and his reputation is beyond reproach."

Bellotti, who as sheriff is responsible for a budget of approximately $26 million, pointed out that while the funds for county corrections come from many sources, the county treasurer is responsible for the accounting of the funds.

"The success of county corrections depends a great deal on how it funds are managed," said Bellotti. "The treasurer plays a key role in this and Tom has proven time and again that he has the ability and integrity needed to do the job."

County Treasurer ★ Democrat

Solid Experience. TOM KOCH, of course.

Tom Koch knows how to manage Norfolk County finances. He's been watching over county monies for a decade as a Norfolk County Financial Advisory Board member.

William F. Degan Memorial Road Race Sunday

The annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 8, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

This marks the 10th anniversary of the event, which includes a 10K and 5K race and a children's run.

The race commemorates the life and career of former Massachusetts Deputy Marshal William F. Degan, who was killed in the line of duty in August 1992 during a standoff in Ruby Ridge, Idaho. The Quincy native earned numerous awards during his career, including the prestigious Attorney General's Award for Excellence in Law Enforcement.

"The race is a wonderful tribute to Bill's memory," said Bill Graney, a member of the Degan Road Race Committee. "We began this event in 1992 with 218 runners and now that number is in the thousands."

All proceeds from the event are donated to local charities, foundations and community projects. Approximately $130,000 has been donated thus far.

The flat, fast course draws some of New England's top runners, as well as local and state law enforcement officers, U.S. marshals and other federal agents.

A contingent of U.S. Marines also pay tribute to Degan's service as a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves by running together in military formation.

The festivities kick off at 9:15 a.m. with the children's race. The 10K race starts at 10 a.m., immediately followed by the 5K run and walk. Both races begin on Merrymount Parkway and finish in the stadium.

Prizes are awarded to the top three finishers in eight different age divisions, as well as law enforcement and wheelchair divisions.

In addition to the races, family events include pony rides, clowns, face painting and music. There will also be a NASCAR racing car on display in the stadium brought in by New England Dodge Dealers, a major sponsor of the race along with Citizens Bank.

Refreshments include free fruit drinks, bottled water and Dunkin' Donuts products before the race, as well as spaghetti, hot dogs, Hoodice cream and other foods after the race.

Resignation for the 10K and 5K race is $15. To register or for more information call 617-576-9860 or visit www.deganroadrace.com.

MONTCLAIR PLAYGROUND won the Quincy Recreation Department's recent annual Arts and Crafts Display at City Hall Plaza with its creation of "Oscar the Grouch."

SQUANTUM PLAYGROUND finished runner-up in the annual Arts and Crafts Display at City Hall Plaza with its creation of "Sponge Bob Square Pants."

'Oscar The Grouch' Top Playground Art Project

With over 500 ballots cast and one of the closest contests in many years, the winner of the Quincy Recreation Department's recent annual Arts and Crafts Display is "Oscar the Grouch" by Montclair Playground.

In all, 19 playgrounds created arts and crafts projects that were on display for two days of voting at City Hall Plaza. The event was organized and supervised by arts and crafts specialists Elizabeth Ryan, Anne Shields and Jen Conley.

"Oscar" edged Squantum Playground's real sponge creation of "Sponge Bob Square Pants," while O'Rourke Playground's creation of "Wendy's Meal" finished third, less than 20 votes out of first place.

"This is an event that the public enjoys, and an excellent way to demonstrate that the supervised playgrounds do more activities than sports," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "The children and leaders are to be commended for the talent they showed in this year's event."

The leaders at Montclair were Billy O'Toole and Allison Lacey and the youth that worked on "Oscar" were Dylan Rocha, Brendan Nealon, Josh Nealon, Joe Callahan, Ashley Nealon and Michael LeBlanc.

OIL TO BURN

If your vehicle is burning oil, it may be caused by a pressurized crankcase (oil pan), due to a clogged PCV valve or breather system. To see how this happens, visualize your vehicle's engine as a giant pump that needs to breathe. The Positive Crankcase Ventilation (PCV) system accomplishes this breathing by allowing the engine to exhaust the excess pressure build-up, which is a natural phenomenon of the internal combustion engine. As a by-product, carbon can build up in the PCV system, thereby clogging the breathing passages. This blockage, in turn, pressurizes the oil pan, causing oil to be pushed up into the fuel delivery system, where it is fed into the engine and burned. This condition must be remedied. Smoke coming out of your exhaust pipe or from your engine? Rely on our ASE Certified professional service technicians and let us check it out. To help you do this, the team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is available at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: An engine may also burn due to bad valve seals, worn valve guides, or blow-by from worn piston rings.

Milton Hospital Celebrates Multi-Million Dollar Renovation

RICHARD WARD, chairman of the Milton Hospital Board of Directors, cuts the ribbon to unveil the renovated second and third floors of the north wing of Milton Hospital with clinical leader Janice Weafer as staff look on during a recent open house. The $3.5 million project renovated the two main inpatient care units including all patient rooms, nursing stations and all common areas.

GEORGE GEARY (right), president of Milton Hospital, expresses thanks to Kenneth Harris, M.D. (left), president of the medical staff, and Richard Ward, chairman of the Board, for their support and patient during the renovation project which began last December. After nearly nine months of construction, aesthetic improvements include new charting areas, handicap showers and 21 private rooms, an increase from 8. Improvements were also made to electrical, medical gas, sprinkler, fire protection and heating, ventilating and air-conditioning systems.

Dealing With Back-To-School, Work Stress

Watching the summer days pass isn't easy. Very shortly, students will head back to school, while other children are entering school for the first time. As parents scramble to buy those back-to-school needs, the pressure rises.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' (BCBSMA) Prevention and Wellness Program suggests these strategies to manage the stress of back-to-school and summer-to-fall transition.

Stress is the way our bodies react physically and emotionally to any change whether it's good, bad, real or imagined. A small amount of stress is normal. However, if increased and maintained for long periods, stress can overburden the body's system, causing a breakdown.

Sometimes there are situations we can't fix overnight. It's a process. When you talk with a counselor, a family member or close friend, sometimes it just helps to "release yourself." Your body often will alert you that your stress is too high. By being aware of and acknowledging your symptoms of stress, you have already begun your process.

Symptoms

Increased heart rate or rapid breathing, feeling overwhelmed by all the things you do, difficulty sleeping, headache, grinding teeth, stomach discomfort, tense muscles, anxious, confused or forgetful.

Strategies for stress management Modify your environment. Get rid of or manage your exposure to things that cause stress.

Escape for a little while. Temporarily leaving a situation helps create new attitudes. Go to a movie, read a book, take a mini-vacation.

Practice relaxation exercises daily. Meditate, try deep breathing and visualization.

Budget your time. Make a to-do-list. Set priorities, allow yourself more time or avoid committing yourself to doing too much.

Balance work or school with play. These activities relax your mind and offer relief from life's big and little worries.

Take a warm shower or bath. Soothes your nerves and provides relaxation for your muscles.

These suggestions were adapted by BCBSMA, and taken from Self Care: Your Family Guide to Symptoms and How to Treat Them by Don R. Powell, Ph.D., and the American Institute for Preventive Medicine (Peoples Medical Society) available in bookstores.

For more information about the Prevention and Wellness program, call 1-800-262-BLUE.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME

If you have a front tooth with a small defect, such as a slight chip or worn edge, the dentist may be able to fix the problem using a procedure known as tooth contouring and reshaping. This involves changing the size or shape of the problem tooth and bringing it back in alignment with the rest of the tooth. The procedure typically entails one office visit, during which the dentist uses various tools to carefully polish small areas of the surface enamel to give the tooth a more attractive shape. The edges of the newly reshaped tooth are then smoothed. After contouring, the teeth are more uniform in shape and size, making eye-catching imperfections less apparent.

Keep in mind that tooth contouring and reshaping is a procedure for minor imperfections. Dentists often need to combine this procedure to achieve an optimum result. Please feel free to discuss your dental concerns with us. We stress preventive dentistry and recommend regular dental check-ups for all family members. We're located at 44 Greenleaf St., Quincy. Come in and see what a difference we can make in your smile - and what a difference your smile can make in your life. We welcome your call at (617) 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth contouring and reshaping is most often performed on the upper central, lateral, and canine teeth.

Sept. 11 Memorial Service At United First Parish

United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center, invites the public to a memorial service Wednesday, Sept. 11 at noon to commemorate the anniversary of last year's tragedies.

The one-hour service will include music, meditation and words from Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett.

The church has hearing assistance devices and large-print hymnals.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Rev. M. Alicia Corea will preach at the 9:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

Music by the choir will be under the direction of organist Lois Zulaw.

Sunday is also the start of Sunday school at 9:30 a.m. There will be an indoor carnival and sign-up for classes.

Gloria Brummitt, Priscilla Last, and Carrie McLean will be there to greet children and their parents.

This year's Sunday School theme is "Jesus, The Story Teller."

The Church Council will meet Monday, Sept. 9 at 7:30 p.m. Officers of the church, chairmen of the boards and committees, delegates, and representatives of groups meeting in the church are urged to attend.

On Tuesday and Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., the Preschool Playground will be under the direction of Bette Olson.

Children of the church and community, accompanied by an adult, are welcome.

United First Parish

The Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Ph.D., will lead the first service of the new church year Sunday, Sept. 8 at 10:30 a.m. at United First Parish Church (Unitarian), 1306 Hancock St., across from Quincy City Hall.

The service will be followed by a coffee hour in the Parish Hall.

Under the supervision of the new Director of Religious Education, Laurie Walsh, classes are offered for children from preschool through high school. Child care is available.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

In Memory of those whose spirit shines in the darkness
September 11, 2001

God Bless America

While the storm clouds gather far across the sea,
Let us swear allegiance to the land that's free,
Let us be grateful for the land so fair,
As we raise our voices in solemn prayer:

God Bless America
Land that I love

Stand beside here, and guide her
Thru the night with the light from above,
From the mountains, to the prairies,
To the oceans, white with foam

God Bless America
My home sweet home,
God Bless America
My home sweet home,

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might not like the sudden setback in your plans. But keep that headstrong Arian temperament in check and wait for explanations. Things will begin to clear up by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Enjoy the respite from your recent hectic schedule. But be ready to plunge into a new round of social activities by the 5th. A new contact holds much potential for the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A trusted colleague has news that could change your perception of a current workplace situation. What had seemed unfair might prove to be highly favorable after all.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You still need to watch what you say and how you say it. What you assert as honesty, others might perceive as Crabbiness. Be patient. This difficult period clears up by the 8th.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Royalties needs time away from the limelight to catch up on things, from tidying your desk to making those calls you've put off. You're back in the center of things by the 8th.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Honesty is the best policy, of course. But you'll do better at achieving your goals if you can be less aggressive and more circumspect in how you phrase your comments.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to maintain your balance in confusing situations continues to work for you. Stay on the steady course, one step at a time. The weekend shows improvement.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your indecisiveness could simply be your keen Scorpion sense warning you to be wary of making a commitment. Take this time to do a more thorough investigation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good news: New information comes your way to help you make a more informed decision on how to deal with the opportunity that has opened up for you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good time to reinforce your self-confidence by acknowledging your good qualities to yourself. A lull in your social life ends by the 8th. Have fun.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to let those recently pent-up emotions flow more freely. Why not start by letting the people you care for know how you really feel about them.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Resist offers, no matter how well-intentioned, to help with a personal decision. Only you know what must be done, and you have the emotional strength to follow through.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a talent for getting things done. You also have a gift for bringing people together in both personal and professional relationships.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER recently donated a former patient transportation van to the Quincy Animal Shelter for use as a much-needed mobile veterinary clinic serving Quincy. The van was previously used to transport QMC's Partial Hospitalization Program patients to and from the medical center. QMC received a donation of two new patient transportation vans earlier this year, to replace the one donated to the animal shelter. Above, Kit Burke, Quincy Animal Shelter president, with Sandra Morse, shelter manager, and Willow, an animal shelter resident who also happens to be up for adoption.

Wal-Mart Sept. 11 Ceremony

In a remembrance of Sept. 11, and commemorating the American dream of "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness," Wal-Mart will present the American flag to the USS Salem, along with the lowering of the flag at half staff.

The event will be held at 7:30 a.m. Sept. 11 at Wal-Mart, 301 Falls Blvd., Quincy.

Wal-Mart will be joined by several local dignitaries and honored veterans along with other military personnel.

Among those planning to attend are: Mayor William Phelan, State Rep. Ron Mariano and Ward 2 Councilor Dan Raymond.

The event will begin at 7:30 a.m. with a blessing by Rev. Vincent Doolan of St. Joseph's Church.

At 7:45 a.m. there will be a cadence of Honor Guard.

At 8 a.m. the presentation of the flag and the Star Spangled Banner sung by Hayden Salazar. At 8:10 a.m. Paul Valadez, Wal-Mart store manager will introduce the speakers.

At 8:46 a.m. there will be a moment of silence and then the lowering of the flag with Hayden Salazar singing "God Bless America."

A complimentary continental breakfast will be served following the ceremony.

Teachers Start Year With New Contract

Middle School.

"Our bylaws require that we give the membership 10 days to study the agreement before they vote on ratification," he said. "The bylaws also require a two-thirds vote."

Members of the union met Tuesday morning at 6:30 a.m. at the George F. Bryant VFW Post on Board Street to hear the details of the agreement.

Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the School Committee which met last night (Wednesday), said a special meeting probably will be called to consider ratification.

"After negotiations were completed," said Phelan, "both sides congratulated each other. We had common goals. We just needed a method of carrying them out. It is a fair contract to both sides."

Phillips described the contract as "backloaded," meaning that the largest teacher raises will come in the latter stages of the agreement, which could cause a problem for the union.

"Those teachers who plan to retire soon are not pleased with the contract," said Phillips. "I hope it will pass the membership but I can't say so confidently."

The agreement actually involves two contracts, since the state allows only those up to three years.

The first contract is for one year, "retroactive" to Sept. 1, 2002. The second takes effect for three years beginning Sept. 1, 2003.

"That was settled very early in the negotiations," said Phillips. "We've done it before."

Phillips said the "gag order" agreed on by both sides precluded him from disclosing the new pay scales but under the old contract, Quincy teachers start at $29,291 a year. A veteran teacher with a master's degree is paid $59,169.

Both Phelan and Phillips agreed that the new pact was negotiated with the city's precarious financial position in mind.

"We tried to respond to the city's demonstrated financial problems," said Phillips. "It was done in a way that helps both of us."

"It's not an easy year financially for the city," said Phelan. "I want to thank the teachers for understanding that. Both sides worked for the common good."

"Both side understood that they could trust one another on the financial situation. I'd like to see teachers paid at a higher rate. We're beginning to pay teachers what they're worth. This is a start."

"This is a positive beginning for the school year."

Dr. Melody Eckardt Joins South Shore Hospital

South Shore Hospital has appointed Quincy resident Melody Eckardt, MD, board-eligible in obstetrics and gynecology, to its active medical staff.

Dr. Eckardt received her medical degree from Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and completed her residency training in obstetrics and gynecology at Tufts University's Affiliated Residency Training Program.

She also served as an international resident specializing in obstetrics and gynecology at Christian Fellowship Hospital in Tamil Nadu, India, and completed a clinical experience at the Women's Christian Hospital in Multan, Pakistan.

Dr. Eckardt has joined Crown Ob/Gyn, with offices in Quincy, Brockton and Pembroke.

South Shore Hospital has again earned maximum, three-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations. Call 1-800-325-5454 for a physician referral.

4-Way Governor's Race, 4 Quincy Candidates In Contested Fights

40% Voter Turnout Forecast For Election

City Clerk Joseph Shea is forecasting a 40 percent voter turnout here in next Tuesday's state primary elections.

He is basing his prediction mainly on two sets of "fours":

- The four Democratic candidates and their heated campaign for their party's nomination for governor.

- The four Quincy names on the Democratic ballot involved in three spirited contests — one statewide, and two county.

"I think there is enough interest there to bring out 40 percent of the voters," Shea said. "It might be a little under."

Most of the action is on the Democratic ballot with only two contests on the Republican and none on the Libertarian and Green Party ballots.

Quincy's current voter registration is 52,120 — down 901 from last year.

The four-way race for the Democratic nomination for governor was coming down to the wire this week with state Treasurer Shannon P. O'Brien and former U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert B. Reich running close, according to polls.

Behind them were state Senate President Thomas F. Birmingham and former state Senator Warren E. Tolman.

Former Democratic chairman Steven Grossman's name is still on the ballot although he dropped out of the race but not in time to have his name removed.

A three-candidate fight for the lieutenant governor nomination has a share in the top billing. The three candidates are Christopher F. Gabrieli, Lois G. Pines and John P. Slattery.

Mitt Romney has no opposition for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. But Kerry Murphy Healey, his choice as his lieutenant governor running mate, is challenged by Jim Rappaport.

The only other Republican contest is between Daniel A. Grabauskas and Bruce A. Herzfelder for the state treasurer

Parents Irrate At Route Cuts Fees Among Options For School Buses

By TOM HENSHAW

The School Committee's budget subcommittee was scheduled to meet yesterday (Wednesday) ready to face the wrath of parents irate over the new bus schedules that left more elementary school youngsters walking to school.

The meeting was slated for 3 p.m. in the Nathaniel Hunting Room in the Administrative Annex, next to the Superintendent's Office at 70 Coddington St.

The subcommittee, said Chairwoman Jo-Ann Bragg, was even planning to discuss a plan that was considered and rejected last June that parents pay a fee to have their children, Kindergarten through Grade 5, bused like last year.

"We figured it would have cost $550 per student just to break even," said Bragg. "It was too much to ask a family to pay. But a lot of parents have contacted me to suggest they would rather pay a fee and have their children bused."

Last year, students K-5 who lived more than a half mile from their schools were eligible for bus service. This year, in order to save money in a tight budget year, the limit is three-quarters of a mile. State law sets the limit at two miles.

"Moving the limit to three-quarters of a mile resulted in a savings of $647,000," said Bragg. "Now we own all 10 of our buses. Last year we had to lease seven. Now we don't have to lease buses any more."

Parents protests of the new busing schedules received support from the Teamsters Union Local 122, which dispatched members to the schools Monday and Tuesday to urge parents to contact Bragg and give their opinions of transportation budget cuts.

The Teamsters Local represents the school bus drivers and monitors in Quincy.

Local President Paul Cannon said the union was reluctant to urge calls to the home of an elected official but School Committee members "have been insulated from parents' reaction. The issue is much too important to let that situation continue."

"Thus far," said the Teamsters in a news release, "the committee has ignored safety in their deliberations. To a parent, school curriculum (or anything else in life) is

McCauley Asks Review Of Early Retirement Plan

City Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley wants to know if the Early Retirement Program is really worth it to the city of Quincy.

He proposed and the City Council passed a resolution requesting the City Auditor and the executive director of the City Retirement Board to prepare a report on its financial effects.

"Early retirement goals are basically to prevent layoffs of city employees as well as reducing personnel costs," said McCauley.

Since the program went into effect at the end of the last fiscal year, June 30, about 100 city workers have taken advantage of its provisions.

"The key to the success of the program is how many of the 100 position remain unfilled," said McCauley.

He asked that the report be completed by the end of the year.

8 Suspended Without Pay, Benefits Police Suspensions 'Clear Change In Policy' Says Phelan

The suspensions of eight police officers for an incident involving drinking and the firing of service revolvers at the Waterworks nightclub at Marina Bay is "a clear change in policy," according to Mayor William Phelan. "I intend to support my department heads in their decisions on discipline," said Phelan. "You saw it in this instance. The city of Quincy deserves the highest standards in their police."

WILLIAM PHELAN

"Rather than quickly and harshly, I think we handled the problem sternly but measuredly."

"The officers involved have to, and do now understand, that when they put the uniforms on they represent every citizen in the city and their actions are going to be held to the highest standards."

In the incident at the Waterworks, following a party for the New England Patriots on June 9-10, the offending officers were suspended for terms up to 90 days, forbidden to accept alcohol details for one year and ordered to undergo alcohol abuse evaluation.

Assistant City Solicitor Thomas Largey said the suspensions were to begin no later than seven days of the Sept. 6 decision by the Mayor and Acting Police Chief William Falco.

"It's a matter of adjusting schedules to cover slots," said Largey. "We hope we don't have to utilize overtime but we will if we have to. We consider the offense of such magnitude that it's more important to serve the suspension immediately than to save money."

Phelan said all eight officers admitted their roles in the incident and agreed to waive their right of appeal. They will receive no pay or benefits during the suspensions but will be allowed to continue their health coverage at their own expense.

The suspended officers include:

Stephen M. Burgio, 90 days.

William F. Wright, 85 days.

Richard Gambino, 80 days.

Daniel Flaherty, 60 days with a 30-day suspension to follow if he violates police rules within the next year.

Sean F. Duggan, 45 days with a 30-day suspension to follow if he violates police rules within the next year.

Karyn L. Barkas, 30 days with a 60-day suspension to follow if she violates police rules within the next year.

Michael J. Cronin, 30 days.

Timothy B. Kaes, 15 days with a 30-day suspension to follow if he violates police rules within the next year.

Remembering Naval Personnel

Lost In Pentagon Attack

USS Quincy Anchor Dedicated At Sept. 11 Memorial Tribute

By LANCE MORGANELLI

The anchor from the USS Quincy was dedicated Saturday at the Quincy Naval Reserve Center in tribute to the naval personnel who lost their lives during the Sept. 11, 2001 attack at the Pentagon.

The heavy cruiser, which was built by Bethlehem Steel Company at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, was originally named St. Paul. It was renamed Quincy Oct. 16, 1942 to perpetuate that name of the USS Quincy which was sunk during the battle of Savo Island, Aug. 9, 1942.

The USS Quincy was the first ship engaged in battle during the Normandy invasion at Utah beach June 6, 1944, and carried President Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Malta in February, 1945 to meet Winston Churchill and Sir Anthony Eden on board. Roosevelt continued on the ship to the Big Three Conference in Yalta and celebrated his 63rd birthday on his way back to the United States.

The anchor has since been lying at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station where in recent months the Seabee construction personnel restored the condition, according to Commander Barry Klaver who orchestrated the retrieval and presentation of the anchor.

"It was definitely a worthy cause," said Klaver, who received the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Award.

"It was an honor to be involved in this project, and that by itself was my reward," said Klaver, who first praised the selfless and generous efforts of the Seabee construction personnel.

"All work stopped – everyone became consumed by the event," Commander Michael Sumrall recalled the scene in the Naval Reserve Center office the morning of Sept. 11.

"This moment in history will be remembered simply by the date in which it occurred.

"All of us will remember with unique clarity personal details about Sept. 11 because each of us has a personal connection to that day. This tragedy immediately became everyone's business.

"And finally, of course, we're all connected to this tragedy because we're all Americans and it happened here in our homeland."

Tony Siciliano, Braintree Emergency Management Agency deputy department director, gave his experiences of the Sept. 11 attacks.

"I felt so sad when my mom passed away... when I looked down and they were lowering her casket into the ground – and when I looked off the platform [of the World Trade Center's visitors site] I felt the same way [thinking] of all those souls and all those people," said Siciliano. "It's just heart breaking."

Scheele Elected License Board Vice-Chairman

The License Board Tuesday elected Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele vice chairman of the board.

He replaces former Fire Chief Thomas Gorman who served as vice chairman from 1996 until his retirement in July.

Before the nominations,

Chairman Joseph Shea told the board, which has been in existence since 1920, that he would be "willing to step aside" as chairman noting the job takes "lots and lots of time and attention."

Shea saluted all members present and past.

Acting Police Commissioner William Falco nominated Scheele, seconded by acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell.

Falco said Scheele was "open minded to new ideas and performs in a professional manner."

The other board member is Walter White, director of inspectional services.

They used to make fun of people who didn't have money in the stock market.

Not anymore!

Not long ago, some people thought having a Certificate or Passbook Savings Account was hopelessly old-fashioned. Today those former "stock market wizards" – the ones who couldn't talk about anything else! – have developed a new appreciation for the safety insured bank accounts provide. There's nothing like the peace of mind that comes with having money in the bank. And that's a fact that will still be true even when the market starts going up. Come see us today for an FDIC-insured investment that will give you your money back plus interest.

A Day To Be Thankful

For Dave and Alicia Coletti of Merrymount, Wednesday was a day to be thankful.

Thankful that a year ago — Sept. 11 — they got that telephone call from their daughter, Gina, telling them, "I'm all right."

The call came shortly after the two airline jets hijacked out of Boston by terrorists slammed into the twin World Trade Center towers in New York City, toppling them and taking the lives of 2,823. And changed our world.

Gina Coletti was working in the office of the investment firm of Goldman and Sachs in a nearby building.

She was evacuated with the others in that building and began picking her way through the heavy smoke, confusion and utter chaos toward her apartment some 200 blocks north. She walked a good part of the way but managed to get on a bus along the way.

She was one of the lucky ones. Fate had been with her earlier.

A week before, Goldman Sachs had decided not to move Gina's department into an available office space in the World Trade Center.

And a friend, Peter Donahue of New York who was an usher at her and George Lamides' wedding a year before, was also one of the lucky ones.

He had recently turned down a job with the New York Port Authority which would have put him in the Trade Center Sept. 11.

When Alicia Coletti first heard the news of the attack that morning her immediate reaction was: "Where's Gina? How close is she to the World Trade Center? Is she safe?"

Which was the exact same reaction of Gina's three brothers, Paul and David of Quincy and Carroll of Milton.

They quickly called home and were relieved to hear that Gina had phoned to say she was safe and not to worry.

"We were grateful," says Alicia. "But our hearts went out to those who were in the Trade Center and to their families. It was terrible."

Gina has since left Goldman Sachs and, like her husband, is now a teacher. She teaches computers in a parochial elementary school in East Harlem.

He is a fifth grade teacher in a school in the Bronx. And will be remembered at St. Ann's School here in Quincy where he taught the 2000-2001 school year.

The eventful year since Sept. 11 is ending on a happy note for Gina and George. Gina gave birth to their first child, Alicia Caterina, Aug. 6.

Grandma Alicia went down to New York to meet and get acquainted with her new granddaughter.

While there, she asked Gina if she would like to go to Ground Zero.

"No," Gina said. "I was there. I don't want to see it again."

But she did talk about that Sept. 11 morning when all hell broke loose, and she and a friend were making their way to safety.

"As we were leaving, we saw these firefighters coming toward us, heading to the burning Trade Center. My God, I thought, they're going to go in there."

NQHS Orientation Night For Freshmen Sept. 19

The North Quincy High School Counseling Center will hold an Orientation-Information Night for freshman students and parents will be held Thursday, Sept. 19 from 6:45 to 8 p.m. in the school's media center.

Topics include:

Adjusting to high school, counseling services, promotion-graduation requirements, absence and tardy policies, understanding report cards, levels, and activities.

Guest speaker will be Al Moscaritolo, LICSW.

GINA

"I never had so much respect for them and for the police who were there. We never realize how much they really mean to us until something like this happens."

She gave her three brothers those baseball caps with the now famous letters FDNY for Christmas.

Her admiration for what the firefighters and police did at the World Trade Center, and the resiliency of the people, are reasons that, though she has deep Quincy roots, she wants to live in New York.

She is now a proud member of "I Love New York."

LEO KELLY says "Don't believe it."

He means a report he says is floating around that he is going to run for city councillor at-large in next year's municipal election.

"Absolutely not true," he says. "I am going to run for the Ward 1 seat as I have said I would. Someone is trying to confuse things."

Kelly says he will be making an official announcement at the appropriate time but feels it is still too early.

He has bumper stickers but says it's also too early to put them in circulation.

Kelly, who was elected to the Ward 1 seat six times, is now chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

The seat will be vacated by current incumbent Greg Hanley who will not seek re-election. He has moved to Pembroke with his wife and children and is maintaining an apartment at 75 Palmer St. while finishing out his term.

A SPECIAL TRADITION started by the late George Parker 26 years ago is still going strong.

George, who owned the Yellow Cab Co., opened his heart in 1976 to youngsters afflicted with muscular dystrophy. And, his checkbook, too.

That year, The Quincy Sun became the Quincy-South Shore Pledge Center for the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon.

George came by with two $400 checks, one company, one personal. And for the next 10 years it became an annual ritual with George arriving with $800 to help put us over the top.

During those 10 years, the pledge center and committee raised over $1 million for Jerry's Kids, thanks to George and a lot of other nice people in Quincy and the South Shore.

Because of increasing limited space as The Sun expanded, the pledge center had to end after a 10-year run.

But for the next 12 years, George kept coming around Labor Day with $800 and in 1999, while not feeling well himself, he made it $1,000.

George died May 8, 2000 at age 65. His total donations at that time added up to $19,400.

But the tradition now continues in his memory. Four months after George's death two more Labor Day checks for $800 arrived at The Sun: a personal one for $500 from George's brother, Joseph, and the latter's wife, Joan; and a $300 Yellow Cab check from Wayne McCully, George's long-time friend and associate.

"We wanted to keep it going," Joe Parker said. "George would like that."

Last year, $800 more -- $500 from Joe and Joan and a $300 check from the Yellow Cab Co. signed by Wayne.

And this year, another $800. If our arithmetic is correct that runs the total up to $21,800.

And as Joe says, "George would like that."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN EARLY 1930's postcard view of Wollaston Beach and the Boulevard. On the right at the end of Davis Street the building shown housed many small shops of the sort that are no longer to be found along here. There were gift shops, a private beach house and luncheon counters. The building later became Kent's carpet store until it was destroyed by fire several years ago. Legendary weatherman Don (Dixon) Kent broadcast his first weather reports over WJDA from a shack on the roof of the building. The site is now known as Don Kent Park.

Low Turnout Seen For Primary Elections

City Clerk Donald P. Crane forecast a 30 percent turnout among Quincy's 45,000 registered voters for the Sept. 18 state primary election as candidates for various nominations swarmed over Quincy.

Edward J. McCormack, Jr., nephew of Rep. John McCormack (D-Boston) and president of the Boston City Council, attended a coffee hour at the home of Mrs. David J. Crowley in Houghs Neck on the trail of the Democratic nomination for attorney general.

A rally and reception was held at the Quincy Elks home for Governor's Councillor George A. Wells of Worcester, who was seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Meanwhile, a polling place in Ward 2, Precinct 1 was moved from the Washington School to the Fore River Club-house after School Supt. Paul Gossard complained that voters were interfering with classes.

CLASH OVER CITY DUMP

City Councilwoman Edna B. Austin and Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash clashed over the city dump, or more specifically what Dr. Ash felt was the lack of attention the facility received over the city.

"The trouble is," said Dr. Ash, "that no one cares about the dump problem unless they live near one -- or unless there is an emergency. Then they want to know why we haven't done anything."

Retorted Mrs. Austin: "As a matter of fact, the City Council has spent more time in studying and investigating the dump problem during the past six years than it has on any other municipal problem except the hospital addition."

"It would be far more to the point if Dr. Ash would spend more time trying to educate the people not to mix garbage and other organic matter with their rubbish than uttering such implied criticism of the council."

READERS FORUM

Sept. 11 Meditations

Who of a sound mind could ever suggest today that the families of the victims of Sept. 11 and the families of the terrorists should embrace?

Who of a sound mind could ever suggest today that the monument to the victims of Sept. 11 should be also a monument to the terrorists? Nelson A. Rockefeller, the governor of New York at the time when he contemplated running for Presidency, said: "Because we live in the most tumultuous times of human history, there is no doubt that we must feverishly amass weapons of mass destruction and at the same time fervently pray never to use them."

This statement expresses responsible patriotism of a great American leader, but because it has a universal appeal for every leader of every nation on earth. It has also equal attraction and validity today both for President George W. Bush and for President Saddam Hussein.

Nobody could disagree that every single American owes his president unswerving loyalty and unswerving support. It does not mean to support the president whatever he wants to do, but rather to help him make the right decision for America and for every other country on earth. Such a decision saturated with pan-human concern can rightly be expected from President Bush, who during his presidential campaign said it would be Jesus Christ who would be his guide in national and international politics.

But we might ask -- will it be possible for this generation, for this most erring and deluded generation to come to Christ? This can only happen if the leaders of the Western civilization would accept Christ? And wickedness will not exist among people, nor wars between the nations, but peace of Christ, which passes all understanding.

Finally, it seems to me to be absolutely necessary, at this critical time in human history, when there is a danger for the world to start bellum omnium contra omnes -- the war of all against all -- to accept the advice given to Rudolph Giuliani by the Arab Prince Alwaleed bin Talal, when he offered $10 million to aid the families of the victims of the World Trade Center bombings. His advice was to re-examine policies in the Middle East, not to go to war, but rather to examine the reasons that led to such a tragedy.

September The Eleventh

Who can begin to describe

The horror of that hell

The day the World Trade Centers fell?

Thousands of Americans were lost that day

And those from other countries, too.

The reality of it all met with disbelief.

This sudden catastrophe,

This unthinkable horror and grief.

You may have heard some skeptics say,

"Where was God that awful day?"

Rest assured, God was there

Who else, but He, gave strength and courage

To each heroic man, woman and rescue team?

Yes, God was there, they weren't alone.

He, too, was sad to see each individual's pain,

Which He would use for their eternal gain.

God raised their souls and called them Home,

Out of their twisted steel and ashen graves.

Perhaps they heard our Father say,

"Come unto Me, fear not"

With Angels led thousands of souls

To Paradise that day.

Public Invited to Play Delegate Roles Sept. 15 Recreation of Constitution Convention At Adams Site

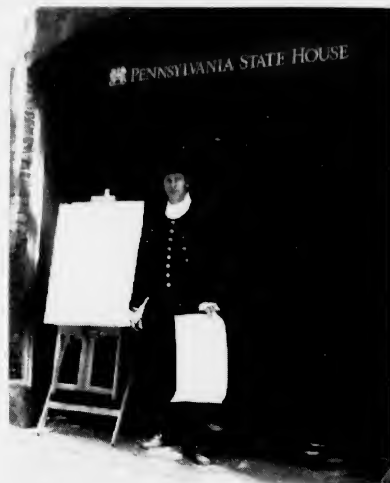

The public is invited by the Adams National Historical Park to play a role in the recreation of the passage of the United States Constitution.

The event will take place Sunday, Sept. 15 at 1 p.m. at the 1873 Carriage House on the grounds of the Adams Mansion, 135 Adams St., Quincy Center.

It will commemorate the passage of the Constitution by the Constitutional Convention Sept. 17, 1787.

Members of the audience will assume the roles of various delegates to the convention and will represent their state in a debate that will determine the fate of a nation. Led by George Washington (portrayed by a Park Ranger), the debate becomes heated as the time draws short before the final vote is called.

After the debate each delegate signs his or her name to the document, rings the Liberty Bell, receives a copy of the United States Constitution, and the Massachusetts Constitution to keep as a memento and a slice of

Wollaston Garden Club To Open 75th Year

The Wollaston Garden Club will meet Thursday, Sept. 19, at 11:45 a.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., to begin its 75th anniversary year.

The garden talk, "Something From Your Garden," will consist of an exhibit of flowers and vegetables from members' gardens or garden photos displayed on poster board.

Jane McNulty will host the meeting and Rachel Seminatore will design the flower arrangements. New members will be welcomed and a tea and social will be enjoyed.

The Wollaston Garden Club is led in this 75th anniversary year by Co-Presidents Jo Costello, Cynthia Antonopoulos and Ruth Griffin. Activities will include a special anniversary celebration in October.

The Garden Club meets monthly during the day on the third Thursday.

Visits to gardens and nurseries are scheduled throughout the year. Civic beautification projects are planned for Wollaston. Fall and spring plant sales are held, as is a December Greens Sale.

The evening division of the Garden Club will meet Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 7 p.m. The garden topic will be "Something From Your Garden." This group meets monthly on Wednesday evenings.

Both day and evening groups welcome new members. Those interested should call Jo Costello at 617-471-3669.

1,812 Youngsters Participate In Summer Reading At Library

A total of 1,812 children and their parents took part in some or all of the 49 programs offered by the Thomas Crane Public Library in the statewide summer reading program, Star Spangled Summer.

Of the total, 525 youngsters joined the summer reading club and 237 read or listened for at least three hours and received certificates of merit.

Certificates for school age children will be sent to their public, private or parochial schools for distribution. Preschoolers and their parents can pick up their certificates at the library any time before the end of September.

In addition to reading for their certificates, the youngsters added stars for additional hours read for a grand total of 3,702 hours — or 222,120 minutes or 154 1/2 days or 22 weeks. That's more than 4 1/2 months.

The program was supported by the Massachusetts Regional Library Systems and the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners with posters, bookmarks, reading logs and other materials.

Also support came from Bickford's Family Restaurants with free kids meals coupons for those who earned reading certificates; as well as the Massachusetts Cultural Council through the Quincy Arts Council.

John Adams Care Center Hosting A 'Health Breakfast'

John Adams Continuing Care Center will host a free "Healthy Breakfast" Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 10 a.m. at 211 Franklin St., South Quincy.

Siciliano took 40 Quincy members of Community Emergency Response Team volunteers to the World Trade Center site to help with the recovery efforts.

"It's the aftermath — it's now. What are we going to do now?" Siciliano said.

"The President of the United States made it very very clear in his state of the union address: the American people must get involved in this country. They must do things to help out and protect themselves."

Siciliano told about President Bush's request to have at least 400,000 Americans join the Ameri Corps Citizen Corps program in order to have the people of the U.S. trained in various capacities to defend themselves.

"Since 9-11 I've seen so much love. I've seen so much caring of people who have been helping each other to make good things happen to America," Siciliano said.

"By a team effort of caring and loving, this nation will be a greater place to be."

Later this month Siciliano and his crew, at the request of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, will go to Lowwoods, Conn. to train the Native Americans to defend themselves in times of local or national crisis.

"I'm very proud and pleased to be working with Tony as he brings expertise, help and experience to Brantree," said Bob Salvaggio, director of Brantree Emergency Management Agency.

Detective Frank Wolverton, former Marine sergeant and currently of the MBTA Police Academy, gave his commentary on the time since the attacks.

"I've been a police officer for 13 years and I've never witnessed such strong support of the job we do everyday," Wolverton said. "It's encouraging to drive around and see so many vehicles with American flags — on bridge overpasses, on houses and businesses."

Navy Chaplain Rev. George Hodgkins, during the anchor dedication invocation, honored those naval personnel who died.

"The anchor is a symbol of stability in an otherwise changing environment," Hodgkins said. "Today, we especially honor and dedicate this anchor to all those navy personnel who lost their lives serving their country at the Pentagon on that fateful day of September 11, 2001."

"Bring honor to their memory, this day we pray, to those whom we dedicate this symbol of stability in our ever-changing world."

Mayor William Phelan said he was proud to be a part of the ceremony.

"It was a very moving ceremony — very fitting," Phelan said. "Commander Whitbread did a great job in honoring those fallen in the 9-11 attacks."

The Naval Reserve Center Quincy Color Guard performed an official exchanging of the flags in which they replaced their flag with the flag that was flown over the Pentagon in remembrance of the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks.

"On September 11, 2001 our world changed," Commander George Whitbread IV said when the American flag was firmly set at half-mast.

"We cry, we shake with rage, we feel helpless to understand this profanity. What monsters could do this?"

"We know instinctively that all nationalities, races and religions must unite together to stop this insanity."

As the Quincy naval reserve personnel unveiled the USS Quincy anchor, Whitbread read 34 names of the naval personnel at the Pentagon who lost their lives. A bell was rung after each name.

The anchor is available for public view in front of the Quincy Naval Reserve Center building, 85 Sea St.

The anchor was identified as belonging to the USS Quincy from the serial number engraved on it.

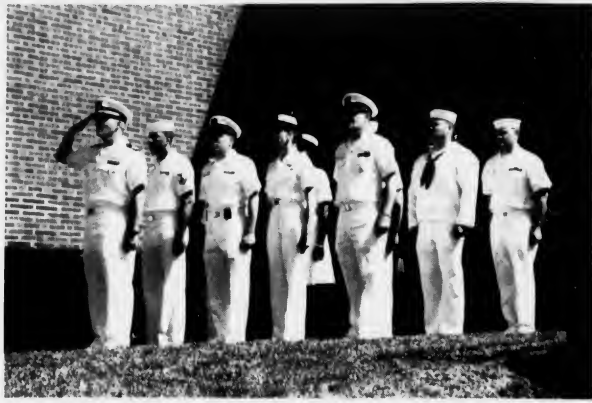

The granite plaque at the anchor reads as follows:

Dedicated to the U.S. Navy Service Members who lost their lives as a result of the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001.

The USS Quincy made several successful missions during 1944 and 1945 and received four battle stars for World War II service.

planned to attend the subcommittee meeting to push for restoration of the elementary school music programs that failed to survive the budget cuts.

"I thought it was back when I appropriated $2 million," he said. "I'm anxious to see it back in. It's important."

McCauley Seeks Repairs To Edgewater Seawalls

City Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley is concerned about the condition of the both the old and new seawalls that abut Edgewater Drive in Hough's Neck.

When a Council resolution to inspect the walls was blocked by Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton, McCauley wrote to Mayor William Phelan asking for a cost estimate for repairs.

"I suggest that you meet with (City Engineer Francis) Sandonato to get a professional report on this matter," said McCauley.

The councillor said he was alerted to the situation by residents of the Edgewater Drive area, where the response to flooding problems in the early 1990s was to build a new sea wall inside the old one.

"I took a look at the situation and found that many of the granite blocks of the old seawall have been dislodged," he said.

"At my request Fran Sandonato conducted an inspection of the wall. He informed me that both walls are in need of immediate repair."

"In an effort to call this to your attention, I submitted a resolve at (the Sept. 3) council meeting requesting you to obtain a cost estimate to repair the seawalls."

"For some reason, Councillor Newton objected to passage, hence this letter."

Brigadoon's License Transfer Turned Down

The License Board Tuesday denied a request from William C. Shea for a change of managers at Brigadoon's, 540 Washington St., and a transfer of the common victualer all alcoholic beverage license.

Shea, former owner of Shea's Formica, kitchen manufacturer and corian dealer, housed next door, wanted to open a restaurant called Shea's Pub House, Inc. in which Nicholas Shea, a son, would be the chef.

Before it became Brigadoon's, the restaurant was once the Knotty Pine, and then Quincy Point Pub. Atty. Paul Barbradoro said Nicholas Shea had graduated from culinary arts school, but had no experience in running a restaurant.

Opposition from neighbors living on Lebanon and Shaw Streets complained of noise from patrons, persons urinating on their lawns and cars and empty beer bottles strewn all over the neighborhood.

They also complained of trucks being parked on Shaw Street.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said that millions of dollars have been spent to change the character of Quincy Point and that it was time to "stop approving applications."

He said no restaurant can work in that location and that it was time for the "alarm clock to ring and we all wake up to the fact that liquor and food will not work in this location." His comments received applause from the abutters sitting in the City Hall chambers.

Although commending the Shea family as one of the "best in Quincy," Chairman Joseph Shea said he agreed with the concerns and comments by Raymondi and that Quincy Point has changed.

Board member Andrew Scheele abstained from voting because he is the brother-in-law of Barbradoro.

meaningless if the child doesn't get there safely."

Bragg said the subcommittee would also discuss a plan to stagger the elementary school starting times so that the same number of buses could make more trips. Also up for consideration was a proposal to enlarge the routes part-time in the winter.

Members of the budget subcommittee in addition to Bragg are Michael McFarland and Elaine Dwyer. Other members of the full Committee may attend meetings ex officio.

Mayor William Phelan, who is chairman of the School Committee, said he

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

- Granted a change of premise to Peter Kerr, owner of Bad Abbot's Pub, 1546R Hancock St., for the fourth annual Irish Festival to be held Sunday, Sept. 22 from noon to 10 p.m. rain or shine.

- Granted a change of managers at the Packaging Center, Inc. at Stop & Shop, 65 Newport Ave., from Gail Scavetta to Mark DePasquale. He was told to be aware of missing shopping carts throughout the neighborhood.

- Granted a change of managers at Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post, 81-83 Liberty St., from Lawrence Norton to Stephen Fowles, Det. Lt. Robert Perchard said he had concerns over the function hall with young persons supposedly serving liquor without attending the TIPS program.

Chairman Joseph Shea re-emphasized the need of taking the course.

- Granted an all alcoholic license to Quincy Dynasty, 47-49 Billings Rd. The restaurant, which opened last month, already has a beer and wine license, but according to Atty. Robert Fleming, patrons wanted the.

- Granted a change of name at the Naked Fish Restaurant at 516 Adams St. to Red Sauce. Gerry Fruggiero, vice president of operations, said the eatery, which will open Sept. 17, will serve pasta instead of fish featuring quality food and low prices.

New Asian Market Approved By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday voted unanimously to give a common victualer license to Welman Woo, owner of a new Asian market called Kam Man Food at the former Bradlee's at President's Plaza, 221-227 Quincey Ave.

Atty. Richard Barry, who said the name Kam Man Food means Golden Gate, said the building is 90,000 square feet, but the new store would take up 50,000 square feet. He said the owners plan to have a mini mall including retail stores and offices in the other space in the future.

Barry said the store would have a strong Asian influence and upscale type of market in appearance and design, as well as 600 parking spaces.

The hours of operation will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond told the board that there were a couple of abutters who feared the noise that used to come from Bradlee's - 24 hour trucks delivering. However, they were told that this was a different concept, and that deliveries would be in the day time only.

Raymond said the store had been vacant for a long time and needed an upgrade.

He said the project is "well financed and well organized" group. He said he was impressed by the new owner and it would be a welcomed addition to the supermarket landscape of Quincey.

Marilyn Manning, executive director of the Quincey Center Business and Professional Association, said the store will not only be for Quincey residents, but those living throughout the South Shore. She said a bus route at the site offering customers with an easy access to the store.

Barry said the dream is to be open by December.

Quincy ArtsFest Set For Saturday, Sunday

The fifth annual Quincy ArtsFest will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in Merrymount Park.

The show is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

The ArtsFest will feature more than 400 works of art and photography by painter-pants from throughout Massachusetts. In addition, there will be live entertainment all weekend long and fun activities for children, including cookie decorating, rock and shell painting and much more.

The live entertainment schedule:

SATURDAY

10 a.m. to 12 noon - Dusan Petran's Marionette Show (geared toward children).

12 noon to 2 p.m. - Riverside Theater Works, Broadway showtunes and more.

2 p.m. to 4 p.m. - Watson Reid and Americana, patriotic tunes.

4 p.m. to 6 p.m. - Commonwealth Brass, brass quartet from Copley Chamber.

SUNDAY

10 a.m. to 12 noon - Joe

Lundbohm, easy listening for Sunday morning.

12 noon to 1 p.m. - Forbes School of Irish Dance, Irish dancing and music.

2 p.m. to 4 p.m. - Eric Bindman Trio, hits from the '40s and '50s.

The work on display will include a wide variety of media featuring water colors, oils, pastels, sculpture, digital, photography, black and white photography, mixed media and much more.

The ArtsFest is sponsored by the Quincy Art Association, the Quincy Park and Recreation Departments and the Best Western-Adams Inn. State Street Bank has joined the sponsors this year as a corporate partner.

"We are thrilled with the increasing success of the Quincy ArtsFest," said Tom Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"Each year we are seeing a larger number of entries and the quality of the work continues to impress. I want to thank the Quincy Art Association, Best Western-Adams Inn and now State Street Bank for their help in making this event so successful."

Almost 7,000 attended last year's event and more are expected this year.

"The Quincy ArtsFest is part of our larger mission of utilizing our park system for cultural events," said Barry Welch, director of the Recreation Department.

"The setting of this show in Merrymount Park augments the beautiful art on display for an unparalleled aesthetic experience."

Delahunt Forum Tonight On Academy Nominations

Congressman William Delahunt will sponsor an information forum this week for local high school students and their families interested in educational opportunities at U.S. Service Academies.

The two-hour forum is scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight (Thursday) at Marshfield High School, 89 Forest St., Marshfield. It is open, free of charge, to all southeastern Massachusetts residents.

The session will feature admissions representatives from the U.S. Military Academy (West Point, N.Y.), Naval Academy (Annapolis, Md.) and Air Force Academy (Colorado Springs, Colo.)—as well as the Coast Guard Academy (New London, Conn.), Merchant Marine Academy (Kings Point, N.Y.), Norwich University (Northfield, Vt.) and Massachusetts Maritime Academy (Buzzards Bay). Also participating will be officials of the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) scholarship program.

Forum participants will outline procedures for pursuing a congressional nomination to the academies. Tenth Congressional District residents who graduate from high school by June 2003 are eligible to apply for the academy year 2003-2004. The application deadline for next year's potential nominees is Nov. 1, 2002.

All applications are evaluated thoroughly over a period of several months by the Tenth Congressional District Academy Nominee Selection Committee, a panel of eight distinguished local residents. The names of the students recommended by the committee will be forwarded by Delahunt to the respective academies, where they compete for final admission and appointment.

For more information on the forum or about the nomination process, call Delahunt's office, toll-free, at 1-800-794-9911. In addition, application forms are available online at www.house.gov/delahunt/svcaed.htm.

Tom Koch Endorsed By Gillis, Collins, O'Donnell

Tom Koch, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County treasurer, has been endorsed by Norfolk County Commissioners John Gillis and Peter Collins and Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

In announcing their endorsement, the three cited Koch's 10 years experience on the Norfolk County Financial Advisory Board.

Gillis said Koch "is the only candidate for county treasurer with proven county financial experience. Tom was appointed and volunteered a decade of service on the County Financial Advisory Board. He has demonstrated an understanding and commitment to county government."

"The Registry of Deeds bring in nearly $12 million in revenue for the county and the Commonwealth," said O'Donnell. "The proper accounting of these funds is essential to the success of county government. Tom Koch has the ability and integrity to ensure that the funds are handled properly."

Koch has also received the endorsement of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts, the Carmen's Union and the Painters' Union.

"Norfolk County has a reputation throughout the state for outstanding management," said Koch. "Its success is due to people like Bill O'Donnell, John Gillis, Peter Collins and the hard-working employees in all facets of the county government. I am proud that they have expressed confidence in my ability to manage county finances."

Mark Tobin Outlines Plan To Bring Probate Court To People

Mark Tobin, a candidate for Norfolk Register of Probate, has proposed making the probate court more user-friendly by utilizing courtrooms in the local district courts.

"We should bring the court to the people," said Tobin. "People traveling to the probate court under the most stressing conditions could save up to two hours of commuting time at rush hour."

The newly appointed Register of Deeds William O'Donnell recently announced that he too would invest in technology and explore the possibility of satellite locations and public accessibility.

Tobin said he welcomed O'Donnell's comments and was pleased that both men were in agreement and supportive to making the court and registry more convenient and accessible.

James R. Lawton, retired justice of Probate and Family Court, endorsed Tobin as the candidate who has the vision, plan and experience to best serve as Norfolk Register of Probate.

He has 18 years experience in the juvenile and probate court systems.

Connolly Calls Meeting On Totman St. Condos Permit

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly announces a meeting will be held today (Thursday) at 6 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy, regarding a proposal for a zoning variance to permit nine condos at 21 Totman St.

In a letter to neighbors, Connolly said many South Quincy residents have expressed their desire to see more residential rather than commercial and industrial use of land and property in the neighborhood.

"With that in mind, I have had discussions with the owner of 21 Totman St., a two-story, 10,500 sq. ft. building permitted last year for industrial and commercial business use, about converting his building for residential use. The owner has responded by developing plans to convert his building into nine condominium units," Connolly said.

With neighborhood support, the modification will require a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals to allow residential use in an industrial zoned area, Connolly said.

The ZBA has scheduled a hearing for Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. in the City Hall Council chambers, second floor, City Hall.

Two-Party System Needed, Romney Tells Quincy Crowd

Mitt Romney, the Republican candidate for governor, told a campaign crowd at Sons of Italy Hall that the election of Republican state leaders is needed to maintain a two-party system in Massachusetts.

"If every constitutional office in this state — governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, secretary of state — is held by a Democrat along with the overwhelming Democratic state legislature, two-party government will be dead in this state and that's not good for anybody," he said.

"As I recall, the last country to try a one-party form of government was Russia and they didn't do so well."

Romney and his running mate, Kerry Healey, a candidate for lieutenant governor, visited Quincy together and spoke of the changes they would bring to state government and their vision for Massachusetts.

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley noted that Healey, who is opposed on the Republican ballot in the Sept. 17 primary by James Rappaport, has 10 years experience advising the U. S.

Justice Department on drug crime and domestic abuse.

"She complements Mitt Romney's management background to a tee," he said. "I have had a chance to observe Kerry Healey up close and I am extremely impressed with her command of the issues facing the Commonwealth."

McCauley also introduced Republican activist Pole Logan of Cohasset, who shared her recollections of Mitt Romney's father, former Michigan Gov. George Romney.

Mark Tobin To Host Coffee Hour, Ice Cream Social

Mark Tobin, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County Register of Probate, is hosting a coffee hour and ice cream social in Quincy this week.

Special guest speaker will be Mayor William Phelan.

Tobin plans on speaking of his candidacy and talking to participants about the Probate Court. Tobin's experience includes 14 years as head administrative assistant at the Norfolk County Probate and Family Court.

A coffee hour is scheduled today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at O'Brien Towers.

An ice cream social will be held Friday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m. at Tobin Towers.

McDermott Endorsed For Register By Hughes

Former Register of Probate Thomas Patrick Hughes (D-Quincy) announces his endorsement of Patrick McDermott for the position he held from 1978 until his retirement last year.

"The elected Register of Probate sets the tone in the Probate and Family Court and must possess not only the skills and leadership ability as an administrator but the temperament for the kinds of sensitive issues that are dealt with on a day-to-day basis at the court," Hughes said.

The Probate and Family Court Department locate in Dedham processes estates, divorce and family law matters, protective orders from domestic abuse, name changes, adoptions, guardianships, equity matters as well as other matters. The registry is responsible for receiving documents to be presented to the court, for the maintenance of all records and documents that are processed in the court, and for customer service within the Registry.

Hughes aid that McDermott's professional background in public and private sectors, his record of achievement as a former Quincy City Councilor, and his knowledge and skills as an attorney were the overwhelming factors leading to his candidacy. Hughes said, "Having worked in the Probate and Family Court for over 20 years, I know firsthand the needs of the people of Norfolk County who utilize the court. I consider the employees there to be part of my extended family. Pat McDermott is the kind of person who can really make a difference in those people's lives. He has proven himself over the years as an attorney, as an administrator, and as a public servant. I am confident in his abilities; he has my full support."

McDermott said, "Tom Hughes served the people of Norfolk county admirably, and I feel honored to carry is endorsement into the primary next week. He is a man whose credibility is impeccable and whose reputation is unblemished. I look forward to serving in the same tradition of Tom Hughes making the Probate and Family Court more efficient and making the customer-service a high priority."

nomination.

But locally, the four Quincy candidates have added that extra spark of interest for voters.

Timothy P. Cahill, Norfolk County treasurer and eight-term city councillor, is running for state treasurer. If elected, he would be the first Quincy resident to hold a state-wide office since Frank Bellotti, former lieutenant governor and attorney general.

During his campaign, Cahill has been trying to keep voters from confusing him with another Cahill — Michael P. of Beverly — who is also a candidate for state treasurer and whose name appears before his on the ballot.

The other candidates for treasurer are Stephen J. Murphy and James W. Segal.

Two Quincy residents — Patrick W. McDermott and Mark H. Tobin — are pitted against one another for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County Register of Probate.

McDermott is a former Ward 3 city councillor now administrative assistant in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. Tobin is a former head administrative assistant to the Norfolk County Registry of Probate with experience in the trial court system.

The winner will face current Register of Probate Richard P. Schmidt of Weymouth, who was appointed to the post when Thomas Patrick Hughes retired a year ago. Schmidt is unopposed on the Republican bal-

Quincy's Thomas P. Koch is one of three Democrats running for Norfolk County treasurer to succeed Timothy Cahill.

The other two are Joseph A. Connolly, Weymouth Councillor at-large, and Braintree Town Treasurer Michael J. Joyce.

Koch is executive director of the Quincy Parks-For-estry-Cemetery departments and a former member of the Norfolk County Financial Advisory Board.

In the only other contests, Governor's Councillor Christopher A. Iannella Jr. is being challenged by Stephen F. Flynn of Hull.

Locally, those running unopposed include Congressman William D. Delahunt, state Senator Michael W. Morrissey, state Reps. Bruce J. Ayers, A. Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano, Dist. Atty. William R. Keating and County Commissioner Peter H. Collins.

The Quincy polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17.

Two Precincts Will Vote At New Locations

Voters in two of Quincy's 30 precincts will cast their ballots at different locations in next Tuesday's state primary elections.

The location for Precinct 3 of Ward 1 has been changed from the Quincy Vo-Tech School to the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The location for Precinct 3 of Ward 6 has been changed from North Quincy High School to the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said Precinct 3, Ward 1 was shifted to the Crane library because it is handier and has handicapped accessibility.

Precinct 3, Ward 6 was moved to the Beechwood Community Center because of overcrowding at North Quincy High School during voting hours where two precincts were located. Beechwood also has better handicapped accessibility.

North Quincy High School will remain the voting location for Precinct 1 of Ward 6.

Shea said if voters have any questions or wish to verify their registration status, they should call his office or the Board of Registrars at 617-376-1142.

Connolly Office Hours Sept. 18

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly will host office hours Wednesday, Sept. 18 from 9 to 11 a.m. in the City Council office at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

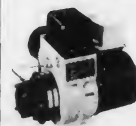

The council office is located on the second floor of old City Hall (also known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center).

To accommodate the schedules of commuters and constituents, Connolly will also be available earlier from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. at Steve's Front Side Market, located at the corner of Willard and Copeland Streets.

52,120 Registered Voters Democrats Dominate, Unenrolled Gain

Quincy has 52,120 registered voters eligible to cast ballots in next Tuesday's state primary elections. This is a drop of 901 from last year, reports City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Democrats still dominate in number but the unenrolled registered continue to gain.

There are 24,788 registered Democrats, 20,237 unenrolled and 6,661 Repub-

Unenrolled voters — formerly known as independents — are only 4,551 fewer than Democrats and 13,576 more than Republicans.

Other registration:

- Libertarian Party: 276.
- Interdependent Party: 74.
- Massachusetts Green: 40.
- Reform: 21
- Green Party USA: 12.
- Socialist: 3.

REAL ESTATE

Quincy Community Action To Host Homebuyer's Workshops

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. will host two free homebuyer workshop sessions for potential real estate buyers.

The sessions will be held Saturday, Sept. 21 and Sunday, Sept. 28 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Quincy Community Action Program's conference room, fourth floor, 1509 Hancock St.

Attendees will learn the steps involved in buying a home. Speakers are practicing real estate professionals.

Participants who attend both sessions obtain a certificate at the end of the course, which is a prerequisite for favorable soft second mortgages, Mass Housing mortgages and downpayment closing cost assistance.

The workshop will be conducted in accordance with the Massachusetts Homeownership Collaborative. Quincy Community Action Programs sponsors the program.

For more information and to register or learn of future workshops, call Rona Goodman at 617-479-8181, ext. 115.

In Collaboration With Abington Savings Bank Neighborhood Housing Services Homebuyers Workshops Sept. 21, 28

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in collaboration with Abington Savings Bank, will sponsor a free First-Time Homebuyers Workshop Saturdays, Sept. 21 and 28, at 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day. Breakfast will be provided.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend this educational workshop. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Down payment grants up to $10,000 per family are available. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

APPEALING TO BUYERS

"Curb appeal" is a term that real estate agents use to describe how a house looks to potential buyers, who start forming their opinions while standing on the sidewalk or driving by. With this in mind, sellers are increasingly adding style and character to their homes' exteriors by focusing on details. Currently, exterior decorating espouses the philosophy of using natural products and colors, assorted textures, distinctive details, and bold accents. The front of the house is the part that takes center stage in the home-selling process, so it warrants the use of brick and stone, as well as cedar shakes and deep, earth-tone colors. Similarly, natural accents, such as stone pillars and columns, are gaining popularity.

This week's column provides sellers helpful tips on how to increase their home's curb appeal. To experience real estate excellence, call CENTRAL REAL ESTATE at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway. We can provide you with a market analysis of your home to determine a price, advise you on how to implement strategic improvements to capture the attention of prospective buyers, and coordinate open houses. We sell on purpose—not by accident! Visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: A big mistake many homeowners make is to paint the garage door with the accent color. Instead, make the garage door seem to recede by painting it the color of the siding.

Bucking the trend toward consolidation in the real estate industry, Jack Conway remains committed to keeping the company he founded in 1957 an independent, privately owned firm.

"We were here yesterday, we're here today, and we'll be here tomorrow," Conway told a gathering of sales managers and administrative staff at a recent breakfast meeting at the Sheraton Plymouth. "We've been independent for 45 years, and there's no reason for us to change course now."

Referencing recent news accounts of other Massachusetts real estate companies being purchased by national conglomerates, Conway said he is frequently approached by large, out-of-state organizations seeking to buy Jack Conway & Co. Inc.

"The answer is always the same — a polite 'No, thank you,'" said Conway, eliciting enthusiastic applause from the group. "People like to deal with someone they know and trust, and if there's a question or a problem, they can get someone on the phone. Who wants to call a guy in New Jersey who doesn't know your neighborhood as well as a person who lives right around the corner?"

Jack Conway & Co., ranked among the top 100 real estate companies in the U.S. with more than $1.16 billion in sales last year, has 41 offices, as well as a mortgage company, full-service relocation department, commercial and business brokerage, property management division, referral registry and educational center.

Conway also is a member of RELO, the international relocation network, and recently created a training program for sales agents who specialize in helping buyers and sellers who are age 55 and older.

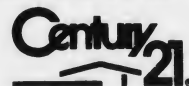

"This is an exciting time in the real estate industry, and I'm proud that the company I started in a small storefront is still growing, and is still locally owned," Conway said.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Don't Fall Into The Same Fire Traps This Winter

(NAPS) — Fall and winter are the most dangerous time of year for home fire safety. Home fires and fire death rates peak during this time of year because of increased use of alternative heating systems such as space heaters and fireplaces.

According to the National Fire Protection Agency (NFPA), heating equipment has resulted in 49,200 home fires, 388 deaths, 1,445 injuries and $515 million in property damage.

Additionally, increased use of electrical power to support holiday lights and in-properly caring for live Christmas trees also contributes to higher fire and fire death rates. The U.S. Fire Administration (USFA) estimates that fires during the holiday season injure 2,000 people and cause more than $500 million in damage.

As residents begin to winterize their homes this fall, it is vitally important that they consider placing fire extinguishers on every level of the home and examining those already in place to assure quality performance. Furthermore, the NFPA states that residential fire extinguishers should be replaced every 12 years as well.

"Residential fire extinguishers can be an important resource in a fire response plan because they provide homeowners with a means of containing fires before they get out of control," said Roy Marshall, executive director of The Residential Fire Safety Institute. "Current household penetration for fire extinguishers is 76 percent; however, it is crucial to get penetration closer to 100 percent as with smoke detectors."

About 30 percent of home fires start in the kitchen — more than any other place in the home — and more than 50 percent of home fire deaths occur in sleeping areas, according to NFPA. To help reduce the risk of personal injury and to control property damage, fire extinguishers should be placed in kitchens, bedrooms and in other areas such as hallways and garages for quick access.

Fire extinguishers should be inspected regularly to ensure that they are properly charged and available when needed. Those that have low pressure, are damaged or corroded, or haven't been used within 12 years should be replaced with a multipurpose fire extinguisher.

There are three fire extinguisher ratings — A, B and C — and each has an intended use. Extinguishers with an A rating work against fires involving combustible materials such as wood, cloth or paper; a B rating indicates effectiveness against fires caused by flammable liquids such as grease; and C is intended for use in electrical fires.

Because time is of the essence when battling a home fire, it may be safer to install fire extinguishers with an A-B-C rating throughout your home to be sure of your extinguisher's ability to put out or contain a fire. The Kidde Full Home Fire Extinguisher has an A-B-C rating and is available at hardware and home centers nationwide and costs about $10.

In addition to proper fire extinguisher placement, families can stay safe when the cold weather arrives by:

- Making sure that heating equipment is inspected and cleaned by a professional;
- Keeping space and kerosene heaters at least three feet away from anything that can burn. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, 300 people die each year in fires started by heaters;
- Using the oven and range for food preparation only and not as a heating source for the home;
- Refilling the stand of a live Christmas tree with water often. Also, inspecting holiday lights before putting them up is recommended; and
- Developing a fire escape plan that the entire family is familiar with. Fire extinguishers are one element of a fire response plan but the primary element is a safe escape.

Tips For A Smooth Move

- For a do-it-yourself move, start early by collecting sturdy, medium-sized boxes and stocking up on magic markers, heavy-duty tape, newspapers and twine. Arrange to rent a moving van six to eight weeks prior to the move.
- If a moving company will be handling the packing, research companies and associated costs six to eight weeks before the move by asking them to survey the items they'll be moving. At that time, the company can provide more details on the packing process and give an accurate estimate of their fees.

North Quincy Kicks Off Season Friday Progress In Progress For Raider Football

By CHRIS POISSON

If there was a theme song for Tony Green's return to Quincy last year as interim head coach of the North Quincy High School football team, it would've been Heart's "Magic Man."

Fans were hoping Green could bring some of his rebuilding magic from Holbrook High, where he transformed a dead program into an undefeated 6-0 team in his first year at the helm.

And when the Red Raiders got off to a strong 2-1 start, it seemed Green was on his way to doing it again. But then North Quincy floundered, dropping its next five games and six of its last seven to finish with a 3-7 record.

Tomorrow (Friday) night at 7, the second year of the Green Regime kicks off when North Quincy hosts Boston Latin of the Dual County League at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the season opener.

"Boston Latin has a real good running back [senior Yemi Owolewa]," Green said. "They're in the upper level of the Dual County League. They'll be a challenge, they'll be tough. If we can compete with them, then we can probably compete with most of the teams in the Old Colony League."

While it may look like not much progress was made, remember North Quincy's three wins last year tripled the total from the previous season and matched the total from the previous two seasons combined. That minor success extended to the offseason with an increase of participants in the program.

"We're looking pretty good," Green said. "We're making progress. Last season we tripled the number of wins and this offseason we increased the number of participants by a third even though we are one of the smallest schools in the OCL."

Quincy Football Preview Next Week

There's a good feeling around North Quincy football right now and I think it will spread."

Although the program has added more players, Green noted most are underclassmen who won't make an impact on the varsity team for at least a couple of years. Which brings us to North Quincy's major weakness: lack of depth.

"It's a question of depth," Green said. "If we get injuries, then we'll see how good our sophomores are. Even though the numbers are up, the numbers are up in the freshmen and sophomore groups. That won't pay off for a little while. Right now we have 23 seniors and eight juniors and that's it. Maybe a couple of sophomores."

North Quincy returns eight lettermen (all seniors) from last year, including three of its top four running backs, which will once again be the strength of the team. Chris Dolbear, Ryan Farnham and James Coughlin combined to rush for nearly 1,000 yards and 10 touchdowns and will shoulder much of the offensive load. Junior fullback Brandon Neves is also in the mix.

Dolbear, who runs a 4.47 in the 40-yard dash, injured his knee over the summer and will miss tomorrow's season opener and possibly Week 2 against Marshfield. He was the second leading rusher on the team last year with 546 yards and seven TDs.

Part of the ground game's success stemmed from a big offensive line, which has graduated three players that were in the starting lineup on Thanksgiving Day. The two starters returning are senior quad-captain Darryl Zoia, center, and senior George Phipps, tackle. Phipps is the strongest player on the team with a 310-pound bench press and a 475-pound parallel squat.

Senior tackle Pat O'Brien is a returning letterman and will be accompanied by senior guard David Buttomer, senior tackle Sean Drews (6-5, 350), senior guard Kosta Kalpakidis (second strongest in the program) and junior guard Shaun Maloof.

At quarterback, senior quad-captain Kevin Holleran takes over the reigns with junior Jimmy Burke as the backup. Holleran saw limited time last year backing up Dennis Thomson, completing nine of 20 passes for 137 yards, one touchdown and three interceptions. Green describes him as a "strong-armed quarterback who is very fast."

Holleran's targets are senior quad-captains Gary Dalton (7 receptions, 123 yards, 2 TDs) at end and Matt Francis (13 receptions, 159 yards) at tight end. Seniors Mike Delahoyde and Rob Mooney are the outside receivers.

Defensively, Phipps, O'Brien, Buttomer, Kalpakidis, Maloof and Corey Piazza are on the defensive line. Piazza wrestled last year in the heavyweight division at only 200 pounds and finished with a 32-3 record.

At linebacker, Dolbear, Farnham, Francis, Zoia, Mooney and Neves round out the field. Coughlin and Dalton are the safeties and Delahoyde and Burke are the cornerbacks.

Sophomores on the roster that may contribute this season are Paul Graham, son of North Quincy all-time great Leo Graham, Nison Wong, Alex Tringale, Richard Russo and Mike Faherty.

North Quincy Girls Soccer Downs Hingham In Opener, 2-1

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team got its season off on the right foot Monday by beating non-league opponent Hingham, 2-1, in 90 degree heat at Teal Field.

The teams were tied at 0-0 at halftime. The Red Raiders had a decided edge in play in the half, both territorially and in shots on goal.

They had several quality chances, including a header by Amanda Saylor and two glittering chances by Katy Mercurio.

Defensively, the back line of Jessica Jacques, Erin McFarland, Sarah Gregory, Lauren McGee and Lauren Milone was solid.

North Quincy scored four minutes into the second half when senior captain Christina Conley hit a beautiful cross to Mercurio, who knocked it into a wide-open net.

Eight minutes later, North

Quincy took a 2-0 lead when Mercurio crossed a ball to a streaking Rachel Enos, who one-timed it past the Hingham keeper.

Strong midfield play by Katie Timmins, Ashley Ridge, Katy Faherty and Lauren Kalil helped North Quincy keep Hingham from mounting any good scoring threats.

Hingham got on the scoreboard with one minute left as Hayle Prendergast broke in on North Quincy junior keeper Kristina Manganaro. Manganaro made eight saves in goal for her first varsity win.

North Quincy played rival Quincy yesterday (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium and hosts Taunton tomorrow (Friday) at 4 p.m. at Teal Field.

The Red Raiders have made it a habit of qualifying for the postseason and this year appears to be no different as they return 16 players from last year's 14-4-4 team that made the playoffs for the fifth straight year.

Leading the returnees is McFarland, a four-year starter who was an Old Colony League All-Star in 2001. She is moving to sweeper to help fill the void left by Kelly Rice, who is now playing college soccer at Trinity.

Kalil, a three-year starter and captain, will look to improve on her six-goal output from last year. Enos, a captain, will move to forward and looked strong in pre-season and should provide scoring punch up front.

Conley, who started at forward last year, looks to be in terrific shape and should also provide scoring depth.

Mercurio, a senior forward, was second in scoring last season with six goals and four assists. An artist on the field, she is currently in the top 15 on the North Quincy all-time scoring list.

Junior Jenn Ryan, who was second on the team last year with eight goals, is a starter at forward and looks very strong, especially in the air. Jen Venuti, who saw some time last year, will be a valuable player off the bench, as will senior Caitlin Doherty and sophomore Caitlyn Peters. Peters will also see time at midfield.

Timmins, a senior, and Saylor, a sophomore, lead a talented midfield group that includes juniors Breanne Therrien, Ridge, Faherty and senior Meagan Randall. Lisa Schifone, a senior who was a sparkplug last year, will see plenty of time. Sophomore Eileen Price rounds out the midfield group.

The defense will be led by McFarland. However, Jacques, Gregory and McGee will see time at outside defender. Milone, a freshman, has impressed the coaching staff and will also see action. Jes Smialek and Nancy Yankun will also see time.

Manganaro has won the goalkeeping duties, replacing Kathryn MacRitchie who is now starting at Assumption College.

Quincy Girls Soccer Up For Challenging Season

The Quincy High School girls' soccer team is gearing up for an exciting and challenging season.

Last year, the Presidents endured a tough season as they faced some strong competition in the Atlantic Coast League and against non-league opponents, like perennial power and rival North Quincy.

"Of the nine teams we played, eight teams made it to the tournament," second-year head coach Don Martin said. "This year we are raising the bar and striving for more success."

Quincy opened last Wednesday against Norwood. Yesterday (Wednesday) they battled rival North Quincy at 7 p.m. and tomorrow (Friday) they host Whitman-Hanson at 3:30 p.m.

Martin said he is pleased with how the team is shaping up and that it's clear the girls prepared in the offseason. The team also attended a pre-season training camp, run by local college coaches, and worked on skills and conditioning.

"Their fitness level is good and they had improved ball handling skills," Martin said.

The captains are seniors Liz Campbell, Caroline Fields, Courtney Peterson and junior Kaila Saxe. Saxe, a two-year starter, led the team in scoring last season and was named a first-team league all-star.

"This is a tight group," Campbell said. "We were excited to start double sessions and our team spirit is good."

Once again, Quincy fields a young team, especially its defensive backs: sophomores Katie Walsh and Marissa Powers and juniors Kaila Saxe, Jessica Carella and keeper Sarah Shea.

Offensively, Martin stresses the team needs to work on systems of play and developing more of an attack. At the forward position, seniors Kristen Clarke and Megan Griffin, junior Katie Kisielius and freshman Courtney Hall will be counted upon to deliver some punch. Midfielders are juniors Fionnuala Bohan, Colleen Martin and Jen Gordon.

"There are only 15 players on the varsity squad so we continue to focus on rebuilding the team," Martin said. "Our numbers are not as high as we would like. My goal is to develop a soccer program at Quincy High School that will meet the needs of the student athlete, and bring in more players committed to excellence."

"Preparing our athletes for the world beyond high school soccer is important. Some will go on and play at a varsity or club college level, while others will be happy to have had this wonderful experience of high school soccer."

The program has added a new junior varsity coach, Jenn Palmari, who Martin said he is looking forward to working with. A University of New Hampshire graduate who teaches in Abington, Palmari continues to play soccer in the South Shore Women's League.

Ceremony Oct. 27 At Sons Of Italy

QHS Alumni To Retire Jersey #1 In Honor Of Munroe 'Mac' MacLean

The Quincy High School Alumni Benefit Fund will retire football jersey No. 1 in honor of the late Munroe "Mac" MacLean Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St.

A former three-sport standout at Quincy High School (class of 1926) in football, basketball and track, MacLean also went on to become a successful head coach in those three sports at his alma mater.

Among those expected to be guest speakers at the ceremony are John Gillis and George Burke, former players; Marty Finnegan, who succeeded him as athletic director; Roger Barry, former Patriot Ledger writer; and Bill Sullivan, an assistant under MacLean before taking over in 1952.

MacLean will be just the second person to have his number retired, joining Sullivan whose No. 15 was honored in October 2000.

A YOUNG Munroe MacLean poses on the gridiron where he played football at West Chester State College in Pennsylvania.

"I'm thrilled that he is going to be recognized because everyone alive knows him, and his contemporaries that are gone knew him, as a coach and teacher, but he was also an excellent player in many sports," said his daughter,

MacLean played tackle on the 1925 Quincy High team that upset perennial power Brockton, 3-0, on a Nate Nichols field goal—a game regarded as one of the greatest in school history.

He graduated from West Chester State College in Pennsylvania, where he continued to play football and also captained the basketball and track teams.

He received a master's degree in health and physical education from Columbia University in 1934 and attended Boston University School of Education for another year, his sixth year of graduate study.

MacLean taught and coached at high schools in Pennsylvania and Delaware before returning home to Quincy in 1937.

In 1938, MacLean succeeded Harry Downes as head coach of the football team and compiled a 65-27-9 record in 11 seasons, including eight victories over rival North Quincy.

He took a timeout during his tenure, serving as lieutenant commander in the Navy during World War II from 1943-45. He returned to the gridiron in 1946 and reeled off eight straight victories after losing the first two games.

Following the 1951 season, MacLean resigned as the football coach due to his heavy workload, which included a full teaching schedule as well as coaching basketball and track. And that basketball season, he led the team to the Class A Tech Tourney championship.

Also that year, he was named assistant director of physical education, health and athletics for Quincy schools and was later named director in 1959, a position he held until his death in 1969 at age 61.

MacLean received numerous awards, including the prestigious "Man of the Year" by the Montclair Men's Club for his work with youth.

He was the first member inducted into the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame. He was also charter member of the committee that brought Little League baseball and football to Quincy.

The event will begin at 1 p.m. with a cocktail hour and end at 5 p.m. Tickets cost $20 per person, which includes dinner.

For tickets and more information, call Ron Ival at 781-337-0062 or Vin Moscardelli at 617-328-1312.

Panthers Turn Back Storm, 21-12

In a hard-fought junior varsity contest, the Quincy Point Panthers recently outlasted a stubborn Squantum Storm team, 21-12, at Cavanaugh Field.

The Panthers sprung into the lead when Greg Gaffney hit Michael Wright for an 18-yard touchdown pass on the fifth play of the game.

In their next series, the Panthers pounced again when Paris Amado ripped through the Storm defense on a brilliant 70-yard TD run.

Trailing 14-0 early, Squantum was down but not done. The Storm came roaring back with a gutsy 32-yard TD run by Ian Campbell, who shook off several Panthers on his way into the end zone.

In the second half, the Storm started things off with a 14-play drive that featured hard-nosed running by Jeff Davis and Richie Groves, and a great leaping catch by Billy Kiley at the Panthers' one-foot line. Quarterback Zack Deagan sneaked the ball over to cut the gap to 14-12.

Quincy Point was not to be denied this day, however. On their next series, the Panthers drove steadily down the field with Gaffney running the final 12 yards to paydirt. David Marx had a nifty 15-yard run.

The Panthers played a strong team defense led by Brendan Cronin and Gary Richards. For the Storm, R.J. Barden, Kevin Escano, John Rowland and Andrew Black were outstanding on defense.

Jeff Lang. In the second, backup quarterback Shawn Tarpey threw an 8-yard TD pass to Mike Babe to give Quincy a 23-0 lead at halftime.

In the second half, the Oilers scored their only points of the night on Mike Green's 63-yard TD run on the opening series. The Granite added another score late in the game on Veticac's 12-yard TD scamper.

"Randolph, which was undermanned and has a lot of young talent, came out feisty and played a good game," said captain David Harris. "The score didn't tell it like it was. They played tough and it woke us up."

Veticac finished with 146 yards on 15 carries with the two touchdowns to earn EC Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Defensively, Christos Arsoniadis recorded 6.5 sacks and over 20 tackles against his former team to earn EC Defensive Player of the Week honors.

Granite Rock Randolph

The Quincy Granite capitalized against an undermanned Oiler Oilers team last Friday night with a 30-7 victory on the road.

Quincy (5-2) rests in third place in the Eastern Football League's Eastern Conference behind front-runner Charlestown (8-0) and Middleboro (7-1).

The Granite travel to Clinton (4-4) Saturday night at 8. The Charlestown game that was postponed Aug. 30 has been rescheduled for Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

In the first quarter, Quincy broke into the scoring column on tailback Jackson Veticac's 1-yard touchdown run a little over four minutes into the game.

On Randolph's second series, it took an intentional safety against a tough Granite defense, which ended up knocking out both the starting and backup quarterbacks from the game with injuries.

Also in the first, quarterback Liam Higgins fired an 11-yard TD pass to wideout

SO MUCH HOT AIR

According to a recent survey, more than half of all drivers do not have a clue as to what their vehicles' tire pressure should be. You can find the correct pressure for your tires on the certification labels attached to the door edge (or another part of the vehicle body), as well as in the owner's manual. Some manufacturers recommend different pressures for front and rear tires, particularly on SUVs and vans. If the tire has a label with a number on it, disregard it because it is simply the maximum pressure permitted. These numbers are worth knowing because maintaining the right pressure helps avoid blowouts and flats, improves handling and fuel economy, and prolongs the life of the tires.

Your safety is our concern. Here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO our ASE Certified professional technicians will service your car with the same level of attention that they would give their own. SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS EUNICE LAW of Quincy recently joined other runners and walkers to kick off the American Stroke Association's "Train To End Stroke" marathon training program at the Westin Hotel in Waltham. Law will join thousands of other runners at either the Reggae Marathon in Jamaica in December or the Walt Disney World Marathon in January. In exchange for the training program and transportation to the marathon site, each participant is asked to collect donations for stroke research.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
GUARDING AGAINST INJURY

Prior to the mandatory use of facemasks and mouth guards for high school and college football players in 1963, half of all football injuries involved the face and mouth. Since then dental injuries have all been eliminated. It is now recommended that mouth guards be worn for a variety of sports. Mouth guards have been shown to reduce trauma to teeth, gums, and the surrounding jaw bone, as well as to reduce injury to the temporomandibular joints (TMJ) and to the intensity and number of head concussions. While store bought mouth guards are less expensive than the custom devices made by the dentist, they are not likely to fit as well. Custom made mouth guards are less likely to come loose and interfere with breathing.

Mouth guards also reduce pressure and bone deformation of the skull when a force is directed to the chin. Wear and tear of cavities and chewing hard objects such as pencils, ice cubes, nuts, and hard candies can also lead to tooth fractures. This column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We believe in an informed patient approach to achieving optimum dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are dedicated to saving and restoring your teeth and helping you look your best. Call (617) 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Beautiful smiles are a team effort. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Mouth guards made by the dentist begin with an impression of the athlete's upper dental arch that is used to make a mold of his/her teeth and gums, thereby ensuring a custom fit.

Start Of School May Mean Start Of Bullying

By ALAN JACOBSON

Back to school is a time of year that many parents and children look forward to. But for some children, going back to school is not something to look forward to because it means going back to a place where they are bullied by one or more of the other children.

And while bullying isn't a new phenomenon, it is still harmful and painful, both to the person being bullied as well as to the bully himself.

As parents, teachers or other professionals who work with children, there are things we can do to stop bullying. And it begins with understanding more about who bullies are and why they do what they do.

Who Are Bullies?

A bully can be described as any person who repeatedly engages in behavior that hurts another person. Bullies can be male or female, young or old. And their attacks can be physical, verbal, or both. The different types of bullies include:

- Physical Bullies: This type of bully hurts others physically. They push, slap or hit others.
- Verbal Bullies: Verbal bullies humiliate another person by saying something hurtful either about them or to them. They often do this in a short period of time when adults are not listening or are not around.

- Relational Bullies: This type of bully tries to convince their peers to exclude or reject a certain person or cut them off from their social connections.

- Reactive Bullies: Reactive bullies begin as victims and become bullies to try to feel better. They choose others they feel are potential victims using their own insight as to why they were victims.

Why Do They Bully?

There are as many reasons for bullying as there are bullies, but there are some common and easily identifiable motives for this destructive behavior. They include:

- The bullies are being bullied themselves.
- They cannot tolerate anyone different from themselves.

- They feel bad about themselves and want to make others feel bad, too.

- They can avoid thinking about their own frustrations or problems by spending time hurting others.

- They feel insecure and bullying makes them feel powerful.

- They want to look cool in front of others.

What Can A Child Do If They Are Being Bullied?

No child should ever have to tolerate bullying behavior. If you know a child who is being bothered by a bully, there are some tips you can give them for dealing with a bully:

- Tell a friend what is happening. It will be harder for the bully to pick on you if you have a friend there for support.

- Ignore the bullying or turn and walk away. It is impossible for the bully to go on bullying someone who won't stand still to listen.

- Try not to show that you are upset or angry. Bullies love to get a reaction — it's fun. Keeping calm might cause the bully to get bored and leave you alone.

- Think up a funny or clever reply in advance. Make a joke of it. Agree with them about what they are saying perhaps.

- Ask the bully to repeat what he or she said. Sometimes asking bullies to repeat whatever they've said can take the wind out of their sails. They may not be brave enough to repeat the remark exactly, so they tone it down.
- Tell a parent or another adult. There is no need to suffer in silence.

Where Can I Go To Learn More About Bullying?

South Shore Mental Health offers a training program called Bully Busters to help prevent and minimize the effects of bullying. It is presented by clinicians today camp and after-school program staff as well as others who work with youth. Participants are trained to anticipate, identify and deal with teasing and bullying behaviors.

If you would like more information about the Bully Busters program call 617-847-1964.

Jacobson is a licensed psychologist and director of Bayview Associates at South Shore Mental Health, a community resource providing mental health and substance abuse services throughout the South Shore, southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod. Taking The Best Medicine (NAPS) - The U.S. has the most advanced and safest healthcare system in the world. But how does the government ensure the millions of supplements, over-the-counter medicines and prescription products Americans use are effective? It uses the United States Pharmacopoeia (USP).

The USP sets standards for prescription and over-the-counter drugs, dietary supplements, healthcare technologies and ingredients. Whether it's an aspirin, a vitamin or a prescription drug, USP standards ensure product identity, strength and purity. That helps consumers know that the products they use will perform as expected.

How do you know if a drug or over-the-counter medication you take meets USP standards?

Within the United States, USP standards are officially recognized in the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. This act is law and is enforceable by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA). U.S. Pharmaceutical manufacturers must comply with USP standards.

Some pharmaceutical and dietary supplement manufacturers place the USP initials on their product containers to inform customers their products meet USP standards.

What are the other USP public health programs?

USPhas a Dietary Supplement Verification Program

(DSVP). It was developed in response to the public's increasing concerns about the quality of dietary supplements in the marketplace.

Through compliance testing and document review, adherence to good manufacturing principles, and post-marketing surveillance, DSVP is designed to help ensure that dietary supplement products contain the declared ingredients in the state quantities.

Products that have been certified under DSVP are entitled to bear the special USP DSVP mark. Further information about DSVP is available at www.usp-dsvp.org.

Hope And Healing For AIDS Service Sept. 27

The Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium's Consumer Advisory Board (CAB) and Project F.A.C.E. will sponsor an ecumenical "Vesper Service of Hope and Healing" Friday, Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. at Heritage United Methodist Church, 218 Grove St., Braintree.

The service will be preceded by a time of refreshments at 6 p.m.

The church is accessible from Route 3, exit 17 north and south, and has ample parking.

The event will offer those infected with and affected by HIV and AIDS the opportunity to gather and worship together in an atmosphere of mutual support and caring.

The Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium is an association of area agencies which serves persons living with HIV/AIDS, in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Randolph, Milton, Norwell, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Cohasset.

The group meets every other month at Quincy Medical Center, and is open to anyone wishing to attend.

The Consumer Advisory Board meets monthly at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Project F.A.C.E. (Faith in Action for Community Education) is an interfaith educational program in southeastern Massachusetts committed to helping faith communities address health concerns such as HIV and AIDS, teen pregnancy, and others.

For more information on the Consortium, contact Kathy Kurtz at 617-773-6100, ext. 2040.

For information on the CAB, call Bob McCulley at 617-287-7623.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There's no month like September. Parents eye their six-year-olds as they take their first steps toward the school bus. Older students leave home for their first adventure in dormitory life. College and high school graduates fine themselves looking for jobs. Year in and year out, September brings gradual and unusual changes in the lives of many of us.

Parents and students wonder about the personality and influence of a new teacher. Teachers do not choose their students and may find themselves in a roomful of strangers. The first days of school often reveal which students will test a teacher's intelligence, patience, or perseverance for the ensuing school year.

September is a month of new things: books, tablets, pencils, prints, plaids, plains and, of course, blue jeans. It is a time to start again with new ideas, new activities and new friends.

What happens in a new school year has far-reaching effects on all of us. It matters not if we are eight or eighty, school is everyone's business...

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A change that you'd hoped for is down the line. But you still need to be patient until more explanations are forthcoming. Continue to keep your enthusiasm in check.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your social life expands as new friends come into your life. But while you're having fun, your practical side also sees some positive business potential within your new circle.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your workplace situation continues to improve. Look for advantages you might have missed while all the changes were going on around you. That trusted colleague can help.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Resist the urge to hunker down in your bunker until things ease up. Instead, get rid of that woe-is-me attitude by getting up and getting out to meet old friends and make new ones.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Now that you're back enjoying the spotlight again, you should feel re-energized and ready to take on the challenge of bringing those big, bold plans of yours to completion.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A former friend would like to repair a relationship you two once enjoyed. Your positive response could have an equally positive impact on your life. Think about it.

South Shore YMCA Opens New Addition Friday

Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore YMCA, announces the opening of its $9 million addition in Hanover tomorrow (Friday).

More than 300 South Shore families will be formally thanked with special dedications and a recognition wall unveiling at the event.

"We are very excited about the benefit of this facility will bring to the South Shore community," said Natalie Sheard, executive director. "The availability of the two new indoor pools and the teen center/coffee house are sorely needed. With these new facilities we will be able to service over 1,200 children in swim lessons every eight-week session."

The new teen center will host a teen night every Friday for ages 12-15 and a teen coffee house for ages 16-20 every other week as a safe and fun environment for teens of all ages and interests.

"In addition we will employ over 175 part-time staff at the facility, many who are under 21," Sheard said. "It's going to be 'the place to be' no matter what your need, age or ability."

Donations are still being accepted. For more information contact Linda Dymont at 617-479-8500, ext. 102 or visit www.ssynca.org.

The South Shore YMCA has branches in Quincy and Hanover and two resident summer camps in Sandwich, and serves the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Steven Barrett Memorial Golf Tournament Monday

The third annual Steven V. Barrett Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Sept. 16, at 8 a.m. at the Halifax Country Club.

Barrett was tragically killed at age 22 three years ago on Nantucket, where he was working for the Nantucket Police Department.

A graduate of Quincy High School (1995) and Westfield State College (1999), he was a three-sport captain at Quincy High as a member of the golf, hockey and baseball teams.

The Barrett family is looking for $100 hole sponsors, donations, raffles and silent auction items. Limited space is available for foursomes.

Checks can be made payable to the Steven V. Barrett Memorial Fund and sent to: Nancy Ceriani, 6 Baker Ave., Braintree, MA 02184.

A QUALIFIED ADMINISTRATOR, A SKILLED ATTORNEY, A TESTED PUBLIC SERVANT

As Endorsed by Paul Harold, May 16, 2002

Dear Quincy Voter:

Next Tuesday, I would be honored to have your vote. I have been humbled by your kindness and generosity throughout my career in public service, and once again ask you to trust me with your support. Paul Harold was my colleague, my mentor, but more importantly . . . my friend. His commitment to public service has demonstrated that one person can truly make a difference in people's lives. I look forward to serving you as your next Register of Probate . . . THANK YOU!

Tracy and Patrick with Paul Harold

"I have known Patrick McDermott for many years and had the pleasure to serve on the Quincy City Council with him. I chose him to serve as my Executive Assistant at the Registry of Deeds because of his knowledge and skills . . . The Register of Probate position deals with sensitive issues in people's lives and Patrick McDermott has the right temperament, the right experience, and the proper qualifications for the position. Please join together in supporting our candidate... Patrick McDermott!"

-Paul D. Harold

THE TORCH IS PASSED

"Patrick McDermott has the legal and administrative background to be a successful Register. I am confident in his abilities and I am proud to endorse his candidacy for the position I held so dear for 22 years."

36 Percent Turnout Here

O'Brien, Cahill Big Primary Winners

Quincy's Timothy Cahill nailed down the Democratic nomination for state treasurer with a stunning display of strength in Tuesday's primary election.

The eight-term city councillor and Norfolk County treasurer was projected the winner as he was running far ahead of James W. Segel of Needham who was heavily endorsed by political figures.

Rounding out the four-way race were Boston City Councillor Stephen Murphy and state Rep. Michael Cahill of Beverly who figured to finish third and fourth.

Timothy Cahill spent much of his campaign trying to keep voters from confusing him with the other Cahill -- the two are not related -- and succeeded.

State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien, who was the winner state-wide for the Democratic nomination for governor, also took Quincy, edging runner-up Senate President Thomas F. Birmingham by 404 votes here.

Patrick McDermott bested Mark H. Tobin in the all-Quincy race for the Register of Probate nomination. But the pair were reported running close in other parts of the county with returns incomplete at press time.

Quincy's Thomas P. Koch, running for Norfolk County treasurer, rode out of Quincy with a big lead but returns from the towns were incomplete.

If elected in November, Cahill would be the first Quincy resident to hold a state-wide office since Frank Bellotti was elected lieutenant governor and attorney general in the 1960s and 1970s.

He will square off against either Daniel A. Grabauskas or Bruce A. Hersfelder, who were battling it out for the Republican nomination late Tuesday night.

Cahill greeted some 250 cheering supporters at a victory party at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center Tuesday night.

"This isn't a victory yet," he cautioned. "The Super Bowl is Nov. 5th -- the final election."

Cahill acknowledged the hard work of campaign workers and the support of his family.

"If it wasn't for all you people, I wouldn't have climbed the stairs tonight. I am honored to be on top."

Cahill was the top vote-getter in Quincy among candidates in contested races with a steamrolling 11,229.

His three opponents trailed far behind with Stephen J. Murphy at 1,488, Segel with 1,174 and Michael Cahill with 824.

O'Brien's Quincy vote was 4,896, edging out Birmingham who had 4,488. Warren E. Tolman was third with 2,797 and Robert B. Reich fourth with 2,622.

Koch's 9,883 votes here easily topped his two county treasurer rivals: Weymouth Town Councillor Joseph A. Connolly and Braintree Town Treasurer Michael J. Joyce. Connolly's vote was 2,124 and Joyce's 2,100.

Christopher F. Gabrieli, who won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, also topped that field in Quincy.

Gabrieli's vote here was 6,811 with Lois G. Pines second with 3,615 and John P. Slatery third with 2,865.

Governor's Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr. defeated Stephen F. Flynn here by a vote of 7,023 to

'This Is An Important Decision' Phelan 'In No Rush' To Name Police Chief

Mayor William Phelan is not going to be rushed into naming a new chief for Quincy's police department.

"I am committed to no time frame for making the appointment," he said. "This is an important decision and I'm not going to be rushed into making it."

First, he said, he's going to sit down with Personnel Director Roberta Kety and work out a method that he will follow for all police promotions from sergeant to chief.

Then he will put together a team to interview the three candidates for the post -- acting Chief William F. Falco, Capt. Robert L. Crowley and Capt. James F. McNeil.

"The law gives me the discretion to not appoint the high-scorer," he said. "I intend to exercise that discretion. The appointment will not be dictated by the highest score."

Crowley scored a 90, Falco an 87 and McNeil an 86 on their Civil Service tests.

State law gives the Mayor authorization to appoint any one of those three but if he chooses anyone but Crowley he must explain his choice to Civil Service.

Above all, said Phelan, he will look for the quality of leadership in a chief to succeed former Chief Thomas Frane, who went on sick leave with heart surgery in January, 2001, and retired in July, 2002.

"Leadership comes in many ways," said the Mayor. "Leadership by example is first and foremost."

Phelan said he will also look for the qualities of respect shown by fellow officers, experience, the ability to manage people and the ability to live within a budget that is currently set at $18.5 million.

"I don't think a man with those qualities will be hard to find among the candidates we have," he said. "It will be a tough decision but it will have to be made."

Whoever is named chief will inherit a department that has a number of personnel problems.

Last week, eight officers were suspended for drinking and firing their revolvers at a Marina Bay bash and two sergeants also were suspended for their failure to report the actions of the officers.

Recently, Kathleen Banderas, former civilian head of community policing, won a $135,000 judgement against the city in a sex discrimination suit.

Just before that, Officer

Phelan To Host Shipyard Forum Sept. 26

Mayor William Phelan has invited prospective bidders on the MWRA-owned parcel at the former Fore River shipyard to present their ideas to local officials and members of the public Thursday, Sept. 26 at 6 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is preparing to sell some 12 acres of land at the former shipyard.

The public forum is designed to create a mechanism for the community to stay informed of the development process at the site. A similar forum was held Aug. 15 and focused on the larger parcel currently in foreclosure proceedings.

Representatives of the MWRA have been invited to speak on the status of its surplus process and the agency's plans going forward. Members of the public may be invited to make statements relative to their ideas for the site before prospective bidders make presentations and take questions from the panel.

Local officials who have been invited to join Phelan on the panel include Cong. William Delahunt, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, state Reps. Ronald Mariano, Bruce Ayers, Stephen Tobin and Joseph Sullivan; Council President and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, and Braintree

Selectman Joseph Driscoll. Michael McGurl and William Walker, members of the Quincy Point Business Association, were also invited.

"Much like the other part of the shipyard in the midst of foreclosure proceedings, I remain deeply concerned about the impact of any potential redevelopment plan of that site on the community as a whole. This forum serves as a mechanism to gather information and to understand the opportunities relative to this parcel before any decisions are ultimately made," Phelan said.

'A New Challenge For Me' McFarland Leaving For Agricultural School Post

Barely a month after he signed on for another three year term, Michael McFarland is stepping aside as Quincy's city auditor.

McFarland is leaving the $84,000 post he has held for the past three years to become business manager of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

"It is a new challenge for me," said McFarland, 48, who is also in his second four-year term as a member of the Quincy School Committee.

"When the opportunity became available in the field of education I thought it would be helpful to me as a School Committee member to learn something from the outside."

MICHAEL MCFARLAND

He said the move had nothing to do with the controversy that swirled around his involvement in the payment of $4.6 million in city bills with funds that had not yet been appropriated.

The State Attorney General's office found no evidence of wrong-doing on McFarland's part and the investigation was dropped.

"I heard that the job in Walpole was available and sent in a resume, that's all," he said. He'll join the staff of the agricultural school next month.

McFarland was former city purchasing agent and executive secretary to ex-Mayor Sheets when he was named to the auditor's job by the City Council in 1999, succeeding Robert Foy.

He was rehired for another three years by the Council Aug. 12 despite lingering echoes of controversy that ended only two months before.

Highpoint Meeting Sept. 24

A community meeting to provide the public with an update on the status of the Highpoint Project will be held Tuesday, Sept. 24, announces Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

The meeting will be from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Quincy Medical Center's first floor Community Room B-C, 114 Whitwell St.

Coughlin said the meeting will be held in accordance with the Public Involvement Plan (PIP) for the site.

It will include, he said, an update on blasting, required monitoring and construction. He urged resident to attend.

Visitor Information Kiosk Placed Outside City Hall

Mayor William Phelan and members of the Quincy Tourism Advisory Board will unveil the newly refinished Visitor Information Kiosk in front of City Hall Friday afternoon.

The kiosk will serve as a friendly stop for visitors to Quincy to get information on where to visit, eat and shop while they are in Quincy. Volunteers will distribute Quincy brochures, direct tourists to the Adams National Park Service Visitor Center, trolley stops and nearby attractions and businesses.

Fall is a peak visitor's season in the Northeast, making the kiosk an added attraction the Advisory Council noted. The kiosk will initially remain open from Friday until Oct. 25, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays only.

Staffed with Advisory Council members, city officials, National Parks Service volunteers and resident volunteers, the kiosk will have tour schedules for the Adams National Historical Park and information on other Quincy events and attractions, including a new walking map of the Hancock Cemetery that provides details on the noted Quincy residents buried there. To volunteer to help staff the kiosk, call 617-376-1990.

The kiosk is an accomplishment of Phelan's newly formed Tourism Advisory Council. In addition to the comprehensive action plan they presented to the mayor in June, outlining goals for the upcoming year, the council is taking steps to form an advertising campaign to help bring Quincy into the fold with state and regional tourism efforts.

The council held a slogan contest this month to encourage residents to participate in advancing Quincy's tourism initiative by submitting entries for a slogan to be used in Quincy's tourism promotion efforts. The winning slogan will be announced later this month.

A Special Message

To The Citizens of Quincy

Although a year has passed since the horrific events of Sept. 11, 2001, the images and despair stay vivid in our memory. From the sight of the plane hitting the South Tower, the collapse of both towers, the gaping hole in the Pentagon, the crater left in Shanksville, the defiance of New York Fire Fighters raising the American flag of the courage and tireless effort of the search and rescue, all of us will remember a certain instant of that day for the rest of our lives. However, one thing that the members of the Quincy Fire Department will never forget is the outpouring of sympathy and emotion shown to us by the citizens of Quincy.

In our darkest time, it was the support and encouragement of the citizens of Quincy that motivated us, showing us why we do the job we do. Now, even after a year has passed, you continue to be there for us, acknowledging our efforts on your behalf. Your presence at the Quincy Fire and Quincy Police Departments memorial services honoring those who gave their lives so that others could live, uplifted us more than words can tell. All of us on the Quincy Fire Department have sworn to protect this City and its people, and your actions make us proud to do so. We thank all of you for your acknowledgment and support more than you will ever know, and we pledge our continued devotion to protect you and your property.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Sept. 16, 1620, the Mayflower sails from Plymouth, England, bound for the New World with 102 passengers. The ship was headed for Virginia, but stormy weather and navigational errors forced it off course, and on Nov. 21 the "Pilgrims" reached Massachusetts.

• On Sept. 22, 1828, Shaka, founder of the Zulu Kingdom of southern Africa, is murdered by his two half-brothers, Dingane and Mhlangana, after Shaka's mental illness threatened to destroy the Zulu tribe.

• On Sept. 20, 1878, Upton Sinclair, Pulitzer Prize-winning writer, is born. An assignment on meat-packing plants led to his best-selling novel, "The Jungle," in which an idealistic immigrant goes to work in the Chicago stockyards. The novel's gritty portrayal of labor abuses and unsanitary conditions led to the passage of the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906.

• On Sept. 19, 1900, Robert Parker and Harry Longbaugh, better known as Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, rob the First National Bank in Winnemucca, Nev., marking the first time that the duo worked as a team. Years later, according to most reports, the pair was ambushed by Bolivian soldiers and killed in San Vicente. Yet, rumors still persisted that Cassidy survived and lived a quiet life on a Nevada ranch until the 1920s.

• On Sept. 21, 1938, without warning, a powerful Category 3 hurricane slams into Long Island and southern New England, causing 600 deaths and devastating coastal cities and towns.

• On Sept. 18, 1970, guitarist Jimi Hendrix dies at the age of 28 following a drug overdose in London. In 1967, the Jimi Hendrix Experience made its first American appearance at the Monterey Pop Festival.

• On Sept. 17, 1978, at the White House, Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin sign the Camp David Accords, laying the groundwork for a permanent peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

A New Face In Ward 1

The political spotlight may be focused on this year's state election but next year's city election has grabbed Ward 1's attention.

And there's a new face on the block helping to warm up things even more. An interesting one, too.

He's Joseph Keegan of Moreland Rd., Merrymount. He wears a badge.

Keegan, who just turned 31, is a six-year member of the Quincy Police Department and patrols in Houghs Neck and North Quincy.

He's also a 1990-91 Army infantry veteran of Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

"I am planning on running for the Ward 1 city council seat," he says. "I intend to run and will announce later."

Keegan says that with his experience in the military and in the police department, he would be a sort of semi-expert on public safety.

"We live in a changed society since Sept. 11," he says. "Public safety is a major issue now."

Keegan has a degree in criminal justice from Curry College and is in his senior year at the New England School of Law where he is going nights.

With his police background, he feels he would be able to help the city council to decipher the language of police budgets and contracts.

He would not be the first police officer to run for municipal elective office.

Donald Riley and Richard Crespi, former members of the department, previously ran for Ward 6 councillor and school committee but were not elected.

Would he have a possible conflict if he were to be elected?

"I don't think so," he says. "If there was a question about me voting on a police matter, I would abstain."

What about collecting two city salaries, one as a police officer and one as a city councillor?

"If that was a problem I wouldn't take the city council salary ($17,500). I'm not running for that salary."

He says he would look into the possibility of donating the salary to worthy causes or Ward 1 community projects.

Keegan is married to Michelle Sylvia, daughter of legendary Quincy High School hockey coach Bob Sylvia. While at North Quincy High School where he graduated in 1989, Keegan played hockey against Sylvia teams.

More recently, he was helping Sylvia out coaching and met Michelle.

Although this would be Keegan's first run for city office, it would not be his first election. He was elected to the Quincy Police Patrolman's Association board and served as treasurer and vice president.

Keegan would be entering what is shaping up as a crowded race for the Ward 1 seat incumbent Greg Hanley is leaving next year at the end of this term.

Two candidates -- James Bottary, active in Project Hope and Sean McArdle, a member of the Houghs Neck Community Council, have had bumper stickers in circulation for sometime now.

Leo Kelly, who held the seat through six elections and is now chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, says he is definitely running. Running for the Ward 1 seat and not councillor at-large, he stresses.

But, he says, it's too early for an official announcement and too early for bumper stickers although, he says, he already has them.

Other names are still being mentioned as potential candidates. Among them:

Joanne Bythrow, vice president of the Houghs Neck Community Council, Robert Ross of Germantown, a member of the Quincy High School Siting Committee and brother-in-law of state Senator Michael Morrissey, Daniel Maguire, past president of the Merrymount Association and head of an AMTRAK union, William Weed, who has run before, but right now is busy as Quincy's district coordinator for Mitt Romney's bid for governor.

And, perennial candidate Gretchen Grant wants you to know she's positively running again.

Meanwhile, Hanley, who has moved to Pembroke with his family, says he definitely will finish out his term while maintaining a Quincy residence in an apartment at 75 Palmer St.

And while he does, the line of potential successors gets a little longer.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, vice chairwoman of the Quincy School Committee, is now an author.

CEDRONE

Cedrone, a paralegal in the law office of Atty. Tom Williams and Associates, recently had an article published in the Elder Law Journal.

The article deals with the problems facing the elderly in public housing.

The title is a long one: How Federal and State Disability Laws and Regulations Have Created A Sense of Confinement.

It focuses on the issue of "mixed housing" and the effects of the Massachusetts Law: Housing For The Elderly and the Handicapped of Low Income.

The law, Cedrone notes, "mixes" the alcohol and drug-addicted and elderly in the same housing units.

And that has become a serious problem.

Cedrone joined the Williams law office in November, 2000 following her graduation from the New England School of Law with a Juris Doctorate degree.

DENISTARDO can now marry you, find you a home and help you vote when you get settled.

Tardo has been appointed a Justice of the Peace by Acting Gov. Jane Swift with the designation to perform marriages in the state.

He is a Realtor with the Daniel Flynn Co. and a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars.

Troop 20 Boy Scout Registration Sept. 26

St. Ann Troop 20 Boy Scouts will hold registration for new scouts 11 years and older Thursday, Sept. 26 at 7 p.m. at the Scalley Center behind St. Ann School.

This past summer most Troop 20 Scouts participated in a 10-day backpacking trip in New Mexico. Future activities this year include a camporee on Thompson Island in Boston Harbor, a New Hampshire ski weekend, plus monthly campouts.

Meetings are held every Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Scalley Center.

Parents are encouraged to volunteer as members of the Troop.

Call Ken Belovarac, scoutmaster, at (617) 328-8248 with any questions.

Scenes From Yesterday

FOR OVER 75 YEARS, MacFarlands was the place to buy hardware in Wollaston. Having settled on Arlington Street in 1896, James MacFarland established his business and then built this building. He opened the store at 9 Brook Street in 1990. In more recent years the business operated from a newer building to the left of this one. But this building is still extant and is a rare surviving example of Quincy's early 20th century commercial architecture. The sign and stoop are gone but all the other details on the facade of this wooden building are unchanged from when this postcard was mailed to Nova Scotia in 1912.

Proposes Central Fire Headquarters Be Named For Father And Son Fire Chiefs Gorman

My name is Guido "Buddy" Pettinelli and I have lived in Quincy all of my 77 years. It is my suggestion, request, recommendation (or whatever is necessary) that the name of Quincy Central Headquarters Fire Station be changed to the "Thomas Gorman, Sr. & Jr. Headquarters Fire Station." I honestly believe this should be done as a tribute to two outstanding, dedicated chiefs of the Quincy Fire Department. I knew Tom, Sr. and know Tom, Jr., very well. Being a retired police officer, I also had occasion to work with them under different circumstances and always found them to be very cooperative and helpful. They were always real gentlemen.

If there was ever a fairy tale story of a son following in the footsteps of his father, his hero, his idol and attaining that goal, it certainly is the Gorman story. When they both served as chief of the Fire Department, it was a first in the city of Quincy. Both were dedicated firefighters, officers, and chiefs; they served the fire department for over 70 years, including about 40 years as chief, with honor, dignity, integrity, and high esteem.

Tom, Sr. was a compassionate, understanding, and considerate husband, father, and family man, as is Tom, Jr. Tom, Sr. contributed much to the community and Tom, Jr. continues to do more than his share.

Tom Gorman, Sr. was a religious man and Tom Gorman, Jr. is still very religious. Both men contributed generously of their time, talent, and treasure to St. John's Parish for many, many years.

I know of no other father and son more deserving of a tribute than Tom Gorman, Jr. and Sr. In recognition of all they have done for the city, we should rename the Quincy Central Headquarters Fire Station the "Thomas Gorman, Sr. & Jr. Headquarters Fire Station."

Let's get it done!

World War II Memorial Should Have Airman Figure

As an Air Force veteran and son and grandson of veterans, I was appalled to read the recent description of the planned Quincy World War II Memorial in The Quincy Sun.

The proposed statue depicted figures of various service men and women, but not an airman. The reason given was that "at the time, the Air Force was part of the Army." This is dubious reasoning, and overlooks several historical facts:

- While it did fall under the Department of War, the U.S. Army Air Forces enjoyed substantial independence in recruitment, training, procurement and operations.

- The proposed memorial depicts a Marine, yet the Marine Corps at the time fell under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy, and still does to this day.

I believe the attempt to depict a quota of one serviceman from each of the services is misguided. Instead, why not depict one of each type of serviceman?

For instance, a sailor could depict not only those who served in the Navy, but also the Coast Guard and Merchant Marine. A ground soldier could represent those who served on land with both the Army and the Marines.

Finally, a statue of an airman would honor all airmen who served their country: U.S. Army Air Forces, Marine Corps aviators, and those pilots and crews who flew with the Navy. Finally, a figure of a female service member, as currently planned, would represent the WAACs, WAVES, and other women who served.

I hope that the designers of the memorial will reconsider the proposed design and include a figure of an airman. Not to do so would be a slap in the face to the over 60,000 airmen of the Army Air Forces, Marine Corps, and Navy who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country.

Shipbuilders' Strike Enters 12th Week

By TOM HENSHAW

"We are fighting on the side of right and we will win because right always wins over might," John Grogan, international vice president of the CIO Shipbuilders Union, told a Local 5 membership meeting.

The meeting was held in the Quincy High School auditorium as the shipyard workers' strike against the Bethlehem Steel Co. entered its 12th week.

Other speakers were the Rev. Daniel F. McColgan, professor of moral theology at St. John's Seminary, and the Rev. Bedros Baharian, pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church.

"The liberalistic laissez faire of market prices or labor and unlimited profits for capital is an un-Christian hoax perpetrated by practitioners in the 18th and 19th centuries," said the Rev. McColgan.

"Hope that Uncle Joe Beth will get back in the good graces of the people of this city as he was during the war," said the Rev. Baharian.

INCINERATOR CONSIDERED

Mayor Charles A. Ross disclosed he was considering the purchase of a municipal incinerator as "the only method of disposing of rubbish and garbage."

"The only question has been the cost," said the Mayor. "I now think that the city is financially able to undertake such a project."

VETS HOUSING OPENS

The first group of 12 veterans moved into the new 95-unit, $850,000 Meadowbrook Apartments at the corner of Adams Street and Furnace Brook Parkway, where 4 1/2-room apartments rented for $93.50.

Builder L. Robert Rolde said a second apartment house with 120 units was planned at $1,250,000 on the same grounds.

FIND COUSIN TONY. Some 150 members (you count 'em) of the extended Gaudiano family sat for this portrait at their recent family reunion at the Fore River Clubhouse. First cousins include members of the Ricciuti, Baldassini, DiBona, Ward, Corcoran, Carloni, DeRosa and Venturelli families.

Over 150 Attend Annual Gaudiano Family Reunion

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

They came in droves -- cousins by the dozens -- to the annual Gaudiano reunion for the largest buffet ever seen.

With 65 first cousins, and most of them still living, more than 150 relatives attended the event held recently at the Fore River Clubhouse.

Reunions began almost 50 years ago when in those days our Uncle "Tedo" made the best clam chowder. And back then all of our parents were in attendance.

The arrangement of food ranged from clam chowder, corn, steamers, salads, roast turkey, all kinds of pasta, roasts, pizzas, plus every kind of dessert from cookies, pies, cakes, puddings and gourmet creamed desserts.

The function hall was turned into an array of tables with colorful tablecloths and fresh flowers on each one.

Guests took home their own vases with the flowers, plus a smaller vase depicting the Gaudiano family and all of the families stemming from them.

Those families include Ricciuti, Baldassini, DiBona, Ward, Corcoran, Carloni, DeRosa, and Venturelli. Members from these families have their own cousins by the dozens.

There was a family raffle with great prizes, and then games outside on the baseball field.

Games included three-legged race, egg toss and other outdoor fun.

Mayor, Former Mayors Face Roast For Historical Society

The present mayor and five former mayors of Quincy will be "toasted and roasted" for the benefit of the Quincy Historical Society Friday, Oct. 11, from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

Tickets for the evening of reminiscence, anecdote and good-natured fun are $100, available from the Society. The event will be catered by Alba's restaurant and there will be a cash bar.

Participating will be the current Mayor William Phelan, and former Mayors James Sheets, Frank McCauley, Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and Walter Hannon. Congressman William Delahunt will be the host and master of ceremonies.

"We are tremendously pleased that the current and all the living former mayors have agreed to take part," said QHS President Joyce Baker.

"It demonstrates that they all recognize the importance of the Historical Society's work and it will make the evening a truly unprecedented occasion as well as a most enjoyable event.

Proceeds from this event will help the Society maintain our level of programs and services to the community. Like all non-profits in the past 12 months, we have faced cut-backs in revenue and institutional sources of funding.

"The Society has been an asset to the community for 110 years. In order to continue to play this positive role, we need support from members of the public."

Those seeking tickets or more information may call the Quincy Historical Society at 617-773-1144.

Thomas Shields Family To Be Honored Maria Droste Services To Celebrate 10th Anniversary

The Good Shepherd's Maria Droste Services will mark its 10th anniversary with a "Decade of Giving" celebration Thursday, Oct. 10.

A highlight will be the presentation of the fourth annual "Family Of The Year Award" to the Thomas Shields Family.

The event will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. at Allerton House at Hancock Park, 164 Parkway, Quincy Center.

Geraldine Dussault, director of The River Bay Club and Richard Welch, president of the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group of which Allerton House is a part, are co-chairpersons.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti is honorary chairman.

Past recipients of the "Family of The Year Award" are: the James Sheets Family, Henry Bosworth Family and Quincy Sun Family, and the Robert Curry Family.

The Maria Droste agency recognizes qualities that make some families distinctive, values the agency through its counseling service, strives to cultivate.

The committee for the anniversary celebration includes: Anthony Agnitti, James (Jay) Asher, Henry Bosworth, Arthur Connelly, Dr. Joseph Doolan, Rev. William Harding, Atty. William Keener, Paul McDavitt, Rev. John O'Brien, Peter Racicot, Susan Gallagher Shea, Linda Stice, Mary Ann Walsh and Ralph Yohs.

The Maria Droste agency, located at 1354 Hancock St., Quincy Center, has for the past 10 years provided needed counseling services to those with financial limitations.

Those interested in obtaining tickets for the anniversary celebration may contact any of the committee members or call the Maria Droste agency at 617-471-6622.

Phelan, Quarry Hills Making Progress On Time Extension

Mayor William Phelan and Quarry Hills Associates are making progress in their efforts to hammer out a two-year extension for construction of the ninth million-dollar project.

"The hold up is money," said Phelan as he prepared for yet another negotiating session yesterday (Wednesday).

The cost of building the golf course has exceeded what was originally anticipated. Where is the money to come from? What is to be the city's role in terms of assisting Quarry Hills? What will the city receive in return for the extension?"

The extension became more and more of a necessity last week when the State Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) ruled that the Quincy Conservation Commission erred last November when it approved a new clubhouse plan without a public notice.

The DEP said the developers must file a new notice with the city detailing their plan to move the clubhouse from the south side of the site to the north side to avoid engineering problems on the original site.

The plan will have to go before the Conservation Commission again, and the makeup of that body has changed drastically since the original okay was given in November of 2001. Four of the seven commission members have been changed by the new mayor, Phelan.

"The state said the Quarry Hills plan should not have been approved the way the commission did it," said

Phelan. "It was pushed through. It was wrong."

The Mayor said Quarry Hills Associates have two options — they can appeal the DEP decision or they can go back to the Conservation Commission with a new application. He said an appeal is unlikely.

Published reports have placed the developers of Quarry Hills about $20 million in the hole with the project, which is also faced with a number of law suits from its neighbors as well as environmental issues.

"We are also concerned with capping it," said Phelan. Much of the 450-acre site was filled with material from the Big Dig in Boston which needs to be capped with fresh dirt before it becomes the recreational area the city envisions.

Phelan 'In No Rush' To Name Police Chief

Nancy Coletta settled another sex discrimination suit for $165,000 and 28 days of vacation and sick leave.

Currently, Sgt. Susan E. Perch, the department's only female superior officer, is also suing the city, claiming that the department has shown a pattern of discrimination against female employees.

To top it off, Falco, who has been acting chief since May, 2001, suspended Crowley for disobeying an order and Crowley is fighting the suspension with a Civil Service hearing scheduled for Sept. 24.

Critique Of H.L. Menken Opens Quincy College Series

Quincy College will kick off its second annual Humanities Lecture Series with a presentation on the writer and cynic H. L. Menken Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. in the college's Anselmo Library.

Steven Dooner, a Quincy College instructor of Literature and Drama, will explore the provocative thoughts and witty insights of one of America's most influential writers of the early 20th century.

Dooner, author of the play, "Lizzie of Fall River," will take a special look at Menken's first hand account as correspondent of the Baltimore Sun of William Jennings Bryan at the Scopes Trial.

The lecture series is open to all free of charge.

"A lecture series that offer an analytical, yet humorous angle on America's past and present, especially in a time when America is finding its footing again, is something we feel everyone should enjoy," said Quincy College President Sean Barry. "Which is why we open our doors to the entire community."

The six-week series will continue each Tuesday at 7 p.m. through October. The schedule includes:

Oct. 1 - "The Writings of Barbara Kingsolver: Literature as a Healing Process."

Oct. 8 - "Ismael Reed's Mumbo Jumbo."

Oct. 15 - "Gore Vidal's Novel History."

Oct. 22 - "The Many Voices of Anna Devere Smith."

Oct. 29 - "Satire in the Adventures of Saul Bellow"

Joining Dooner from the Quincy College faculty are Barbara Welch, faculty in English; Mark Walsh, adjunct instructor of Literature and Composition; Sandra Smales of the Legal Studies Program; and Dr. Edward Kelly, professor of English Literature, World Literature and Composition.

Murder, Suicide Seen In South Quincy Deaths

Police are investigating the deaths of a man and his wife in their South Quincy condominium as a murder-suicide.

The bodies of Hon Lee, 67, and his wife, Ching Lee, 65, were found Monday night.

Police were summoned to the condo on Centre Street by the Lees' son, who said he received a phone call from someone who told him:

"Your mother is dead and your father will be dead by the time anyone gets here."

Norfolk District Attorney William Keating said their deaths were being investigated as a murder-suicide.

Ching Lee was killed with a blunt instrument, said the district attorney. Autopsies were to be performed Tuesday, he added.

Shelter For Women Opens At St. John's Former School

St. John's Shelter for Women which will provide emergency shelter for up to 40 women nightly opened Wednesday.

The new shelter, in the refurbished basement of the former St. John's School, replaces the women's unit at Father Bill's Place.

Purpose of the shelter is to offer a safe supportive environment that motivates and assists women to move beyond homelessness to live in the community with dignity and self-determination.

Volunteers from the community, headed by Loretta Oliva of South Shore Savings Bank and Mary Ann Walsh of Father Bill's Place, formed the basement of the 100-year old school into the shelter.

Among those helping were inmates from the Norfolk County of Correction provided by Sheriff Michael Bellotti and employees of South Shore Savings Bank who teamed to paint the shelter.

There were also donations including paint and materials from Lowe's and Home-Depot and artwork from Raffael's Restaurant to hang on the walls.

Despite the prosperity of the past decade, homelessness has nearly double according to Father Bill's Place. At that shelter, women accounted for 25 percent of the guests, up 12 percent from two years ago.

This increase, it was pointed out, forced Father Bill's Place to reorganize its services to establish a separate homeless shelter for women.

Father Bill's Place is a private, non-profit organization in Quincy serving the great South Shore area.

Its mission is to end homelessness one person, one life at a time by providing shelter, housing and social services to individuals and families.

INMATES FROM THE Norfolk County House Of Corrections paint the walls at the St. John's Shelter for Women in the basement of the old St. John's School. Checking the work at right are Sheriff Michael Bellotti and John Yazwinski, executive director of Fr. Bill's Place.

Downtown Quincy's Future Discussion At QC-WPA Meeting

Residents concerned with the future of downtown Quincy will have a chance to buttonhole City Council President Daniel Raymondi and Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, on the subject.

Raymondi and Manning, along with Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, will be the speakers at a meeting of the Quincy Citizens &

Wollaston Park Associations, Thursday, Sept. 26, at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Hayward Street, North Quincy.

Those who plan to attend are urged to share with Raymondi and Manning their feelings that quality retail clothing, home furnishing and business supply stores should be encouraged to relocate in downtown Quincy for residential shopping.

Cousin will detail to QC&WPA members some of the QTA's recommendations to the city on the school deficit, tax abatements and exemptions, a finance director and open space problems.

Members with other matters they would like to discuss should call the Associations' secretary Dorothy Kelly, at 617-472-4257 for possible inclusion on the agenda for the meeting.

 from 5:00 to 7:00 pm

Prostate cancer is the most common type of cancer found in American men, other than skin cancer. There will be roughly 189,000 new cases of prostate cancer in the United States in the year 2002, according to the American Cancer Society.

Quincy Medical Center will host a free prostate cancer screening on Thursday, September 19 and Wednesday, October 2 from 5:00 to 7:00 pm in QMC's Ambulatory Care Department on the second floor. Space is limited and advance registration is required.

The screening will include both a Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) blood test and a digital rectal exam (DRE). The examinations will be conducted by urologists on staff at Quincy Medical Center.

To schedule an appointment, please call Quincy Medical Center at

Environmental Network To Host Meeting On Wind Power In Quincy

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will explore the possibility of wind mills for the production of electrical power in Quincy at a meeting Thursday, Sept. 26, at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse on Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Representatives of Cape Wind, the producers of wind mills, will be on hand to discuss their use and the possibility of manufacturing them at the Fore River Shipyard. Another speaker will be a Hull resident who helped bring wind mills to his community.

"This is a timely matter," said Steve Perdios, spokesman for QEN. "Decisions will soon have to be made regarding a use for the shipyard. The meeting provides residents and city councillors a great opportunity to get hard facts about one such possible use."

For further information, call Gail Macdonald at 617-773-5120.

Caregivers Self-Help Support Group

Caregivers Self-Help Support Group brings together family caregivers, relatives, and supportive others who have concerns for the well-being of an aging person. You will have the opportunity for interaction with other family caregivers and professionals, aimed at offering insight, information, resource awareness, and supportive networking. Ceremony To Be Held Sept. 28

Street, Square To Be Dedicated To Papile Family

Papile Lane (formerly Atlas Street) and Papile Family Square (the intersection of Washington, Fowler and Pond Streets and Papile Lane), Quincy Point, will be dedicated to the family of Raffael and Lucia Papile Saturday, Sept. 28 at 11 a.m.

The elder Papiles emigrated from Torre de Passeri, Abbruzzi, Italy, and settled on Harkins Street in Quincy Point, where they had 16 children, seven of whom served in the United States armed forces during World War II.

The late City Councilor Paul Harold, who sponsored the name change in the City Council, once called the Papiles "one of the most remarkable families in the city of Quincy."

Speakers at the dedication will include Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Ron Mariano (whose district includes Quincy Point), Council President Daniel Raymond, John Comer, former National Commander of the American Legion, and James Papile, a retired Quincy assessor.

Dr. Carmen Mariano, grandson of Raffael and Lucia and the assistant superintendent of Quincy public schools, will be master of ceremonies; Mayor William Phelan will deliver the greetings of the city, and a family member, Deacon Joseph Papile, will provide the invocation.

Seven of the children of Raffael and Lucia survive. They are:

Mary C. Papile, retired assistant treasurer of Quincy; Amelia Faherty; Helena Mariano; James P. Papile; Ralph J. Papile, proprietor of Chick's Barber Shop; George W. Papile, retired from the U. S. Postal Service; and Gloria J. Kelly.

The seven sons who served overseas in World War II with the Army, the Navy, the Marines and the Coast Guard included William, Albert, Leo, Ralph, Angelo, George and James.

They are among the veterans the city will honor at World War II Memorial in Merrymount Park. Their parents, Raffael and Lucia, were recognized by the governor, the White House and the Navy secretary for their contributions to their country in wartime.

The entire family was honored as "the greatest generation's greatest family" two years ago when a plaque and stone were dedicated to them at the Point-Webster Middle School, where the Papile children spent a total of more than 25,000 days in class.

Quincy General Recalls Terrorist Attack On Pentagon Sept. 11

By LANCE MORGANELLI

"History teaches us that it's important to remember its lessons lest we have to relearn them — for that reason, we must always remember, and we must learn and we must go forward."

That was one of the main messages of U.S. Air Force General Ronald Rand, a Quincy native, shared his firsthand account and views about his experience during the terrorist attack on the Pentagon where he was working at the time, during the Bethany Congregational Church's "A Service In Remembrance of September 11, 2001."

Bethany Congregational and four other churches, Quincy Point Congregational, Wollaston Congregational, First Church of Christ Scientist and World Revival Church, Assembly of God, participated in the service last Wednesday.

"God continues to call us to move beyond the most difficult moments in our history, challenges us to be instruments of peace and points us to our hope-filled future," said Rev. William Harding of Bethany Congregational Church.

"This service is a service of understanding and also of healing," said Harding.

Rand said he would like everyone to remember how badly we all felt and the sadness created when lives and dreams were shattered, so that we can stay committed to the mission of ending global terror.

"I'll never forget what I was doing that day, and in that respect, September 11, 2001 becomes one more day in a string of dates I'll never forget because of the event that occurred on those dates and the effect they had on me, and on our country and the world we live in," Rand said.

The series of events etched unforgettably in Rand's mind begins with him sitting in his ninth grade science class at the then Central Junior High School Nov. 22, 1963 when the principal came over the loudspeaker system with a "giant voice," telling everyone to go immediately to their homerooms. His homeroom teacher told his class that President Kennedy had been shot and killed.

Rand also spoke of the graphic explosion of the space shuttle Challenger and the amazement of watching Neil Armstrong take the first steps on the Moon.

"And now Sept. 11, 2001: I was on duty that day in the Pentagon when the plane smashed into our building," said Rand. "There was a loud boom, the floors and walls shook, the lights flickered and outside my window I could see the fireball rising in the sky."

"I was lucky enough to be selected to be one of the hundred that went back in [to the Pentagon]," said Rand referring to the recovery efforts.

"On evacuating the building, I saw a sight I'll never forget: the Pentagon on fire, with an acrid black smoke filling that beautiful blue sky."

"Like everyone else I found solace in the knowledge that everyone who had died so suddenly, so terribly that day was with their God and that He would comfort and love their families," said Rand.

"Like the Cold War I grew up with, my daughter will grow up with the global war on terrorism because this war won't be over tomorrow, and it won't be over next week and it won't be over next year," said Rand.

"We can win, and we must win if it doesn't ever want to feel the way we did a year ago," added Rand.

"May your strength give us strength; may your faith give us faith; may your hope give us hope; and may your love give us love," said Rand quoting from Bruce Springsteen's "The Rising" which is about the attacks.

"[The Pentagon] is the same place with a different attitude," said Rand referring to both the structure of the building and the "renewed sense of purpose" people now have at work.

"[The Pentagon workers] are serious [about their work] and they're very passionate and I think it's their way of remembering what happened and respecting the lives that were lost and doing what they can to make sure it won't happen again."

A Sept. 11 Remembrance

Point Webster Students Plant 'Garden Of Hope'

Point-Webster Middle School observed a day of remembrance of the tragic events of Sept. 11, 2001 — and planned to add a more lasting memorial to the victims of the terrorist attack at "a garden of hope."

Students at the Quincy Point school plan to plant memorial mums, provided by Ward 1 City Councillor Daniel Raymond, at the school with the hope that "may our blossoms bloom in a world filled with love and peace."

Students who will represent their grades include:

Grade 8 - Brian Maskell.

Brian McQuinn, Anthony Duke, Amanda Godek, Lisa Beaudoin, Randy French.

Grade 5 - Batla al-Dossari, Frederick Alamba, Gabriela Dande, Chino Mapa, Seamus McKenna, Eduardo Ramos.

At the opening exercises held at the school Sept. 11, [Principal James McGuire reminded students that they were joined together that day to find healing and a clearer vision. Brian Maskell, an eighth grade, read the poem "Together," by Viraynes.

The ceremony ended with a moment of silence, followed by the ringing of three bells, commemorating the three sites in New York and Washington that were hit by the terrorists in their hijacked air liners.

The pledge of allegiance by the whole school and the playing of "God Bless America" ended the observance.

Volunteers To Clean Up Wollaston Beach Sept. 21

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and the Ward 5 Association will sponsor the annual coast-sweep cleanup at Wollaston Beach Saturday, Sept. 21.

Last year, more than 100 students from Atlantic Middle School and neighborhood residents participated in the annual cleanup at the beach.

Those planning to help Sept. 21 are asked to meet at 10 a.m. in front of the Wollaston Yacht Club.

"The city and state are making big investments in land based and water quality improvements at Wollaston Beach," Gutro said. "Now more than ever, we need volunteers to help with this end of the season cleanup. Last year, we collected more than 50 bags of trash and debris that accumulated along the beach during the summer months," Gutro said.

As part of the state-sponsored Coastsweep, volunteers fill out data forms, which help tabulate the type and amount of trash along coastal areas in Massachusetts. Over 3,500 volunteers are expected to turn out to remove hundreds of thousands of pieces of debris along almost 200 miles of coastline. Volunteers will receive a free Coastsweep plastic water bottle, while supplies last.

The Ward 5 Community Association has sponsored beach cleanups at Wollaston Beach twice annually since 1996. Last year's event attracted 100 people who collected 350 pounds of trash and debris.

REAL ESTATE

After Successful Sports Marketing Stint In Dallas Quincy's Larry Kelly Home Again To Start New Real Estate Career

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Larry Kelly of Quincy, former public relations director for the NHL's Dallas Stars, has changed teams and professions.

Kelly, 38, who led the Stars' public relations efforts when the team won the Stanley Cup in 1999, recently relocated from Dallas to his hometown of Quincy to pursue a career in real estate. He joined Success Real Estate as an agent in June.

Kelly, a 1981 graduate of North Quincy High School and 1985 graduate of the University of New Hampshire, spent nine seasons with the Dallas Stars. He said family was the primary factor in deciding to move back to Quincy.

"My wife and I had been discussing for some time about moving to Quincy. The city and the area has a lot to offer young families and we wanted to get back to our large family in Quincy," Kelly said.

"I became a real estate professional because I wanted to utilize my marketing and public relations expertise while continuing to offer top-notch service. Success has built a strong reputation across the South Shore. I am very happy to be affiliated with Success and look to strengthen that reputation with the skills I have to offer."

Kelly described his time with the Stars as a "great run," capped off by the Stanley Cup-winning season in 1999 when the Stars defeated the Buffalo Sabres in three overtimes in the deciding game.

"I met a lot of great people and have many cherished memories. The night we won the Cup is the most memorable. To win the way we did in three overtimes and the celebration afterwards was incredible," Kelly said.

That celebration led to other unforgettable experiences for Kelly. For one, Kelly was surprised when told his name would be one of the 47 from Dallas inscribed on hockey's holy grail.

"There's criteria for having your name on the Stanley Cup. For players it's how many games and playoff games you played in. The League has to approve requests for other names like staff. I was completely shocked but very appreciative when I learned my name would be engraved on the Cup. I put a lot of hard work into my job as PR director that year and the name inscription was the ultimate pay-off."

Another highlight from the championship season occurred in March of 2000 when Kelly and the rest of the Stars were greeted at a White House reception with then President Bill Clinton.

"I had done a lot of reading on the White House and it's history. I got a private tour which was tremendous. To be sitting in the East Room when the Marine Corps Band plays Hail to the Chief sent chills down my spine."

Kelly was a key figure in that reception, coordinating the team's visit with the National Hockey League, White House and Secret Service.

Clinton isn't the only U.S. President Kelly has met. From 1987 to 1993 Kelly was the assistant public relations director of Major League Baseball's Texas Rangers. At the time, his boss was George W. Bush — now of course President of the United States.

"I met him several times and he's a great guy," Kelly says of our Commander in Chief. "I really enjoyed my time in dealing with him. He's a very personable guy."

While Kelly worked for George W., his father — George H.W. Bush — was making decisions in the Oval Office. And on two occasions, he met former President Bush at two baseball games.

Today, Kelly reflects on his 15 years in professional sports marketing with fond memories but is now focused on his new real estate career and settling in the city he was born and raised. "It was a great run but we decided it's time to move on," he says simply.

The Kelly family has deep roots in Quincy. His father, Larry Kelly, was a Quincy police officer for 39 years before his death in September, 2000. His mother, Joanne, is a first grade teacher at St. Ann's School in Quincy.

Kelly and his wife, Nanette, have two children: Caroline, age 7, a second grader at the Wollaston School; and 4-year-old son, Cameron.

As a real estate agent, Kelly specializes in Quincy but keeps fully informed on all real estate offerings on the South Shore. He can be contacted by calling 781-607-1910.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin. Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Decorating 101: Expert Tips For Getting Started

CNAPS—Whether a recent college graduate renting an apartment for the first time or a newlywed couple about to cross the threshold of a new home, embarking on your first decorating project can be overwhelming.

Empty room, white walls, bare floors—it can be as intimidating as an artist staring at a blank canvas not knowing where or how to begin.

Before you tip your easel over in frustration, consider these suggestions from experts at La/Z Boy to help maximize your space and make your first time a little less intimidating.

Start With The Sofa
Just like every great painting, each decorating project starts with one key visual and builds from there. The sofa, often the largest furniture piece in a room, can provide inspiration for all of your decorating decisions.

For instance, the style and scale of the sofa can help guide other furniture choices, while the upholstery fabric provides the perfect starting point for building a color scheme.

"To begin building a color scheme, simply pick a color from your sofa, along with two complementary colors, and repeat each color a minimum of three times throughout the room in wall coverings, pillows, rugs, window treatments and accessories," said Stephanie DiMarzio, product manager for major upholstery for La/Z Boy. "This is what we call the 'Rule of Threes.'"

Focus On Function
When you're just starting out, odds are you're dealing with somewhat limited funds and, often times, limited space. For these reasons, you may want to look for furnishings that combine fashion with function.

A sleep sofa, for instance, performs double duty, turning any room into an instant guest room. Likewise, many of today's sectional sofas are available with built-in tables, storage drawers, recliners and even sleepers, allowing buyers to satisfy a variety of needs with one piece of furniture.

"Multi-functional furnishings are ideal for maximizing space," DiMarzio said. "By serving more than one purpose, they eliminate the need for additional furnishings, thereby opening up a room and giving the sense of more space."

Another popular option for tight spaces and budgets is a storage ottoman. More than just a footrest, these designs can serve as additional seating while also providing an ideal place for storing pillows, blankets and toys.

Warning! Objects In Store May Be Larger Than They Appear

It's happened to the best of us. You visit a furniture store, fall in love with a particular piece and get it home only to discover that it either won't fit through the door or it takes up the entire room.

The high ceilings and vast floor space in many furniture stores can be very deceiving and give buyers a skewed perspective regarding the size and proportion of the furnishings on display. Be realistic about the amount of space you have to work with and don't forget to bring a tape measure with you when you shop.

By starting with the sofa, focusing on function, and keeping perspective and proportion in mind while shopping, you'll be off to a great start and soon have a home that's a work of art.

Improving Presidents Eye League Crown

Season Opener Saturday At Middleboro

By CHRIS POISSON

Like a jackpot at a casino, the payoff amount keeps increasing and increasing until — bang — one day someone lucky enough enjoys the riches.

So how does this relate to the Quincy High School football team as it prepares to open its 2002 season on the road Saturday afternoon at 1 against Middleboro of the Patriot League?

Well, since head coach Bob Noble took over the reigns before the 1999 season, the Presidents have progressively gotten better and better and maybe this could be the season where Super Bowl dreams are fulfilled.

OK, we might be getting a little ahead of ourselves here, but as our professional football team showed us last year, anything is possible.

"Our goal is we want to win the league," said Noble, whose teams have gone from 1-10 to 3-7 to 5-4-1. "But let's not get ahead of ourselves. Let's take it one game at a time."

"We expect the improvement to continue. We've gotten progressively better in terms of wins and losses over the last three years. We're at the point now that we can compete with the better teams in the league."

Quincy met Middleboro in the season opener last year and easily walked away with a 27-0 victory. After that drubbing, the Sachems went on to lose all their games and this summer head coach Norm Tardiff left the team.

"The problem is they have a new coaching staff, so what they're going to do is not going to be the same as we saw last year," Noble said. "So we go into the first game a little unsure as to what we're looking at."

What Quincy is sure about is its running game, which will consist of the quartet of senior captain Matt Ramponi, juniors J.J. Niamkey and Roger Palermo, and sophomore Jose Ortiz.

"As a group, these are the four best running backs I've seen in 10 years here," Noble said. "We've always had maybe one individual who is a pretty good player, but now we have four kids that we think will do very well. We'll try to use more two-back sets."

The leader of the pack is Niamkey, a speedy and shift tailback who is capable of scoring from anywhere on the field. Last season Niamkey began the year as a wide receiver on the junior varsity team and switched over to tailback because of injuries.

Noble called Niamkey to the varsity team for the final four games of the season. Coincidentally, the Presidents won all four games to finish with its first winning season in seven years.

"We seem to have a home run, big-play capability that we haven't really shown in the past on a consistent basis," said Noble in reference to Niamkey, who had five touchdowns over 50 yards in the preseason.

Ramponi will start at wingback and will also see some carries at tailback. Palermo is back after missing his sophomore year. As a freshman, he turned in a strong campaign on the freshman team, including a four-touchdown game on Turkey Day.

"Right now he's the true backup to Niamkey," Noble said. "He's looked extremely good. It's just a matter of him learning the offense. He's been away from football for a year."

Due to some nagging injuries in the preseason, Ortiz has stepped forward to earn a varsity roster spot. He was a standout on last year's freshman team that went 9-1.

"He's going to be tremendous when he's a senior," Noble said. "Ramponi has been hurt this preseason and Ortiz has stepped up and looked great."

For the first time in two years Quincy will have a new starting quarterback. Senior Kevin O'Connell has the tough task of replacing Mike Lorenzano, who passed for over 2,000 yards, 20 touchdowns and rushed for 14 scores in two seasons.

"Michael Lorenzano is going to be tough to replace, but Kevin O'Connell has looked tremendous in the preseason," Noble said. "He's a little bit of a different style quarterback than Lorenzano. He's a throwing quarterback and we're probably going to throw the ball more than we've had in the past."

Senior captains and receivers Shawn Munchbach and Mike Sullivan make up O'Connell's receiving group.

COOL RUNNING

Because rubber hoses and belts eventually wear out, it is a good idea to replace radiator hoses prior to failure, every 3-4 years. The same can be said for fan belts, as well as the single "serpentine" belt for vehicles with no fan belts. Belts and hoses may look good on the outside but may be failing internally any time after the recommended 3-to 4-year replacement interval. In addition to the hoses and belts, the major system components, such as the radiator and fan, water pump, etc., should also be kept track of and serviced per the recommended interval, in either time or miles accrued. Engine coolant should be drained and replaced every four years.

William Degan Memorial Road Race Raises $30,000

The annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race recently raised just over $30,000 and attracted more than 1,500 participants at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The 10th anniversary of the event commemorates the life and career of Degan, a deputy U.S. marshal and former Marine Corps lieutenant killed in the line of duty in August 1992.

The Quincy native earned numerous awards during his career, including the prestigious Attorney General's Award for Excellence in Law Enforcement.

"The numbers are down a little bit from last year, but quite frankly we're happy with the turnout," said Rick Fitzpatrick, race director. "In our minds it's a great tribute to Bill. It's nice to see a lot of his friends that you don't see often. Ten years have gone by and a lot of people haven't forgotten him. It's just a great day."

In the 5K race, Stephen Putnam of Weymouth was the overall winner finishing in 16:51. Jennifer Cerelli of Hingham was the top female runner with a time of 22:02.

In the 10K race, Paul Powell of Wrentham was the overall winner with a time of 36:35. Caitlin Remby of Westwood finished in 41:46 as the top female runner.

Here are results from other Quincy participants who en-

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Cancer Society Underscores Importance Of Informed Prostate Cancer Decision Making

For men and their loved ones, two of the many issues surrounding prostate cancer are fear and confusion.

An estimated 189,000 men in the United States will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year. In Massachusetts alone, we'll see an estimated 4,600 new cases and 700 deaths.

According to the American Cancer Society, uncertainty over testing and treatment can cause some men to ignore the realities of cancer. And in some cases, men will make rash decisions about their healthcare without fully understanding all available options.

The American Cancer Society continues to promote a national public awareness and education campaign in response to these concerns, encouraging men to talk with their doctors about their prostate health and the benefits of informed decision making.

"Facing these decisions can be difficult, and it's even harder for men who try to make them alone," said Deborah Smith, American Cancer Society regional cancer control director. "The American Cancer Society encourages men to discuss their options with their doctors and families."

"In some cases, a physician may recommend a period of 'watchful waiting,' using regular checkups to safely monitor the status of the cancer. When treatment is recommended, a patient armed with factual information is much more comfortable with his decision."

Free Prostate Screening At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center will host a free prostate screening today (Thursday) from 5 to 7 p.m. in the QMC's Ambulatory Care Department on the second floor.

Another free prostate screening will be held at QMC on Wednesday, Oct. 2 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Space is limited and advance registration is required.

The screening will include both a Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) blood test and a digital rectal exam (DRE).

The examinations will be conducted by urologists on staff at Quincy Medical Center.

To schedule an appointment, call Quincy Medical Center at (617) 376-4016.

Prostate cancer is the second most common type of cancer found in American men, behind only skin cancer.

There will be roughly 189,000 new cases of prostate cancer in the United States this year, according to the American Cancer Society.

Boosting Kids' Safety

(NAP's) - Millions of babies and small children are strapped into their car seats every day, helping to protect them from injury should a crash occur. However, studies show older children ages 4 to 8 weighing between 40 and 80 pounds and up to 4'9" tall, are rarely restrained properly in the car.

That's significant because traffic crashes are the number one cause of death for children. Booster seats are necessary to fit older kids up to a height which allows the vehicle's shoulder and lap belts to fit properly and safely.

Less than 10 percent of children who should be in booster seats are actually belted in properly, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA). To help combat this alarming trend, the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA) has joined with NHTSA in a national campaign to raise public awareness of the importance of booster seat use.

"Proper booster seat use can save lives," says NADA Chairman H. Carter Myers, III. "We are committed to helping parents hear that message."

Visit www.nhtsa.gov/people/injury/childps/booster_seat/page1.html for information on the proper use of booster seats.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

REPLACEMENT CANDIDATES

If you have lost teeth, dentures are a replacement option. Partial dentures, which are used to replace one to many missing teeth, are often held in place by metal clasps that attach to adjacent (abutment) teeth. Fixed partial dentures or bridges attach permanently to natural teeth adjacent to spaces. Full dentures, on the other hand, are removable devices that fit over gums or over a small number of remaining teeth (overdentures). They may be fabricated prior to tooth extraction and set in place just after teeth are removed (immediate dentures), or made after gums have healed (conventional). As gums shrink while healing, follow-up appointments will be necessary to adjust dentures, especially immediate dentures.

Regular dental check ups are important. The dentist will examine your mouth to see if your dentures continue to fit properly. He or she will also examine your mouth for signs of oral diseases including cancer. With regular professional care, a positive attitude, and persistence, you can become one of the millions of people who wear their dentures with a smile. For more information or to schedule an appointment, call us at (617) 479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. About 70% of Americans aged 65 years and older still have some, or all, of their natural teeth.

RELIGION

Fr. Heery Memorial
Golf Tournament Oct. 2

Sacred Heart Parish will host its 10th annual Golf Tournament Wednesday, Oct. 2 at the Presidents Golf Course, West Squantum St., North Quincy.

The annual event has been dedicated to the memory of Fr. Cornelius Heery, who was pastor of Sacred Heart Parish for 20 years until his death in 1996.

The Florida free style play will begin with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Check-in is at noon in the clubhouse.

Following the round, an awards dinner will be held at the Tirrell Room of the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Entry fee is $100 per golfer which includes greens fee, cart, tournament shirt, dinner and awards.

Individual golfers and foursomes are encouraged to register. The event sells out annually so early registration is recommended.

For registration information contact the Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666.

Individuals and companies may sponsor a green for a tax deductible donation of $150. All donations towards the success of the tournament are welcome.

All proceeds from the event directly benefit Sacred Heart Parish and stay within the parish to support its many programs.

Alice A. Cosgrove, 89

Homemaker

A funeral Mass for Alice A. (Murray) Cosgrove, 89, of Quincy, a homemaker, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at St. John's Church.

She died Sunday at Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Born in Boston, Mrs. Cosgrove lived in Milton before moving to Quincy eight years ago.

Wife of the late Joseph I. McArdle and Joseph I. Cosgrove, she is survived by a son, Joseph I. McArdle Jr. of Marshfield; a daughter, Susan M. Maffie of Quincy; two stepdaughters, Claire Ebersole of Lumburg and Elizabeth Kelley of North Carolina; two sisters, Marie Buckley of Springfield and

ALICE COSGROVE

Catherine Donnelly of Quincy, five grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. Burial will be in Milton Cemetery.

Visiting was 4 to 8 p.m. Wednesday at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Joan E. Kenefick, 79

Co-Owned Two Businesses

A funeral Mass for Joan E. (Pesaturo) Kenefick, 79, of North Quincy, who owned and operated two businesses along with her husband, was celebrated Tuesday in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Mrs. Kenefick died Sept. 14 at her home.

Born in Canton, she had lived in West Yarmouth and Canton before moving to North Quincy 15 years ago.

Mrs. Kenefick, along with her husband, Frank M. Kenefick, were the owners and operators of J. Kenefick & Son, a plating business, from 1964 to 1990. They also owned and operated the Storage Shed in Canton from 1984 to the present.

She retired in 1997 after 30 years in business.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Frank M. Kenefick Jr., of Canton; two daughters, Joan E. Kremidas and Cynthia M. Kenefick, both of North Quincy; a brother, Robert Pesaturo of Canton; and six grandchildren, Jackie, Frankie, Francesca, Gabrielle, Zachary and Rebecca.

Arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to the Shriners Burn Institute, 51 Blossom St., Boston, MA 02109.

Mary L. Reilly, 79

Retired Colonial Federal Savings Bank President

Mary L. Reilly, 79, who made banking history when she was named president of the Colonial Federal Savings Bank, died Sept. 4 at Milton Hospital after a brief illness.

A lifelong Randolph resident, Miss Reilly, who started her career as a teller, became president of Colonial Federal Savings Bank with headquarters in Wollaston in 1985, the first woman in Massachusetts to be president of a federal chartered savings bank. She retired in 1990.

She had attained another career milestone earlier in January, 1979 when she was the first woman elected to the Colonial Federal Savings Bank's Board of Directors. She was elected director emerita in October, 2001.

Her 45-year career at Colonial Federal began in 1945 as a teller and she soon started her club to the top, step by step.

She was promoted to a supervisor's position and then to office manager. She was named treasurer in 1968, vice president in 1973, senior vice president in 1980 and president five years later.

During her career at Colonial Federal Savings she saw and helped the bank grow from its location on Beach St. to branches in Holbrook and Weymouth.

After becoming president, she credited Colonial Federal Savings with making it possible because of its progressive policy in the area of women employees.

And, she noted, it was no longer as difficult for women in general to have a successful career in banking.

"It's getting easier," she was quoted, "I think there's more recognition of women's talents than there used to be."

Miss Reilly was born in Randolph and lived there all her life. She graduated from that town's then Stetson High School and Bridgewater State College.

She started out on a teaching career but changed her mind, deciding to enter the business and banking field instead.

She attended Bentley College nights, graduated from the Weaver Course of Real Estate at Bardett College, the School of Executive Development of Savings and Loans at the University of Connecticut and the Graduate School of Savings and Loans at the University of Indiana.

She was a member of the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Miss Reilly was the sister of the late Thomas, William and James P. Reilly. She is survived by many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Mary's Church, Randolph, Sept. 9. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Randolph.

Funeral arrangements were by the Hurley Funeral Home, 134 South Main St., Randolph.

Born in Quincy, she graduated from Quincy High School. She had lived in Weymouth since 1952.

She is survived by her husband, Rein DeYoung; and a sister, Lillian T. Coughlin of Quincy. She was the sister-in-law of Frank and Grace Bartlett of Weymouth.

Donations may be made to charity.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Decisions, decisions, decisions... Life is one hectic round of decisions and none is harder than the one you have to make in the split second when the cafeteria line passes the dessert counter!

Many people have difficulty in making decisions. Some make decisions too quickly and others too slowly. Some people make decisions easily. There are others who appear to do nothing but wring their hands and bite their fingernails when they are confronted with the necessity of making a decision.

Every day, each of us makes decisions that determine the direction in which our lives will move. No one, no matter how wise or how highly principled, can make the right decision every time. To err is no disgrace. The disgrace lies in not learning from our mistakes, not recovering from our defeats, not picking ourselves up, brushing ourselves off and trying again.

Yet many of life's problems are insoluble. They just have to be lived with. And, yes, the problem of making decisions is certainly one of these...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ideas earn you the respect of your colleagues. But you'll have to present some hard facts and figures if you hope to persuade those who make the big decisions to support you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep those bright Bull's eyes focused on the project at hand. Avoid distractions. There'll be lots of time for fun and games later. Expect to get welcome news on the 22nd.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might soon have to decide about moving a relationship from its current status to another level. Don't let anyone influence your decision. It must be yours and yours alone.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You can finally get off that emotional roller coaster and get back to focusing on your goals without interruptions through the rest of the week. A nice change is due by the 22nd.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Trying to make an impression on some people runs into a bit of a snag at first, but it all works out. An old and almost forgotten personal matter once again needs attention.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A rise in your energy level helps you finish an especially demanding task. Take some time now to spend with family and friends before starting a new project.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good time to re-establish contact with trusted former associates who might be able to offer good advice regarding that career change you've been contemplating.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your resourcefulness combined with a calm, cool approach help you work your way out of a knotty situation and avoid a potentially serious misunderstanding.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A calm, quiet period allows you to recharge your energies. But on the 20th, you're ready to saddle up and gallop off in pursuit of your goals.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family matters need your attention. Check things out carefully. There might still be unresolved tensions that could hinder your efforts to repair damaged relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to take a stand and show as much passion on your own behalf as you do when arguing for the rights of others. You might be happily surprised by the reaction.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You bring sense and sensitivity to a confusing situation. Things settle down by the 20th, leaving you free to enjoy a weekend of fun and relaxation with friends and family.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a talent for being able to perceive possibilities where others see only problems.

Raiders Cruise Past Boston Latin, 34-7

By CHRIS POISSON

Senior Dave Buttomer's 18th birthday last Friday should have been more enjoyable as the North Quincy High School football team opened its season with an easy 34-7 victory over Boston Latin.

But the birthday boy must have been razzed by some of his teammates, especially quad-captain Darryl Zoia, following the night game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Ahead 27-0 in the third quarter, Zoia picked off quarterback Peter Martin's deflected pass and the 6-foot, 240-pound linebacker rumbled 40 yards into the end zone for an apparent touchdown.

On the return, though, Buttomer, a defensive end, was called for a penalty, negating Zoia's TD and assuring some good-natured ribbing when he got back to the sideline.

"Zoia would have had a touchdown if it weren't for Buttomer," joked head coach Tony Green. "It was a hustle play, a hustle block. It just didn't work out."

All joking aside, the Red Raiders made very few mistakes in an impressive complete-game performance, racking up close to 350 yards in total offense while holding the Wolfpack under 140.

"I was very happy with the way we executed against a strong Boston Latin team," Green said. "We were a little bit too strong for them."

North Quincy kicks off league play tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when it hosts Old Colony League powerhouse Marshfield. The Red Raiders left to the Rams, 27-8, last season.

"Marshfield is tough, strong, fast," Green said. "They execute the Wing T to perfection. It will be another challenge."

And North Quincy was clearly up for the challenge in the season opener.

On its first series, it looked to be in mid-season form when it marched 90 yards on 11 plays with an effective combination of tough running and long pass plays.

After overthrowing his first pass, senior quarterback and quad-captain Kevin Holleran tossed a beautiful 37-yard pass to senior tight end and quad-captain Matt Francis while under extreme pressure.

Later, on third-and-9 at the Boston Latin 26, he hit Kellan Losi for a 20-yard pass down to the 6, setting up senior tailback Ryan Farnham's touchdown run to the right corner on the next play.

Holleran found Francis on the 2-point conversion for an 8-0 lead with 1:18 left in the first quarter.

"I was very pleased with the way we controlled the clock and controlled the ball," Green said. "That was a missing link last year."

In the second, Farnham appeared to be stuffed up the middle but he cut back to his left and blasted through a pair of Boston Latin defenders en route to the end zone for a 68-yard TD run. North Quincy missed the 2-point conversion and led 14-0 with 3:58 left in the half.

The defense, meanwhile, matched the offense's play on Boston Latin's next series. Junior linebacker Brandon Neves sacked Martin on back-to-back plays for a loss of 15 yards, forcing the Wolfpack to punt from their 17.

With great field position after the punt at the Boston Latin 45, North Quincy called a timeout with 1:28 left to talk about what it was going to do offensively to get points on the board before the half.

On the first play, senior quad-captain Gary Dalton got behind the secondary and Holleran found him in stride for a 45-yard TD and a 20-0 lead at the half.

"Holleran kept his composure and threw the ball well," said Green, as Holleran finished 3 of 5 for 92 yards, all in the first half.

In the second half, North Quincy scored on the opening possession when senior tailback James Coughlin found paydirt from 17 yards out. Senior Corey Piazza's extra point made it 27-0. On the drive, Farnham had a powerful 45-yard run in which he broke several tackles along the left sideline. He finished with 151 yards and two touchdowns on just 10 carries.

"Ryan Farnham is one of our best running backs," Green said. "He's explosive. He's strong. He runs through blocks and he can shake some tacklers."

After Zoia's interception, Coughlin ran three straight times for 14 yards and Dalton followed with an 11-yard TD run up the middle for a 34-0 lead after Piazza's extra point.

Boston Latin got on the board late in the game when Chris Saunders darted into the end zone from 13 yards out.

Led by Farnham, the Red Raiders used six different backs to rush for 256 yards and four touchdowns. And tomorrow the ground game should only get stronger when senior speedster Chris Dolbear returns from an injury.

Said Green, "I think we did well on the ground, didn't we?"

"The kids played their hearts out," he added. "It's only one game but it shows what happens when you lift weights all year. The seniors have given everything they have. They're dedicated to this year. It's a nice way to start."

Quincy does have an experience group returning with senior captain and league all-star Steve Ekunseitan and Boyle at defensive end, and senior Mike Cox and Ramponi at defensive tackle.

"We weren't very big up front last year but we were pretty good and we expect that to continue," Noble said.

In the secondary, Munchbach will start at safety and senior Bob Ritchie and Niamkey will be the corners.

"We're at a point with our program where we have a little depth, we're going to be competitive and I expect us to continue on the upward swing."

Granite Rock, Roll Over Clinton

The Quincy Granite won their second straight game last Saturday night with a 24-14 victory on the road against the Clinton Irish Blizzard.

The win improves Quincy's record to 6-2 with two games left on the schedule in the regular season.

The Granite hosts

Middleboro Saturday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium and the following week they close out the season at home against undefeated Charlestown in a make-up game.

Quincy sits in third place in the Eastern Conference of the Eastern Football League behind front-runner Charlestown (8-0) and Middleboro (7-2).

A win over the Cobras would push the Granite into second place. In the first meeting Aug. 10, the Cobras pulled out a 6-0 win in overtime when they returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown.

David Guerriero's TD Lifts Storm

The Squantum Storm opened their season with a thrilling, 12-6 victory over the Quincy Point Panthers in recent Quincy Youth Football action.

Tight end David Guerriero caught a 6-yard TD pass from quarterback Matt Jaehning with 12 seconds left in the game for the win.

The score was set up when defensive tackle Nick Brown recovered a fumble. Two plays later Jaehning hit Mike Garland (3 catches, 105 yards) for a 60-yard completion to the Quincy Point 6.

The win was the first in two years for the Storm, breaking a string of nine straight losses. It also was the first time in history they defeated the Panthers and the first time they opened the season with a win.

Fullback Mike Horgan helped Squantum open the scoring when he broke loose for a 35-yard run to the Quincy Point 1-yard line, setting up Jaehning's touchdown on a sneak.

The Storm's offensive line of Roger Cufalde, Nash Winters, Jay Lewis, Richie Groves, R.J. Barden, Nick Brown and Matt Edgerly controlled the line of scrimmage. Ian Campbell, Tom Pasquantonio, Guerriero and Connor Roche played well defensively. Roche also had an exciting 40-yard kickoff return.

The Panthers tied the game in the first half when quarterback James Aikens threw a beautiful pass to wideout Alex Chan for a 65-yard TD. Brian McQuinn and P.J. Banks had strong defensive games.

In Week 2, the Storm fell to a very strong Houghs Neck team, 30-9. Brian Sullivan scored twice on long runs for the Manets and Tom Hazelhurst and Teddy Walsh each scored once. Quarterback Jared Tucker threw two 2-point conversions and ran for another. Camillo Arrendondo and Mike Little turned in strong defensive games.

Squantum scored on a 55-yard pass from Jaehning to Garland. Guerriero scored the 2-point conversion. Billy Kiley made a nice 15-yard diving catch for a first down. Brown and Edgerly made several strong defensive plays.

Women's Fitness Class

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct women's fitness classes at the Fore River Clubhouse beginning Monday, Sept. 23 and ending Nov. 8.

There are separate classes offered at 8:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. with the same level of instruction offered at each time.

There will be one class on Tuesday and Thursday that will be held at 9 a.m.

Registration costs $35 and will be taken in person at the clubhouse Sept. 23 and Sept. 24 at the time of the classes.

along with senior Anthony Boyle and senior tight end J.D. Hyacinthe, who replaces first-team league all-star Scott Kelley.

"Offensively we feel pretty comfortable with what we're doing," Noble said.

The defense has not been a comfortable subject, though, particularly at linebacker. When you look over the roster, you'll quickly notice the Presidents no longer have the triad of Tom Shruhan, Kris Kambarian and Kelley—all league all-stars a year ago.

"Defensively we're very green at linebacker," Noble said. "We've lost three outstanding linebackers who were all all-league and are now playing in college. If there has been a weakness for us so far, it has been we're inexperienced at linebacker and at times it has shown. But we've got a lot of talent."

That talent includes Hyacinthe, Palermo, Ramponi, Ortiz, Ohlson and senior Greg Morton.

On the defensive line,

Project S.A.F.E. Plans To Check Seniors' Smoke Detectors Oct. 5

October will be Fire Prevention and Safe-Month in Quincy and Saturday, Oct. 5, will be Senior Serve Day.

That's the day when teams of Quincy firefighters and volunteers from the Rotary Club will fan out across the city to check the smoke detectors in the homes of senior citizens "at risk."

If necessary, they will replace old batteries and install new detectors and provide other items and materials that will make the homes a safer place for those over 75 or with special needs.

For the sixth consecutive year.

S.A.F.E.(Smoke Alarms For Seniors) is sponsored by Beechwood on the Bay, the Quincy Fire Department and the Quincy Rotary Club. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) is also a sponsor.

"This unique program provides an essential citywide service for seniors at no cost to seniors or to the city," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

"Since we launched this initiative six years ago, we have installed more than 5,000 smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy seniors."

Residents of Quincy can still help out on Project S.A.F.E.

"We are currently fundraising to purchase detectors, batteries and night lights," said Beals. "Any ideas you have in this area will be appreciated."

"We invite you to take an active role in identifying seniors in your ward and throughout the city who are 'at risk' and will benefit from Project S.A.F.E."

"In addition to identifying and referring seniors in need, we ask that you join us on Senior Saturday to 'team up' with Beechwood, Quincy Firefighters and community leadership in this very important and visible community service day."

Volunteers will meet at 8 a.m. on Senior Saturday for a quick training program, then divide up into 20 service teams, check the seniors' fire detectors and conclude the day by 12 noon.

"Please note," said Beals, "that our Quincy project has become a national model and is being promoted as such throughout the country by NFPA."

On A 3-2 License Board Vote WaterWorks Given Verbal Warning On Police Incident

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

On a 3-2 vote, the License Board gave WaterWorks in Marina Bay a verbal warning at Tuesday's meeting stemming from eight police officers accused of misconduct while on detail at Marina Bay June 9-10.

The detail was a party attended by the New England Patriots.

Voting against the motion made by acting Fire Chief

Paul O'Connell were Chairman Joseph Shea and Walter White, director of inspectional services.

The Sun Begins Its 35th Year

The Quincy Sun begins its 35th year with this issue as "Historic Quincy's Hometown Weekly Newspaper."

The first issue of The Sun appeared Sept. 26, 1968 and since then we have concentrated coverage on what's going on in Quincy.

We're proud to carry the name Quincy in our banner.

We have been blessed with loyal readers down through the years, readers who like having a community newspaper — a newspaper devoted to their community interests.

And we have readers in just about all 50 states, former Quincy residents who like to keep up on what's going on "back home." As they say, "Once a Quincyite, always a Quincyite."

The Sun has won a number of New England Press awards down through the years.

It was also designated a National Blue Ribbon Newspaper for its "high standards of service to the community."

And has been recognized by many local organizations for that service to the community.

A newspaper has a responsibility to its community and to its readers to report the news fairly and accurately. We have tried to do that since 1968 and will continue to do so.

As we begin our 35th year we want to again thank you — our readers and advertisers — for your continued support and encouragement these past 34 years. And a special thank you goes to our faithful new carriers who bring The Sun to Quincy homes.

You, all of you, as we have said before, are as much a part of The Quincy Sun family as we, the staff. We look ahead to the future with optimism and faith in Quincy.

Thank you, most sincerely,

D'Amico Indicted On Extortion, False Statement Charges

Former City Councillor Michael D'Amico, 27, who lost his bid for a fourth two-year term on the Council last November, has been indicted by a federal grand jury for extortion.

The indictment charges that, while a Ward 4 councillor, D'Amico extorted $2,500 from an unnamed person last Oct. 15 in order to influence a road reconstruction project in Quincy.

The identity of the extortion victim was not divulged in the indictment nor was the road reconstruction project immediately identified.

D'Amico is further charged with making false statements when he told FBI agents on or about April 8 that he had never taken cash or anything of value from any person in excess of campaign limits.

Conviction on the charges carry a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, followed by three years of supervised release, plus a $250,000 fine.

The case is still being investigated by Assistant U.S. Attorney Despina E. Billings of the Public Corruption and Special Prosecutions Unit in U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan's office.

The Oct. 15 date was midway between the September preliminary election and the November general election in which D'Amico lost his Ward 4 seat to Bryan Connolly 2,463 to 1,891.

Will Hold Public Hearings

City Council To Probe Marshall School Mold

By TOM HENSHAW

Two City Council committees have been asked to investigate the apparent re-emergence of mold in the ceilings at the Clifford Marshall Elementary School in Quincy Point.

Council President Daniel Raymond filed the resolution Monday night asking the Education and the Public Works Committee to hold hearings on the problem.

"A year after the school opened (in September, 1998) mold was discovered and it is still there," said Raymond. "It's time the city had a complete investigation of the matter."

"It's disturbing," said Rep. Ron Mariano, who has the dual role as state representative and school committee member from the area, "to go to the School Committee meeting and find out if the problem is not taken care of yet."

The School Committee has authorized $10,000 for an investigation to determine whether the four-year-old building at 200 Moody St. Extension is structurally deficient and who is responsible.

"It's a brand new building," said Mariano. "We should not be dealing with

The Marshall School has been plagued since it opened with a mold problem that was reported periodically by the maintenance staff.

"At the end of last year," said Mayor William Phelan, who is also chairman of the School Committee, "we were told that part of the problem may have to do with the use of the air conditioning system in the summer."

"There were no kids in the school this summer and the air conditioning was not used so there should be no mold. The Marshall School opened without incident."

"Then the School Committee had a meeting at the school and we heard from the PTO and representatives of the teachers that there was a problem with mold and air quality."

"We agreed that it should

Tourism Information Kiosk Opens At McIntyre Mall

A NEW TOURISM visitor kiosk was opened by Mayor William Phelan last week on McIntyre Mall outside City Hall. With him, from the left, are Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society; John Stoberski, South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Joanne Dondero, Abigail's Crossing; Robert Galligan, Best Western Adams Inn, both members of the mayor's tourism task force, and Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Park. The kiosk is being manned by volunteers who will provide information distribute literature about Quincy to visitors. It will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Oct. 25 and reopen in the spring.

Auto Sales Firm Warned On Number Of Cars For Sale

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

It didn't matter that the landlord of President's Auto Sales, 150 East Howard St., was an attorney speaking on behalf of his tenant, Carlos Saliba, regarding too many cars at his lot.

The License Board reprimanded Saliba for having more than 25 cars as prescribed in the license. Saliba had 42 cars on his lot as of this past week according to Chairman Joseph Shea.

Shea said Det. Joseph Manning visited the lot and reported that there were 42 cars.

John Hajjar, owner, tried to explain that the license states that there be no more than 25 cars for sale. He said that out of the 42, some were ready to be picked up so that they shouldn't be counted as for sale.

Saliba tried to explain why he had 42 cars by telling the board some of the cars were for sale and some waiting to be shipped.

However, Shea said the license reads that there be no more than 25 cars at all times.

Walter White, director of inspection services, said according to the zoning laws, there are 25 spaces for 25 cars end of story, and that Saliba is in violation of the zoning law, and placing the occupancy of the Yard Rock

Cafe in jeopardy. The cafe is owned by Joseph Hajjar.

He suggested the matter be placed in file but said if a future violation occurred, action would be taken.

Shea said he felt the "board had been way too lenient" and said "if you don't know the difference between 25 and 42," and that the used car business is a tough business and the board will "stick to 25 cars."

Acting Fire Chief Paul O'Connell said there was a proper way to handle this and that is to request in writing a request for more cars and an improper way, to have 42 cars on your own.

be looked into and we appropriated $10,000 to see if there was a cover up of the issues that may have occurred and take action."

One of the issues involves is the unauthorized painting of some ceiling tiles which no one can explain. An examination indicated that there was no mold growing on them.

Mold could cause health problems to students and staff of the school by leading to respiratory infections and chronic ailments such as asthma.

Maher Probers Subpoena City Council Records

Members of the City Council have received issued by the FBI to turn over their records in the ongoing investigation of former chief plumbing inspector Ralph J. Maher.

Council President Daniel Raymond said his subpoena directed him to produce his records relating to Maher, including complaints he may have received about his work. The councillors are directed to turn over their records by tomorrow (Friday).

A federal grand jury has been investigating Maher for reasons that have not been disclosed.

Maher already faces trial in Superior Court involving his arrest along with Mayor

James Sheets' executive secretary Charles Keating for breaking into a City Hall office Dec. 15, 2001.

Taken in the break into the city personnel director's office were parts of Maher's personnel file, which was the subject of a federal subpoena dating back to December, 2000.

Board Grants Food License To Market

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After several refusals to former owners of the Quincy Market Washington St., the License Board granted a common victualer license to Ngoc Van Pham at Tuesday's meeting.

The site is the former Sher Drug Store.

Explaining why the board finally gave its approval, Chairman Joseph Shea said board members previously "used to cringe" because of the nature of the corner and no place to park.

However, he added with that renovation going on at the former Patriot Ledger building and a resurgence in the area he said he felt there would be "tons of walking trade."

Marilyn Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association, said the only concern she had was that the store is amidst an historical area and the signage should be restricted for a "corner with such visibility."

Pham said he was counting on students who have evening classes at Quincy College to "run in and grab a good sandwich."

The market will have a very limited menu and sell donuts, Danish, sandwiches, meatball subs, hot dogs and salads.

The hours of operation will be from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

Animal Rescue League Honored By Council

In celebration of its 20th anniversary, the City Council Monday presented The Quincy Animal Rescue League a commendation in observance of their service to the community.

"I hope 20-30 years from now the animal league will still be functioning. It has been a great success and I want to thank you all," said John McDuff, resident of the Quincy Animal League.

Improvements made over the years are dramatic according to the City Council, including passage of law exempting the city from the state pound seizure law, building bigger facilities that replaced the cramped and deteriorated dog pound, passage of an ordinance prohibiting the display of non-domesticated animals for entertainment and listing animals available for adoption in local newspapers, including The Quincy Sun, and Quincy Access television.

• On Sept. 27, 1540, in Rome, the Society of Jesus — a Roman Catholic missionary organization — receives its charter from Pope Paul III. The Jesuit order played an important role in the Counter-Reformation and eventually succeeded in converting millions around the world to Catholicism.

• On Sept. 29, 1758, Horatio Nelson, Britain's most celebrated naval hero, is born. In the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic wars, he won a series of crucial victories and saved England from possible invasion by France.

• On Sept. 23, 1806, amid much public excitement, American explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark return to St. Louis, Mo., from the first recorded overland journey from the Mississippi River to the Pacific coast and back. The Lewis and Clark Expedition had set off more than two years before to explore the territory of the Louisiana Purchase.

• On Sept. 26, 1957, "West Side Story," composed by Leonard Bernstein, opens at the Winter Garden Theatre on Broadway. For the groundbreaking musical, Bernstein provided a rhapsodic score that may celebrate as his greatest achievement as a composer.

• On Sept. 24, 1961, beloved sitcom "I Love Lucy" airs its last episode. The show, created by Lucille Ball and her husband, Desi Arnaz, ran for 10 years. "I Love Lucy" became one of the most popular TV sitcoms in history, ranking in the top three shows for six years.

• On Sept. 28, 1968, the Beatles' single "Hey Jude" hits the top of the charts. The song had debuted two weeks earlier at No. 10, the highest spot ever achieved by a new release up to that time. At over seven minutes in length, it was the longest song ever to hit No. 1, a record it holds to this day.

Willow gets anxious and protective at first, but when she realizes she can trust you, she is a loyal and loving friend for life. She has a very high ball drive, and is very energetic. She will require at least an hour and a half of play walk time every day. She gets along with older children, but cannot live in a small home because they are too active and distracting for her. She does not like bicycles or motorcycles.

BAXTER, 2 1/2 yo, fuxed Pit Bull (NM). Very special and affectionate. Also well mannered, however, no other pets, please. Baxter loves to go for rides in the car, loves to curl up on the couch with someone, is OK with older children (14 y.o. and older) and loves to be "scratched" all over! Baxter will need 30 minutes to an hour of walking/activity/play daily. He is a pure marshmallow outside of the Shelter — adopt him and see for yourself!

McDermott Had Key Help

Topping an opponent with the name Tobin is no easy political accomplishment.

Patrick McDermott did it last week, taking Quincy and enough of the county to wrest the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County Register of Probate from Mark Tobin.

Winning "The Battle Of Quincy" by 1,336 votes made the difference with McDermott's county-wide margin only 1,210, almost tempting enough for a recount. But Tobin is going to let the close count stand.

Hometown Quincy was a crucial battleground for the two Quincy candidates. It went to McDermott, but he readily acknowledges he certainly didn't do it by himself.

He had some pretty good help.

HAROLD

It came from former Mayor James Sheets, former Register of Probate Thomas Hughes — and the late Paul Harold, former city council president and Register of Deeds who died Aug. 12 after a long bout with cancer.

"Paul was a huge factor in the victory," says McDermott, who served with him on the city council and as his executive assistant after he was elected Norfolk County Register of Deeds in 2000. Harold gave him advice in running a county-wide campaign and endorsed him.

A photo of Harold holding a McDermott campaign sign and shaking his hand along with a worded endorsement appeared in a political ad in The Sun Sept. 12, just before the primary election. It also appeared in The Ledger.

The advertisement noted that the photo was taken in May and the endorsement made at the same time.

The advertisement obviously helped McDermott, but the photo and endorsement drew some criticism because of it appearing after Harold's death.

McDermott, however, says: "Before Paul died, he told me 'Make sure you use my endorsement.'"

"He also insisted that we have the photo taken," McDermott says. "He said, 'We've got to get this photo taken and use it.'"

McDermott says Harold also wanted to do a radio commercial and was working on the script. "But we wouldn't have used that after he died," McDermott said.

Sheets played a major role, too.

Sheets, who lost the mayor's office and a seventh term by 17 votes to William Phelan, Tobin's brother-in-law, was strongly in the McDermott camp.

He sent out a large number of "Dear Friend" cards, made telephone calls, and hosted a fund-raiser for McDermott. And capped it off by planting a McDermott campaign sign on his front lawn on Furnace Brook Parkway.

Another important role was that of Hughes, a lifelong West Quincy resident, who served 22 years as Register of Probate, retiring in 2000.

"Tom Hughes' endorsement was a big one," says McDermott.

And then there was the lady of the campaign, McDermott's wife, Tracy, who is expecting their first child at the end of October.

A former school committee candidate, she was out on the campaign trail for her husband.

And on election day was down in Squantum, standing beside the Tobin supporters — including Mayor Phelan who was there for his brother-in-law — and politely asking approaching voters: "Can you give my husband a vote?"

McDermott did well in Squantum.

Tobin conceded late election night and later called McDermott.

"He congratulated me and said it was a good campaign. He was very gracious."

"I think," McDermott added, "people liked a little of both of us."

"It was a gentleman's campaign. Nothing dirty. We campaigned on issues and qualifications. I'm not gloating over our victory. I'm not taking anything for granted as we head toward the final election."

He sees the final face-off between him and Republican Richard Schmidt of Weymouth as another "gentleman's campaign."

Schmidt, who was appointed Register when Hughes retired, has his office in the Probate Court on the second floor of the Registry of Deeds building in Dedham. McDermott is on the first floor.

"He came down the next day to congratulate me," McDermott says. "And said, 'Let's go on to November and may the best man win.'"

Mark Tobin, 44, son of former Mayor and present Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin and brother of state Rep. Steve Tobin, was making his first bid for elective office. And took his defeat like a soldier.

"This isn't the end of the world," he said. "There's always tomorrow."

Observers are wondering if tomorrow could mean next year's city election.

Incumbent Greg Hanley will be leaving the Ward 1 city council seat. Tobin lives in Adams Shore in that ward.

A number of candidates are already in the race or thinking about getting in.

Tobin would shake things up if he decided to run for that seat. Or, for councillor at-large.

The feeling is he will be back on the political scene.

SWANSON

IF YOU EVER hear Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, preaching about civic duty, he practices what he preaches.

Swanson spent four days last week at Quincy Medical Center as a pneumonia patient. One of the days was Tuesday — election day.

But with the help of his sister, Peggy, he applied for an absentee ballot which was delivered like room service to him by Denis Tardo and Charlie Sweeny, members of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars.

FRANK KEARNS, who was honored as The Sun's "Citizen of the Year" in 1991 for his volunteer work as a community activist and advocate for the elderly and needy, will mark his 90th birthday Monday.

Kearns recently retired after two decades as a member of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners. But he's still a member of the Council on Aging which he was served for something like 30 days.

He is a former Silver Haired Legislator and served on the South Shore Elder Services board for a number of years.

Happy birthday, kid.

Dennison Airport Marks 8th Year

By TOM HENSHAW

Dennison Airport in North Quincy celebrated its eighth anniversary with 10 planes based at the field, five of them used to rookie air travelers on brief spins around Boston Harbor.

"We have really been missionaries for the airlines," said Manager Hal Martin.

"Persons who have never flown before come down here for a short hop and then when they want to make a trip of any distance, they turn to the airlines without the slightest hint of hesitation.

"It is not unusual for us to fly 1,000 persons over a weekend on short hops."

COLD CLOSES SCHOOL

Some 870 pupils of the Central Junior High School were sent home at 9 a.m. when the temperature inside the school building was discovered to be between 52 and 55 degrees.

The school's boiler could not be turned on until the School Committee resolved its deadlock over a $25 difference in contract bids to fix the tubing on the boiler.

LABORERS REINSTATED

Quincy was ordered to reinstate 32 laborers who had been fired in violation of civil services regulations in May and the city was faced with the possibility of having to pay them $13,440 in back pay.

Join Stand-Out Against Using Animals In Circus

A few years ago our organization was successful in banning the use of exotic animals in circuses and carnivals in Quincy, and we helped gain a similar ban in Weymouth.

The battle still goes on however. Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus is coming to Boston next month. Animal activists in the area who are able and willing should take part in an informational stand-out against animal use in the circus.

They should gather outside the Fleet Center at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 10. There will be sign holding and leaflet distribution. Our organization fully supports this effort because circuses are never fun for the animals.

War For What Reason

The Bush administration accused Saddam Hussein of amassing an arsenal of weapons consistent with making terrorist attacks.

Bush claims that Hussein is a threat to his own people, to his region, and to the world. President Bush insisted on making Saddam Hussein comply with the request to allow weapons inspectors into Iraq.

Now that Secretary-General Kofi Annan came up with a letter pledging that Iraq would let U.N. weapons inspectors return unconditionally, it appears this is no longer an issue for President Bush.

According to Larry Lindsey, Bush's economic adviser, in a recent interview, oil production in a free Iraq could drive down oil prices. "When there is a regime change in Iraq, you could add three million to five million barrels per day of production to world supply." He also said "the successful prosecution of the war would be good for the economy." Is President Bush considering going to war against Iraq over oil, or because Saddam Hussein is "evil" and his regime "terroristic"?

Bush's reasons for wanting to declare war on Iraq are like a moving target. The world does not agree to bomb Iraq, although it is President Bush's opinion that Iraq "could be capable of terrorist activity." What would the world call America's actions of engaging in war against Iraq, considering the fact that Iraq never so much as even gave America a verbal threat? America would be killing completely innocent human beings who were not a threat at all to us.

"Collateral damage" is how our Government likes to refer to this, but "collateral damage" is a nicer way of saying "mass murder." One cannot fight terrorism and use it at the same time. If America sees nothing wrong with "collateral damage" so long as it serves our purpose, then America should not be surprised if the world labels us terrorists.

Saddam Hussein's removal from power would be a great boost for the global economy even though war in Iraq could cost America up to $200 billion. But, the Bush's administration figures America can afford the price, especially since in the end, we would re-coup that money anyway, over the years, in much lower oil prices globally, and in increased supply of oil.

Scallop Stuffed Haddock

It was one of the last days to enjoy the pool. And also to enjoy eating outdoors.

Instead of the usual cook out, I decided to prepare foods early in the day and then all we had to do was barbecue the steaks.

One of the entrees I prepared that day was stuffed haddock. Wait until you see how simple it is. I got it ready in the morning, and just popped it in the oven about a half hour before the guests were going to eat and it was so moist, not dry like some fish dishes.

Stuffed Haddock

1/2 pound scallops (I used large)

Ritz crackers melted butter or margarine

lemon juice

white wine

salt and pepper to taste

1 1/2 pound piece of haddock

Season the haddock with salt and pepper.

Sauté the scallops in a little bit of olive oil and butter or margarine. Set aside.

Crush the Ritz crackers adding the melted butter or margarine and a bit of water to make the stuffing.

Cut the scallops up in small pieces and add to the Ritz mixture until blended.

On the bottom of the baking pan, before you place the fish, add about 2 tablespoons lemon juice and about a quarter cup of white wine.

Place the haddock in the pan, and then top it with the Ritz and scallop mixture. Put a couple of dabs of butter or margarine on top.

Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for about 20-25 minutes depending on the thickness of the fish used. Serve with fresh lemon wedges.

(P.S. I did not put the exact amount of the wine, lemon juice, or butter. They can be added according to one's own taste.)

'Father Of Franchising' Succumbs To Cancer At Age 86 William Rosenberg Started Dunkin' Donuts Empire Here

By TOM HENSHAW

He was an eighth grade dropout who made coffee and doughnuts the unofficial fast food breakfast of blue collar America and earned a fortune by selling the idea that others could prosper by marketing their products under his name.

When William Rosenberg died last week he had endowed a professorship at Harvard Medical School's Dana Farber Cancer Institute; he had made Dunkin' Donuts a household name; and he was hailed by the industry as the "Father of Franchising."

Mr. Rosenberg, who sold his first cup of coffee in 1946 outside Boston Gear Works in North Quincy and opened his first store on Southern Artery in 1950, died Friday of complications from bladder cancer at his home in Mashpee at the age of 86.

A public memorial service was held Tuesday at Stanetsky Memorial Chapel in Brookline. Burial was in Sharon Memorial Park in Sharon. Shiva followed at the Four Seasons Hotel in Boston and was scheduled to be held yesterday (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. at the home of Terry and Donald Rosenberg.

Mr. Rosenberg was almost 30 in 1946 when he founded Dunkin' Donuts' predecessor, Industrial Luncheon Service, using $5,000 saved and borrowed, a used delivery truck and an abandoned butcher shop in Boston's Roxbury neighborhood.

WILLIAM ROSENBERG

He loaded the truck with coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches and set out for the Boston Gear Works in Quincy where he sold his first cup of coffee to a worker for five cents. Four years later, he had 144 delivery trucks fanned out across Greater Boston.

Mr. Rosenberg opened his first store, called the "Open Kitchen," on Southern Artery in Quincy. The name didn't catch on immediately so he called for a brainstorming session among his workers to come up with a new and more catchy designation.

"What do you do with a donut?" asked his architect, Bernard Healey, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

The Open Kitchen was launched on the nation as Dunkin' Donuts.

Mr. Rosenberg started franchising the Dunkin' Donuts name in the late 1950s and led a group in establishing the International Franchise Association to develop quality standards for the industry that included Howard Johnson's, McDonald's and Burger King.

To and in obtaining uniformity among franchises, in 1963 he founded Dunkin' Donuts University where six fulltime instructors and a dean taught franchise owners how to operate their stores the Rosenberg way.

At one point in time, Dunkin' Donuts had more than 5,000 franchises in 37 countries.

Mr. Rosenberg partially retired in 1988 and the following year the company was sold to Allied Domecq PLC, a British fast food chain operator, and he was able to devote more time to his second great passion — horses.

He owned horses under the Wilrose Farm label since 1968 and donated his stables to the University of New Hampshire in 1989. The university later sold the farm and set up the William Rosenberg Chair in Franchising and Entrepreneurship.

He was a director of the New Hampshire Standard Breeders and Owners Association and founded the International Horse Racing Association in 1983. Five years later he won the first achievement award presented by the Harness Horsemen International.

THIS IS THE first Dunkin' Donuts shop which opened in 1950 at 543 Southern Artery, Quincy, and is going strong today.

The William Rosenberg Professorship in Medicine was established at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute in 1988 and Mr. Rosenberg became an honorary trustee a year later. He fought successful battles against lung and skin cancer and lymphoma.

His autobiography, "Time to Make the Donuts," was published last year.

Mr. Rosenberg leaves his wife, Ann (Miller) Rosenberg; two sons, Donald Rosenberg of Wellesley and Robert Rosenberg of Weston; a daughter, Carol Silverstein Palm Beach, Fla.; a step daughter, Carolyn Ryan of Mashpee; his former wife, Bertha (Greenberg) Rosenberg; nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

PLAQUE INSIDE THE first Dunkin' Donuts shop at 543 Southern Artery reads: Dunkin' Donuts — On this site the original Dunkin' Donuts shop opened its doors in May, 1950.

Quincy Realtor Coordinates Cystic Fibrosis Benefit Friday

Dianne Demarkles, a Quincy resident and Realtor at Century 21 Annex Realty, is coordinating a benefit to help a Scituate teen suffering from Cystic Fibrosis.

The Samantha Sawan Cystic Fibrosis Benefit will take place Friday, Sept. 27, at the Old Colony Yacht Club at 235 Victory Rd., Dorchester from 7-11 p.m.

The benefit will raise funds for the family of 14-year-old Samantha Sawan, who suffers from Cystic Fibrosis and must soon undergo a double lung transplant.

Demarkles has been a good friend of Samantha's father, Michael, also a Quincy resident, since childhood. She said the idea for the benefit came to her when talking to Samantha's mother, Janet Morrissey Sawan, about her brother Bryan's efforts to raise money for Cystic Fibrosis through a bike-a-thon.

"Bryan raised over $20,000 for Cystic Fibrosis by participating in the bicycling event," Demarkles said. "I thought, if people can raise money to find a cure for the disease in general, then why can't we hold our own benefit to help fund Samantha's personal care? Her family is paying close to $100,000 out of pocket. Even the best insurance can't cover all of the expenses."

The event features a buffet dinner and live entertainment by the Greg Buckley Band, who donated their time for the event. There will also be both a live and a silent auction, featuring fantastic prizes, including: Celtics and Bruins tickets; an autographed Red Sox baseball; a hockey stick autographed by Joe Thornton; hotel packages for stays in Martha's Vineyard and Boston; gift certificates to area restaurants; and autographed prints, crafts and books by local artists, including an autographed children's book by the award-winning author and painter, Dean Morrissey, who is Samantha's uncle.

Tickets for the event are $25 per person and can be purchased by calling Dianne Demarkles at 617-472-4330 ext. 325.

Donations can also be sent directly to Samantha Sawan Cystic Fibrosis Benefit c/o C21 Annex, 49 Beale Street, Quincy, MA 02170.

For Compassion, Service After Terrorism Attacks

Laura Bloomer, 13, Receives 'Champion Of Hope' Medal

Laura Bloomer, 13, a student at Broad Meadows Middle School, was one of five youngsters nationwide awarded "Champion of Hope Gold Medals" for responding to the 9-11 terrorist attacks with compassion and service to victims.

The medals were presented on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington during ceremonies on the first annual United Day of Service and Service Awards planned to look back on youth responses to the terrorist challenge.

Laura Bloomer was nominated for the medal for her leadership of her classmates in organizing a "Kids' Fair to Benefit Children Orphaned by the Attack on America," which drew hundreds of people of all ages Nov. 3 and raised more than $3,644.

As a result, four checks for $911 each were presented to the Twin Towers Orphans Fund and the Families of Freedom Scholarship Fund.

Those attending the Fair included Boston area flight attendants whose friends perished on 9-11, representatives of the Marine Corps, the Navy, local police, fire and emergency rescue personnel. Mayor William Phelan also attended.

"Laura's leadership," said Loretta Solon Campbell, director of Operation Day's Work, "is a sterling example of the request Made by President George W. Bush when (he) called on every young person in America to 'commit at least 4,000 hours over the rest of your lifetime to the service of your neighbors and your nation.'

"Laura began in September, 2001, and hasn't quit yet."

The Quincy student also helped organize youth to plant trees and shrubs outside the children's room window at the Thomas Crane Public Library and, along with the library staff, dedicated the "peace garden" to freedom and education for all children.

Following the plants, Laura and her classmates held a "Child Labor Forum in which students outlined the ways children globally are denied a childhood, denied an education, denied health and proper nutrition.

In accepting the medal, Laura told the throng that "we decided terrorists cannot stop young Americans from doing good for others, especially for children. Before and after Sept. 11, we planted seeds of hope, freedom and education, that will grow for years and years to come."

Parkinson's Support Group Meeting Oct. 8

Council Postpones Vote On ENC Land Rezoning

By HEATHER ROBERTSON

The City Council Monday postponed voting on a hearing that would change the zoning of Eastern Nazarene College's parcel of land located on Hancock Street and Old Colony Avenue from Business B to Planned Unit Development.

"What happened here tonight was that we wanted the city solicitor's opinion. Every one wants to be sure that it is a legal rezoning. Something that can be upheld," said Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton.

City Solicitor Jay MacRitchie said he needs time to review a file that he said was about four inches thick.

About 100 people showed up for the hearing, some supported Eastern Nazarene College and others were concerned neighbors who supported the zoning change.

"Developers have approached them (ENC) and they have approached me to see if I would be supportive of different developments," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, whose ward where the land in question is located.

Gutro and neighbors that live in the area are concerned that if the college sold some of the property, the Council and the neighbors would have little say over what could or could not be done with the land.

If the land were zoned PUD, developers could potentially have to answer to the Zoning Board, the Planning Board and City Council.

Under the current zoning, Business B, developers would only have to answer to the Zoning Board.

Problems cited as reasons for the rezoning request were traffic, the intersection where Old Colony Avenue meets Hancock Street, parking and flooding.

"The passing of this will not stop double parking, ameliorate traffic, or stop the miserable traffic at the stop sign. Morale is high and enrollment is high. We want to make a living here and your withdrawal of this proposal will help," said Dr. Philip McLaren, a professor from ENC.

Under Business B zoning, the Council has no ability to force them to make improvements.

"Business B does not require developers to improve this intersection. They would have to do it out of the kindness of their hearts. Once the College sells the property it is out of their control. I want protections, not promises," Gutro said.

ENC President David McLung said he would call the City Council if he intended to sell or develop the property.

The college is concerned that the value of the property will depreciate when the zoning bylaw is changed.

When Gutro was questioned about the depreciation of the college's property, he responded that he had not seen documentation about how the rezoning would effect the asset value of the land.

"We pledge to be open minded and fair. We recognize that the future development must be done in a way that does not exacerbate the problems. The wrong type of development could be devastating to the community as a whole," said President of the Ward 5 Community Association, Tim McAloon.

According to McAloon, office buildings, distribution centers, strip malls, deliver warehouses, restaurants and nightclubs could be built on the land with the current zoning laws in place.

"ENC has been through extreme financial problems. Part of our profitability is based on the asset values. We have not thought of selling, but if you do what is proposed here you are going to knock our property value. You are hitting us in our financial well being while we are under stress. ENC community feels stepped on," said McLung.

"They were in the zoning regulations to put a four story motel on the property. We are asking the city council to take a proactive view of this and not have to scramble to rezone later," said Joy Lester-Boyd, area resident.

Lester-Boyd collected 100 signatures in support of the rezoning.

"Do we want neighborhood to have more input and I think the answer is clearly yes. Should they want to sell off a small portion, let them go through the process of rezoning," said Lester-Boyd.

Resident on Newton Street spoke in support of the rezoning, because Newton Street is a dead end and residents want it to stay that way.

"We rezoned this 1988 or 1989. I think it is a shame that we are back here so soon. The old buildings were falling down, they (ENC) restored the hotel, the restaurant and they bought the daycare and made it part of their property. They are concerned because they operated in good faith. They asked it to be rezoned to business B in the late 1990s. Then they fixed the buildings in good faith," said ENC's attorney Robert Fleming.

"The beauruacracy is alive and well. This is just adding another level. We believe that it is in violation of the law. Why? It would leave the owner with no by right uses. We have so many controls," said Fleming.

A senior accountant from ENC, Ron Waterman spoke in behalf of his employer citing that the economic downturn hurt the business and employee IRA accounts.

"I understand that the neighbors want to have more control over what is going on around them. I want you people to consider thoughtfully what your decision will do to the value of the property and to the business," said Waterman.

On Monday, Oct. 7 the Council will resume this hearing after the City Solicitor has time to review the information and the college has time to collect documentation about how the zoning change will have adverse effects on their property value.

$75,000 Raised To Support Boy Stricken With Paralysis

Friends of the Shadducks, a committee organized to raise funds for the medical care of a 13-year-old boy stricken with paralysis, announces more than $75,000 has been raised.

Thanks to generous contributions from friends and family, concerned individuals and the business community, the committee has begun making strides toward providing the resources necessary for a wheelchair, breathing apparatus and other necessary but extremely costly items not covered by insurance.

"We're thrilled with the outpouring of support to this point," said committee member Dan Flynn, "but we still have a long way to go to reach our goal."

This May, Jack Shadduck was diagnosed at Boston Children's Hospital with "transverse myelitis," a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

In the next 12 months, Jack will face his toughest challenges. Jack's parents, Joe and Marie, and his grandparents, John and Barbara Gilfeather, have chosen not to dwell on how and why this happened. Instead, they have put all of their energies into balancing 24-hour care for Jack.

Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks will host a fund-raising event Friday, Nov. 15, at the Quincy Marriott. The cocktail party will feature a live band, disc jockey, a live and silent auction and a raffle with a one-week stay in St. Martin as first prize.

Special guests at the event will include past and present Boston sports personalities as well as other noted guests. The committee hopes to raise $150,000 at the event.

Friends of the Shadducks is looking for individuals and local businesses to donate items for its live and silent auction, advertise in its Ad Book to be disseminated the night of the event, as well as people to purchase tickets to the event and/or raffle tickets.

For more information on the Shadducks or the event itself, contact Daniel J. Flynn III at 617-479-9000.

PATRICK McDERMOTT, winner of the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County Register of Probate over Mark Tobin, raises his hand in victor election night last Tuesday. With him is his wife, Tracy, who is expecting their first child at the end of October.

Mary Jo Riley To Represent Alma Mater At UMass Event

Quincy educator Mary Jo Riley, will represent her alma mater, Maryville University of St. Louis, at the inauguration of Dr. Jo Ann M. Gora as the sixth chancellor of UMass-Boston tomorrow (Friday).

"I am pleased to be representing Maryville University at such an important event at UMass-Boston," said Riley. "Dr. Gora is an eminently qualified and renowned educator and administrator."

A native of Quincy, Riley taught social studies at Quincy High School and was Quincy's first community school coordinator at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

Later, she was assistant dean at California Western School of Law in San Diego before returning to Quincy to continue her work in education and public affairs.

As a volunteer, she has been working with adult homeless people and at-risk high school students to help them develop employment and life skills.

Commission On Disability Seeking New Member

Over 200 Attend 7th Annual Event Seniors Conference Tailored To Their Special Interests

By HEATHER ROBERTSON

The more than 200 who attended the seventh annual Quincy Senior Conference Saturday found a wide range of workshops tailored to their interests.

The event, called "Senior Savvy And Solutions" sponsored by the Quincy Council on Aging, was held at the Broad Meadows Middle School.

Those attending could choose to attend workshops with such topics and speaker as:

Dr. Thomas W. Barker, "Health Issues Facing Males"; Sheriff Michael Bellotti, "Seniors Helping Seniors"; Dr. Gerry Campos, "Women's Health, Healthy Bones, Healthy Bodies"; Keith Buckley, Tai Chi/Yoga; and Joseph Catalano and Robert Gohl of WJDA, "Covering The Local Scene."

Participants could choose from the following topics: heart healthy cooking, capturing the experience of life, tai chi/yoga, arthritis & the chiropractor, watercolor painting, gizmos and gadgets, women and men's health, grief and how to get through it, covering the local scene, post cards from the past, preserving, protecting your assets, triad: seniors helping seniors and style is an attitude, not and age.

Seniors' metabolism slows with age, so Jayne Davis, the nutrition director for the South Shore Elder Services recommended during her Heart Healthy Eating class that seniors eat food items of the highest quality. By that she means cut down on empty calories junk foods.

Karen Flood presented a workshop entitled "Capturing The Life Experience." This workshop encouraged seniors to blend creative methods to express personal truths. Flood has been conducting life-writing programs since 1996.

A class that featured meditation exercises included Tai chi-exercise designed for self defense and meditation, and yoga-exercise for promoting control of body and mind.

Local chiropractor, Dr. Martin Rigby presented "Arthritis and the Chiropractor." He discussed arthritis and ways to improve the condition through chiropractic medicine.

The manager for Curry Hardware, Mark Vassali, brought out gizmos and gadgets that they thought seniors would find useful. Items like, hand warmers, mechanical arms that extend to pick up things that are faraway, mosquito magnets, door alarms that give off sound if someone opens the door, decorative keys that can be easily identified for audience members that have too many keys on their key ring, keys with larger heads that can be turned easier for seniors who have problems gripping things due to arthritis, big button telephones, anti-slip matting for rugs and showers and gloves with rubber gripping.

Representatives from Harvard Vanguard Medical Center spoke to women attendees about the importance of calcium rich diets after menopause. It is recommended that women get 1,200-1,500 milligrams of calcium per day.

Men with health concerns attended a class that focused around three health issues that are specific to men: hypertension, diabetes and prostate disease. The workshop was presented by Dr. Thomas Barber of the Quincy Medical Center.

A grief counselor, Beth Rotondo, discussed loss, healing and the journey through grief in a presentation entitled, "What is Grief and How to Get Through It."

"Covering The Local Scene" taught participants about issues facing the local media, such as covering city hall, city council, the school committee, the mayor's office and getting sound bites that are under a minute.

"Provides seniors with information about how WJDA and The Sun go about gathering the news that is presented every day," said Gohl, who is also the Halifax Community Television coordinator.

Tom Galvin made a presentation of his collection of contemporary and historic postcards of Quincy that are featured weekly in The Quincy Sun.

"Protecting your Assets" was an informational session by Bill Glynn, president of Advanced Planning Solutions in Weymouth.

"We talked to seniors about protecting their savings or possible ways to get a better return on their assets. CD's do not have a lot of return. Ways to reduce tax on income and protect estate from state taxes," said Glynn.

Representatives of TRIAD, an organization made up of senior citizens, law enforcement officials and senior support service groups, discussed crimes that typically occur in elderly communities.

Marilyn Manning, the executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association presented a class called style is and attitude, not an age. Manning wanted to encourage seniors to keep up with today's fashions and to maximize their assets.

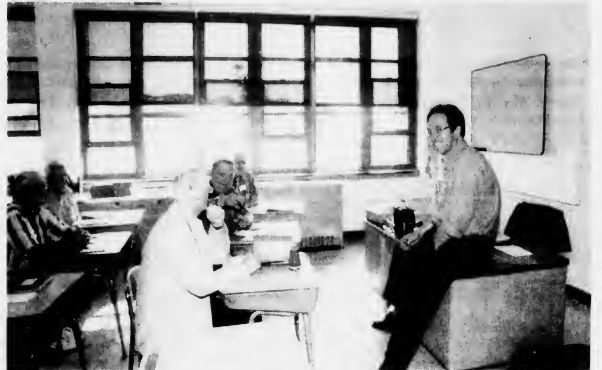

The key note speaker was Patriot Ledger columnist Sue Scheible's spoke about aging in a lightly comical way and thanked Quincy seniors for their help over the last 24 years with her column on aging.

"People liked hearing the personal viewpoint. I asked the council what they wanted me to speak about and they said they wanted something personal. I got the chance to say thank you," said Scheible.

Scheible talked about how she got into the column on aging, her personal aging experience, experiences of family members and of subjects of her articles.

AT THE SEVENTH annual Quincy Senior Conference Saturday at Broad Meadows Middle School were, from the left, John Noonan, chairman of the Council on Aging; Mayor William Phelan, Thomas Clabby, Jr., director Quincy Elder Services; Sue Scheible, Patriot Ledger columnist and featured speaker; Brianna Phelan, daughter of the mayor; School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro, Linda Stice, school committee member and chairwoman of the Mayor's Commission on the Family; and John Molloy, vice chairman Quincy Council on Aging.

HEALTH ISSUES FACING males today were discussed by Dr. Thomas W. Barber, Chief of Medicine/Medical Director at Quincy Medical Center.

YOUR FINAL ANSWER?

Homebuyers should have their sales agreements provide for a final walk-through, usually the day before the closing. This final inspection provides buyers with the opportunity to re-inspect the property, accompanied by the agents, with an eye toward seeing that everything is acceptable in terms of the property's condition. The sellers, at this point, should have completely removed themselves and their belongings, and only items included in the sale should remain. There should be no signs of unexpected damage. If there is any problem, buyers should tell their agents, who can go about the business of seeing that it is rectified. This is the buyer's last opportunity to check the property before the sale is complete.

A final walk-through is an important final step in purchasing a home. When CENTRAL REAL ESTATE locates a home, we consider the client's neighborhood preference, lifestyle needs, and budget. Are you renting? With interest rates at their lowest in forty years, you may be able to afford your first home. For personal attention and a stress-free real estate experience, call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway.

HINT: A home does not belong to a buyer until the transfer of the deed from seller to buyer is officially recorded.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Quincy Downs Middleboro, 14-8

Presidents Continue Winning Ways

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team was obviously excited following its season-opening, 14-8 win at Middleboro last Saturday afternoon.

The celebration didn't last long, though, as the players realized they're supposed to beat the Sachems and there're still nine games left in the season.

My, how times have changed on Coddington Street. Not too long ago wins seemed to come by as often as an eclipse. Now, it seems like the Presidents are Patriots-esque, having won five straight games dating back to last season.

"At this point we expect to win," said head coach Bob Noble, who is in his fourth season. "It's our fifth win in a row. We seem to have a little thing going on."

Quincy (1-0) will travel to Hanover (0-2) of the South Shore League tomorrow (Friday) night at 7. The Indians, who have opened the season with losses to Hull and Abington, topped the Presidents, 12-6, last year.

"They have nothing to lose," Noble said. "They beat us last year and they have that on their side. We want to get off to a good start. Last year we won our first game and then lost our next four."

Winless a year ago, Middleboro seemed much-improved under a new coaching staff and played Quincy tough.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Presidents broke into the scoring column first when junior tailback J.J. Niamkey (8 carries, 98 yards) jetted 70 yards for a touchdown off a sweep. Senior Thiago Goes added the extra point.

"He got to the corner and was gone," Noble said. "He has deceptive speed. He brings that potential of the big play, a home run."

In the second half, Middleboro's Kevin Avitable returned the opening kickoff to midfield and scored on a quarterback John Cacciatore's 27-yard TD pass to John Avitable. Cacciatore rushed for the 2-point conversion for an 8-7 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, senior captain Shawn Munchbach returned the ball 45 yards to the Middleboro 48 and Quincy proceeded to drive down the field.

Senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell (7 of 13, 70 yards) hit senior wideout Anthony Boyle with a 17-yard pass to the 10-yard line. And following senior wingback and captain Matt Ramponi's 9-yard run, O'Connell plunged into the end zone from 1 yard out with 5:52 left in the quarter. Goes added the extra point for a 14-8 lead.

"That was positive," Noble said of his team coming back after losing its lead. "In the past we would've panicked and folded, but we were able to regain the lead. That says something for the kids."

In the fourth quarter, Quincy could have put the game away but Ramponi fumbled at the Middleboro 10. Ramponi, though, atoned for the mistake by knocking down a pass and then coming up with a huge interception on defense.

"They're captains and they did what they're supposed to do," Noble said in reference to Munchbach's and Ramponi's clutch play.

In addition, Ramponi carried the ball 10 times for 44 yards, helping the Presidents (172 rushing yards) control the clock in the fourth quarter. "He's a hard-nosed, between-the-tackles runner and he did a nice job helping us control the clock. He kept the chains moving."

Defensively, Quincy held Middleboro to 44 yards in total offense in the first half and 150 for the game. The linebackers, seen as a weakness before the season, turned in strong games. Senior captain Mike Cox, senior J.D. Hyacinthe, junior Steve Ohlson and Ramponi more than held their own.

"It was a good opening win," Noble said. "The kids kept it in perspective. It's one game and we have nine left."

Granite Crack; Face
Charlestown In Playoffs

By CHRIS POISSON

With playoff position at stake, the Quincy Granite suffered a 13-8 loss to Middleboro last Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy (6-3) has earned the No. 4 seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs of the Eastern Football League and will face top seed Charlestown in the first round — the same team it hosts Saturday night at 7 in the regular season finale.

Middleboro (8-2) secured the No. 2 seed with the win and Roxbury is the No. 3 seed. In the Western Conference, Marlboro grabbed the top seed, Springfield is No. 2, Clinton No. 3 and Rhode Island No. 4.

"We're going to treat it like any other game," said captain David Harris about facing the Townies in consecutive weeks. "We have to win. All the guys have a big chip on their shoulders after losing at home after being on the road for three weeks."

In the loss to the Cobras — the second time this season — the Granite were missing starting quarterback Liam Higgins (back) and starting center Mike Zawilinski (knee) to injuries. And it showed offensively.

Backup quarterback Shawn Tarpey and emergency center Ronald Pierre-Louis fumbled numerous snaps (lost just one), the make-shift offensive line yielded plenty of sacks and there were many costly penalties.

"Our offense wasn't what we wanted it to be," Harris said.

On the third play of the game, Middleboro fumbled a pitch to tailback Jeff Hatch and cornerback Derick Epps recovered at the Middleboro 38. The Granite, though, couldn't capitalize on the early break as they went three-and-out.

On its next series, Middleboro engineered a 20-play, 93-yard scoring drive that chewed an incredible 8:17 off the clock with the help of Quincy mistakes.

On fourth-and-10 at the Quincy 45, the Cobras punted but the Granite were penalized for having too many men on the field, keeping the Middleboro drive alive. Four plays later, the Cobras executed a fake punt with quarterback Anthony Comer, also the punter, picking up 13 yards on a scramble.

Comer hit wideout Aiden Gaffney for a 23-yard pass and fullback Shaun McHugh followed with a 4-yard TD run with 3:38 left. Jack Welby added the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

With 54 seconds left in the half, Comer moved his team 45 yards on three completions, setting up a 35-yard field goal by Welby for a 10-0 lead.

In the third quarter, Welby booted a 38-yard field goal for a 13-0 lead. Late in the quarter, he attempted a 30-yard field goal but Harris pushed a Middleboro lineman back into the punter, who kicked it off the lineman's helmet.

The Granite recovered, drove down the field and scored their only touchdown when Tarpey connected with John Barr with a 15-yard TD pass. Matt Kulesza's extra point was blocked, but Jeff Lang picked up the loose ball and ran it into the end zone for a 2-point conversion.

You Auto Know

by Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

AND THE REST IS HISTORY

The inspiration for the invention of the windshield wiper came to a woman riding a streetcar in 1903, as she watched motorists stopping to wipe the snow from their windshields. This led Mary Anderson to draw up a design which called for the driver to use a lever on the inside of the automobile to manually activate "a swinging arm that mechanically swept off the ice and snow," according to the Inventors' Museum. While friends remained dubious, Anderson continued to refine her idea to the point where the "swinging arm with a rubberblade" was patented in 1904. Although Anderson never sold the idea, by 1913 mechanical wipers became standard features on domestic automobiles.

North Quincy Shows Pride In Loss To Marshfield

By CHRIS POISSON

In the 27-6 loss to Marshfield last Friday night, the North Quincy High School football team revealed the character of this year's squad for the fans at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Trailing 21-6, the Red Raiders fumbled on the first play of the fourth quarter and the Rams recovered at the North Quincy 14. Rather than throw the white flag, the Red Raiders showed their pride by stuffing senior fullback Bob Cellucci on fourth and 1 at the 5 to regain possession.

"We never stopped hitting and we never gave up," said head coach Tony Green.

And if North Quincy continues to put forth that type of effort, then it will enjoy more success this year.

"We can now play with some of the better teams,"

SENIOR RYAN FARNHAM (23) bounces outside a scrum for a 5-yard gain to help move the Red Raiders away from their end zone.

Green said. "Whether or not we can beat them, that's going to be week to week. But we can definitely play with them."

North Quincy (1-1) will have another difficult assignment tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when it travels to Cohasset.

"Cohasset went to the Super Bowl last year," Green said. "They have a pretty good quarterback [Mike Snowdale] who is getting a lot of press. They're going to be tough."

Unlike the Boston Latin game, North Quincy might have felt a little uneasy against Marshfield, a perennial power now in its second year in the Old Colony League. North Quincy committed six turnovers (3 fumbles, 3 interceptions) that led to three Rams' touchdowns.

"I thought we kind of lost our focus when Marshfield started to do well," Green said. "We have to learn how to respond to a little bit of adversity."

On the Red Raiders' ensuing possession, McClellan, a linebacker, picked off a pass and returned it 41 yards to the North Quincy 1, setting up Cellucci's scoring plunge with 7:42 left. Ring hit sophomore fullback John Wallace for the 2-point pass and a 14-0 lead.

In the first half North Quincy had several opportunities for big passing plays, but senior quarterback and quad-captain Kevin Holleran and his receivers were unable to make the connection.

"In the beginning of the game they were playing us tight and we didn't get a whole of breathing room so we tried to get outside a little bit," Green said. "In practice we always get them. Against Boston Latin we got them. They just didn't work. Maybe they will in our next game."

In the second half, Marshfield extended its lead to 21-0 when senior tailback Andy Morrison broke free down the right sideline for a 56-yard TD run with 4:08 left in the quarter. Senior Mike Landry's kicked the extra point.

The Red Raiders answered on their next possession. On second-and-8 at their 35, Holleran fired a pass toward senior tight end and quad-captain Matt Francis that looked like it was going to be picked off the Marshfield 30 with two defenders in the area.

But Marshfield senior Ken Evans could only get a hand on the ball and deflected it back to Francis who raced into the end zone for a 65-yard TD with 3:08 left. The extra point was blocked.

In the fourth quarter, Marshfield added another score off a North Quincy turnover when Ring connected with senior Sonny MacDonald for a 10-yard TD pass.

North Quincy Falls To 4-2

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team suffered several injuries to key players last week as it dropped 2 of 3 games to fall to 4-2 on the season.

Monday's home game against Barnstable was postponed due to the weather. The Red Raiders hosted Barnstable Tuesday, traveled to Plymouth South yesterday (Wednesday) and will head to Silver Lake tomorrow (Friday) night at 7.

"We are in a stretch of games where we are playing 7 or 9 on the road," said head coach Paul Biepoli. "Injuries don't help but they are a part of the game. I'm confident our reserves will step up and give us some quality minutes."

North Quincy trekked to Martha's Vineyard last Saturday for its third straight road game and won, 3-1. Playing without senior quad-captain Lauren Kahl and senior Katie Mercurio, the Red Raiders got huge efforts from seniors Lauren McGee, Katie Timmins and quad-captains Rachel Enos and Erin McFarland.

Despite outplaying the hosts in the first half, North Quincy was on the short-end of a 1-0 halftime score. But the Red Raiders came out flying and scored two minutes into the second half when junior Jenn Ryan's shot deflected off a defender for the equalizer.

Senior quad-captain Christina Conley scored twice within eight minutes to seal the win. Conley deflected sophomore Amanda Saylor's throw-in past the keeper and took a Ryan cross and one-timed a shot off the post for her third goal of the year.

Unfortunately, junior defender Sarah Gregory injured her knee late in the game and may miss a week.

GIRLS' SOCCER

North Quincy received solid efforts from senior Nancy Yankun in the first half and from sophomores Eileen Price and Caitlyn Peters and senior Meagan Randall in the second half.

Last Thursday, the Red Raiders traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham and fell, 4-0, to the No. 6 team in the state.

North Quincy controlled play early but had good scoring chances from Conley, Enos and Kahl thwarted.

The Trojans scored their first goal 25 minutes in as a cross deflected off a North Quincy defender and with six seconds left in the half they struck again for a 2-0 lead.

The Red Raiders continued to play well but were unlucky. A cross from Kahl to Enos just missed connecting early in the second half. Bridgewater-Raynham scored two late goals to cement the victory.

Kahl, Mercurio, senior Lisa Schifone and junior Ashley Ridge were all injured in the game. Playing well for the Red Raiders were midfielders Katy Faherty, a junior, Ridge and Saylor. McFarland also had a strong game as sweeper.

Last Tuesday, North Quincy dropped a 3-1 game at Falmouth. The Clippers struck early off a corner kick four minutes into the game. North Quincy managed only one shot on goal in the first half.

The Red Raiders lost Ryan with a slight shoulder dislocation when she was driven to the ground by a Falmouth player.

North Quincy got on the board when Mercurio crossed a ball to senior Missy Miller, who volleyed it past the Clippers' keeper.

In previous games, North Quincy shut out both Taunton, 6-0, and Quincy, 2-0, in the same week at home.

In the Taunton game, six different players scored. Conley, senior Jen Venuti and Price scored the first three goals with Mercurio assisting on all of them.

In the second half, Kahl placed a 20-yard direct kick to the top right corner for a 4-0 lead. Ryan scored off a Conley pass and Miller closed out the scoring when she headed in a cross by Enos.

Senior Jes Smialek and Yankun stood out in the back while senior Caitlin Doherty looked strong at striker. Junior keeper Kristina Manganaro made four saves for the shutout.

In the Quincy game, the Red Raiders had the fierce wind in their favor in the first half but had difficulty with the narrow field and a swarming Presidents' defense.

They did have a handful of scoring chances but Quincy goalie Sarah Shea made several sensational saves, including one on a Mercurio direct kick.

Late in the half, North Quincy got on the board when Ryan took a cross from Conley and scored on a half-volley from 8 yards out.

North Quincy's defense kept the Quincy forwards from mounting any dangerous pressure on Manganaro. Jessica Jacques, Lauren Milone, Gregory and McGee all played well.

At the midway point of the second half, Peters directed a loose ball in the penalty area, hitting a Quincy defender and crossing the goal line for her first varsity goal. Manganaro recorded her first varsity shutout.

North Cross Country Bows To Falmouth

The North Quincy High School boys' and girls' cross country teams both dropped meets to Falmouth last Tuesday.

The girls lost, 17-38. Lauren Ready placed the highest, fifth, with a time of 19:23. Other finishing in the top 10 were Brenna O'Brien (sixth, 19:26), Evan Allen (eighth, 19:34), Kayla Martin (ninth, 19:35) and Lily Luo (10th, 20:26).

Other finishers were Beth Goodrich (11th, 20:29), Sheila Jafarzadeh (12th, 20:31), Lisa Rubino (13th, 20:54), Adrienne Doucette (14th, 21:27) and Sheila Lynch (20th, 23:59).

In the season openers, both squads knocked off Taunton on the road. The boys placed seven in the top 10 for a 21-41 win. They were Will Gardner (second, 19:14), Rob Gardner (third, 19:41), John Murray (fourth, 19:42), Steve Price (fifth, 20:05), Mike O'Malley (sixth, 20:17), Tommy Callanan (seventh, 20:36) and Paul Doolan (10th, 21:35).

Other finishers were Mike Griffith (21:54), Ted Fawell

(22:09), Chris Mercurio (22:20), Harvey Sham (22:23), Nick Falbo (22:40), Taylor Breen (25:13) and Jeff Shek (28:33).

On the girls' side, North Quincy failed to take first place but grabbed the next four spots for a 22-37 win. Allen (24:17) finished second, Martin (24:18) third, O'Brien (24:25) fourth and Ready (24:27) fifth.

Other finishers were Goodrich (25:32), Jafarzadeh (25:33), Rubino (25:34), Luo (25:35), Doucette (28:27) and Katelyn Girard (31:33).

Dance, Silent Auction Friday To Benefit Apaches Cheerleaders

The North Quincy Apaches varsity cheerleading squad of Quincy Youth Football recently won the honor of performing at the Citrus Bowl in Florida on New Year's Day 2003.

The group, ages 9-13, attended a recent cheering and dance camp at Curry College. Along with many "superior" and "excellent" ribbons, it won first-place trophies in the Dance Competition and "Camp Champs" and the Leadership Trophy.

The NQA cheerleaders are currently seeking contributions to help defray the costs of the trip and are planning many fund-raisers.

There is an adult Dance and Silent Auction tomorrow (Friday) at the Wollaston Yacht Club from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tickets cost $10 each. On Saturday, the squad will hold a car wash from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Central Middle School. Cost is $5 per car.

Another car wash will be held Oct. 12 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Wal-Mart, Falls Boulevard, and there will be a yard sale Oct. 19 at 360 Adams St., Quincy. The group is also collecting returnable cans and bottles.

12-Year-Old Travel A All-Stars Win Super 8 Crown

The Quincy Youth Baseball 12-Year-Old Travel A All-Star team recently completed another successful summer season, winning more than 30 games and capturing the Suburban League's Super 8 League championship with a 3-2 victory over Wellesley.

The Suburban League Super 8 playoffs match the league's elite teams decided by a 10-game regular season played during July. Quincy defeated teams from Randolph, Walpole, Braintree and Wellesley to capture its second league championship in as many tries. It also won it in 2000 as 10 year olds.

Quincy began its playoff run with a tough 1-0 loss to Hanover. Joe Lousarian hit the ball hard, twice reaching base, and Doug Myers provided some slick fielding at second base.

With no margin for error, Quincy came back strong in the second game, defeating South Randolph, 12-3, behind a 12-hit barrage. Tom Conley homered twice and was strong on the mound. Third baseman Pat Totten added two doubles and an RBI.

Quincy's bats remained hot in its next game, a 10-1 win over Wellesley. Shortstop Steve Connolly struck the biggest blow, a three-run homer in the sixth to break the game open. Dan Munkley had a base hit and RBI and Dan Myers singled twice and scored a run.

In the quarterfinal, Quincy faced Walpole in what would be its most difficult test of the tourney.

Quincy trailed 5-0 before it pushed across four runs in the bottom of the third on base hits by Chris Boyd and Connolly and a clutch RBI single by first baseman Brian Mahoney.

Still trailing 5-4 in the sixth, Conley led off with a homer to tie the game and John Alexander followed with a shot that cleared the left-center fence for a dramatic, walk-off 6-5 win.

Kyle Tobin brushed aside a painful leg injury he had sustained earlier in the week to play a strong game at catcher, making several nice stops and handling the pitching staff flawlessly.

In the semifinal against Braintree, Quincy overcame an early 3-0 deficit for an 8-3 win. Steve Kussman went 2 for 3 with three RBI. Chris Doyle had a hit and run scored while playing well at second base.

In the rematch against Wellesley in the final, Alexander homered again and Boyd saved two runs with a diving catch in center field. Glen Misho struck out seven to pick up a complete-game victory.

Quincy has played together for the last five summers since the boys were 8 years old. During that time Quincy has won over 100 games, including two Suburban League titles and tournament championships in Middleboro (twice), Mansfield, Foxboro, Bourne and Westwood, making it one of the most successful travel teams in Quincy Youth Baseball history.

One of the many highlights this past summer was Quincy's trip to Cooperstown, N.Y., in late July to play in a week-long tournament held at Oneonta State College. Quincy went 6-2 against other 12 year olds from New York, New Jersey and as far away as Hudson, Ohio. Just as significant as the results on the field, the boys had a chance to meet and get to know others from around the country, spending the week in a dormitory

The Quincy Travel A All-Star team is supported entirely by player fees and donations. Since August 2001, it has raised funds by holding several canning drives at local supermarkets and restaurants and has solicited donations from many Quincy businesses.

The team wishes to thank the residents of Quincy for their generous support of its canning efforts and would like to thank the following for their donations: Quincy Youth Baseball, Play It Again Sports, Pat Flanagan's Restaurant, Rep. Stephen Tobin, The Tobin Memorial Fund, Graeber & Davis Law Firm, Monadnock Water, Roche Brothers Supermarkets, Dunkin' Donuts, Hub Refrigeration, Allied American Insurance and Quincy City Councilors Kevin Coughlin, Daniel Raymond and Douglas Gutro.

RAY CATTANEO, manager of the Morrisette baseball team, recently received the American Legion Graduate of the Year Award from Jake Comer, past national commander of the American Legion.

Quincy Police Win Babe Ruth Title

Undeclared in the playoffs, Quincy Police recently captured the Babe Ruth championship with a 4-1 victory over Morrisette at Adams Field.

John Stanton fired a two-hitter to notch the win. But he was locked in a pitchers' duel with Josh Brabazon until the bottom of the sixth inning when Police scored four runs to break a scoreless game.

Nick DeVico drove in two runs and scored on a wild pitch, while Mike Ferrara knocked in the other run. In the last inning, Morrisette's Tom Power ruined Stanton's shutout with a sacrifice fly.

Police went undefeated in the playoffs (4-0). In the first game, pitcher Ray Marchand, who was also the team's leading hitter during the regular season, allowed just three hits and struck out 12 in a 9-6 win over Morrisette.

In Game 2, Stanton limited Granite City Electric to five hits and fanned 15 in a 6-4 victory. In Game 3, Police knocked off No. 1 seed Golden Print, 4-1, behind pitcher Joe Griffin. Griffin, who led the team in wins, allowed six hits and no earned runs.

Leading the offense during the playoffs were Brandon Ranalli (.429 average) and DeVico (5 RBI). Other contributors, all of whom batted over .300, included Stanton, Frank McKenna, Marchand, Griffin (3 RBI), Chris Rooney (3 RBI) and Wendell Cosgrove.

Jason Purves advanced runners with important sacrifice bunts. Matt McHugh, Kevin Ouellette and Brendan Carnell displayed good bat control advancing runners by hitting behind them. McHugh, McKenna and DeVico were also aggressive base runners.

Police played error-free ball in the championship and everyone contribute defensively during the playoffs, notably catcher Marchand, shortstops Carnell and Rooney, first basemen McHugh and Griffin, outfielders Ranalli, Cosgrove and Purves, and third baseman DeVico.

Coached by Bob Griffin, Wendell Cosgrove and Pat

McMahon, Quincy Police finished the regular season with a 14-4 record. And it accomplished that feat despite the unavailability of pitching ace John Folino for most of the season due to an operation, and Stanton, Marchand and Purves for the first half of the season as they pitched for the respective high school teams.

Erin McFarland In Scholar-Athlete Games

North Quincy High School senior Erin McFarland recently took part in the 2002 European Scholar-Athlete Games held in Limerick, Ireland.

A former World Scholar-Athlete Games participant, McFarland has played on North Quincy's varsity squad since her freshman year. She has also participated in the Bay State Games and club soccer.

High academic standards are set for admission into the Games, standards McFarland easily met by being a highest honors student.

The primary goal of the Games is to provide the participants with an exciting program that will inspire them to pursue excellence in both academic and extracurricular arenas.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time for the usually outspoken Lamb to be a bit more discreet. You can still get your point across, but do it in a way less likely to turn off a potential supporter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Good news: All that hard work you put in is beginning to pay off. But you need to watch that tendency to insist on doing things your way or no way. Be a bit more flexible.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to delay making a decision on the future of a long-standing relationship until you check out some heretofore hidden details that are just now beginning to emerge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your reluctance to compromise on an important issue could backfire without more facts to support your position. Weigh your options carefully before making your next move.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for ambitious Leos or Leonas to shift from planning their next move to actually doing it. Your communication skills help persuade others to join you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Relationships — personal or professional — present new challenges. Be careful not to let a sudden surge of stubbornness influence how you choose to deal with them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might need more facts before you can decide on a possible career change. But you should have no problem making a decision about an important personal matter.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're respected by most people for your direct, no-nonsense approach to the issues. But be careful you don't replace honest skepticism with stinging sarcasm.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A newly emerging situation could require a good deal of attention and some difficult decision-making. However, close friends will help you see it through.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family matters need attention. Check things out carefully. There might still be unresolved tensions that could hinder your efforts to repair damaged relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Of course you deserve to indulge yourself in something special. But for now, tuck that bit of mad money away. You'll need it to help with a looming cash crunch.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A temporary setback in your financial situation is eased by changing some of your plans. You'll be able to ride it out quite well until the tide turns back in your favor.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for understanding people's needs. You have a low tolerance for those who act without concern for others.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

GEORGE ALLEN of Quincy (second from left) recently cued up for cancer at The Rack in Boston for the first annual American Cancer Society Corporate Billiards Challenge. The benefit featured a competitive pool tournament, silent auction, buffet, and dancing. Boston area businesses competed against one another to raise funds to support American Cancer Society research, education, advocacy and patient services programs. Twenty-three corporate teams participated in the event, which raised more than $80,000. Also pictured from the left are Dave Franzel of Cambridge, Charles Otoks of Weston, and Ken Green, also of Weston.

October Is Breast Cancer Awareness Month American Cancer Society Pursuing Goal Of Eliminating Cancer

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, a month dedicated to increasing public knowledge about a disease that will strike an estimated 205,000 women in the United States this year.

During October, and all year long, the American Cancer Society pursues its goal of eliminating cancer as a major health problem by providing life-saving information and services, conducting community outreach and education, and advocating for local, state and federal legislation to insure that access to breast cancer detection and treatment is available to all.

Following the American Cancer Society's guidelines for early detection of breast cancer improves the chances that breast cancer can be diagnosed at an early stage and treated successfully. All women are at risk for breast cancer, even if they have no family history of the disease.

The American Cancer Society recommends the following approach to early detection to find the disease in its earliest, most curable stages: yearly mammogram (beginning at age 40), clinical breast exam (yearly beginning at age 40, and every three years for women ages 20-39), and breast self-exam (monthly, beginning at age 20).

Through the work of breast cancer outreach specialists, other specialized staff and the establishment of collaborations with community organizations, the American Cancer Society strives to reduce health disparities by raising awareness of breast cancer detection and prevention issues.

The Tell A Friend program, a peer-to-peer counseling initiative, educates women in medically underserved communities about the importance of the early detection of breast cancer.

Help Empower Local Partnerships, the American Cancer Society's H.E.L.P. fund, makes resources available to community organizations that commit to partnering with the Society to initiate local, community cancer projects. The American Cancer Society New England Division has announced that three H.E.L.P. awards have been made in the Southeast Massachusetts region, totaling $40,000.

Advocacy efforts spearheaded by the American Cancer Society in recent years have led to many major breakthroughs in national health policy affecting breast cancer. The Breast and Cervical Cancer Prevention and Treatment Act of 2000, a federal bill, provides states with matching funds to provide guaranteed treatment to uninsured women diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer.

Massachusetts continues to advocate for level-funding for the state's Early Breast Cancer Detection Program, which includes mammograms for uninsured women, breast cancer research and an early detection public awareness program, specifically focused toward at-risk communities.

Additionally, Massachusetts has successfully funded the breast and cervical cancer treatment program to guarantee coverage of cancer treatment for low-income, uninsured women who are diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer.

The American Cancer Society offers several services that provide support to those patients, and their families, who have experienced breast cancer. Information about cancer can be accessed 24 hours a day, seven days a week, by calling the Society's toll-free 1-800-ACS-2345 information line, or by logging onto its Web site (www.cancer.org).

Locally, the American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery program provides one-on-one visits to women dealing with breast cancer, from other women who have shared a similar experience. Women undergoing treatment for breast cancer can learn how to cope with changes in their appearance through the Look Good...Feel Better program.

In addition, the American Cancer Society has invested $185 million in breast cancer-specific research since 1972. In state, there are 24 local American Cancer Society breast cancer researchers with grants totaling $7 million, at institutions such as Harvard Medical School, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston University, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and Brandeis University.

Community members can get involved in the fight against breast cancer by signing up for the American Cancer Society's Making Stride Against Breast Cancer Walk to be held Oct. 6 at the Hatch Shell on the Charles River Esplanade.

Funds raised at the Making Stride Against Breast Cancer events support local H.E.L.P. Funds as well as the services and research that benefit area breast cancer patients and their families. Last year's 35,000 Making Stride walkers raised close to $3 million in Massachusetts.

For more information about Breast Cancer Awareness Month or how to participate in Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, contact your American Cancer Society at 1-877-338-WALK or e-mail: strides_boston@cancer.org.

Controlling West Nile Virus

(NAPS) - The best way to protect your family from mosquitoes may be to eliminate the pests before they have a chance to bite. Studies show people can use larvicides to kill developing mosquitoes before they turn into breeding, biting adults.

That may be significant because with just one bite, infected mosquitoes can transmit West Nile virus -- a disease that has become a major health concern for people in many parts of the United States.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, West Nile virus has been identified in more than 3/4 of the states. It has caused a number of human deaths in 2002. Health authorities expect it to reach perhaps even the West Coast this year.

To ensure maximum protection, larvicide should be used in the following locations:

- Water gardens
- Bird baths
- Old tires
- Flower pots
- Tree holes
- Pool covers
- Urns
- Rain barrels
- Roof gutters
- Ornamental fountains
- Abandoned swimming pools
- Any other water-holding receptacle.

Larvicide is available in granular form and comes in a 1.5 ounce pound shaker bottle. When applied, the granules offer protection against adult mosquito emergence for up to 21 days.

When used as directed, larvicide will not adversely affect humans, animals, fish or vegetation.

To learn more about West Nile virus, contact the Quincy Health Department.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

IMPLANTED IDEAS

Because dental implants are solidly anchored in the jawbone, they can secure artificial teeth that may look, feel, and function more like natural teeth. Full restoration of teeth with implants usually takes several months, although there are new methods for placing implants and a permanent denture device on the same day. With traditional implants, one or more threaded cylinders are placed in the jawbone beneath the gum tissue. While the gums are allowed to heal, a 3- to 6-month process of natural bone growth around the implant (osseointegration) anchors them solidly in the jaw. Following healing of the implants to the bone, an impression is made of the implants, which is used to make the replacement teeth.

Most people are candidates for dental implants, regardless of age, health status, or the state of the jawbone. The amount of available bone present is the primary consideration. Like other medical sciences, the dental profession is constantly changing. We stay informed about the latest techniques and scientific advances in dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we will gladly answer any questions about new treatments and procedures. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. With "same day" implants, a metal denture frame is attached to the implants immediately after they have been placed. This frame keeps the implants from wiggling, thereby allowing osseointegration to occur while the patient wears the replacement teeth.

OBITUARIES

Dorothy May Serafini, 78

Worked At Thomas Crane Public Library

A graveside service for Dorothy May (Stanford) Serafini, 78, of Quincy, an employee at the Thomas Crane Public Library, was conducted Wednesday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Mrs. Serafini died Sept. 21 at the home of her daughter in Pembroke.

Born in Plymouth, England, she was educated there before coming to the United States following World War II in 1947. She was one of the first war brides to arrive in Quincy where she lived the past 55 years.

Mrs. Serafini worked 10 years at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy. She later worked many years in the International Department of Multi Bank International. She retired several years ago.

Wife of the late Nello Serafini, she is survived by a son, Richard M. Serafini of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.; two daughters, Linda M. Mason of Weymouth and Laura A. Jones of Pembroke; a sister, Joyce Bryant of Devon, England; six grandchildren; one great-grandson; and many nieces, nephews and cousins.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy Center.

Donations may be made to Beacon Hospice, 8 Samoset St., Plymouth, MA 02360.

Philip D. Badger Jr., 59

Retired Senior Master Sergeant In Air Force

A funeral service for Philip D. Badger Jr., 59, of Columbus, Ohio, formerly of Quincy, a retired senior master sergeant in the Air Force, was held Monday at Bethany Lutheran Church in Columbus.

He died Sept. 19 at Mount Carmel East Hospital.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

George Bernard Shaw once said that progress is impossible without change; and those who cannot change their minds cannot change anything. . . . Indeed, one of the key words of our modern life is "change."

We in our profession, the Funeral Service, have not been immune to these changes. Today we are coming to see, more and more, that Funeral Service has a greater meaning to our society than probably every before in our history. Today's public is probably the most knowledgeable in the history of mankind. Yesterday's "taboos," misconceptions and questions are being forthrightly discussed and answered. . . and this is the way it should be. Gone are the days when a director was called upon simply because of religious beliefs and family custom. In today's society a funeral home's clientele cuts across ethnic and religious backgrounds. (Again, this is the way it should be.)

At Deware Family Funeral Home we are proud that we have always adapted to constantly changing times. We are proud of our home and of our staff, who are always striving to give you the very best in unmatched service and thoughtfulness.

Council Delays Auditor Application Deadline

A resolution seeking a deadline of Oct. 4 for resumes from individuals interested in becoming the city's next auditor was referred to the Finance Committee Monday night by city councillors.

Councillor Frank McCauley had sought the Oct. 4 deadline because he said he "wanted to get the ball rolling" in seeking a successor to Michael McFarland who announced last week he has accepted a position with the Norfolk County Agricultural School.

McCauley said McFarland had indicated to him that he would step down as auditor by mid-October.

However, other councillors were reluctant to set the Oct. 4 resume deadline. They said the council should take time to develop a hiring process before they solicit letters of interest and resumes from candidates.

"We have a capable assistant auditor, Rick FitzPatrick and we do not have to rush the process," said Council President Dan Raymond.

The council has not agreed on a criteria for educational background. Some said the candidate should have a degree in accounting. Other councillors said other degrees may be equally sufficient, such as an economics degree.

McCauley's resolution stipulates the next auditor should have a minimum requirement of a bachelor's degree in accounting.

WaterWorks Given Verbal Warning On Police Incident

amend the motion that in the event there was another violation, instead of a verbal, then a written warning the penalty be a suspension instead.

His motion failed to get a second.

White said the amendment shouldn't be in the hands of future boards and the charges against Ed Kane, owner of WaterWorks, "didn't belong here in the first place, but in the internal office of the Police Department." White was the only one voting against any action against WaterWorks at the last meeting of the License Board and said he wanted to be "consistent" with his previous vote.

At the beginning of the meeting, Atty. Richard Barry told the board that he had sent a letter to Shea asking the board for reconsideration.

Shea said the board would not reconsider because the misconduct by policemen did occur and that they did obtain alcohol the night of June 9-10.

Disciplinary action has already been taken against the police officers.

According to Acting Police Chief William Falco, he first heard about the alleged misconduct by officers on June 18 after reading a anonymous letter stating that police officers had obtained liquor from the bar after hours.

Committee Sees Need For Slow Steps In DPW Reorganization

By LANCE MORGANELLI

The City Council Public Works Committee conducted an initial review of the DPW Reorganization proposal at Monday's meeting, deciding that they need to take any potential changes in slow steps of consideration.

Department of Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink said the main objectives of his proposed reorganization plan focus on reduction of workforce on the labor side and losing some management positions with the goal of balancing the amount of both.

"I think the [DPW Reorganization 2002] is a workable plan," said Fink. "It is a work in progress," Fink said referring to differences that arose prior to the meeting.

Council President Daniel Raymond pointed out some discrepancies in the DPW organizational workforce charts, seeing the number of listed personnel not matching actual positions. Fink did respond in account of those positions adding he will be submitting revised versions of the charts soon.

"I find this chart [in the DPW Reorganization plan] to be extremely misleading," Raymond said.

Raymond said he wanted to see two types of charts for each of the various workforces: One detailing the current personnel status and another noting what the mayor and the city council have requested.

In response to Fink stating his goal was to reduce managerial/supervisory positions, Raymond highlighted that his charts still listed a several foreman type positions.

Fink explained some of the positions were actually working foreman titles that count as labor force positions.

"There has been a significant reduction with management which have been changed into working management positions," Councilor and Committee Chair Joe Finn said in support of Fink's explanation.

Raymond asked Fink several times how he can reasonably ask for a 13 percent pay increase when many other programs and functions of the city, such as music and world language instruction, have been cut or are in great need of sufficient funds.

Fink made no direct response to the inquiry.

A major portion of the DPW Reorganization plan was not discussed or mentioned at the meeting but will be covered in subsequent DPW committee meetings.

"We need more information before going forward with the reorganization plan," said Finn. "We need to go back to committee and quantify the issues and concerns we have with the plan."

"I want to see a more thorough discussion [of the concerns with the plan]," Finn said. "I hope [the reorganization] can be presented in a very clear and concise manner."

$10,000 Increase Dispute

Phelan, Raymondi Clash Over Pay Raise For Fink

By TOM HENSHAW

Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink wants the raise he expected when he was hired a scant six months ago and the request has led to another angry rift between Mayor William Phelan and City Council President Daniel Raymondi.

Fink proposed the increase from $84,132 to $94,982 as part of a restructuring of the Quincy DPW.

Raymondi told a meeting of the Council's Public Works Committee Monday night that he is "troubled that a new commissioner who has been here only a short time is looking for a 13 per cent increase."

"How can he reasonably ask for a 13 per cent pay increase when many other programs in the city have been cut or need more funding?" he asked.

Mayor Phelan said that when he hired Fink in March "in order to attract him to Quincy, I told him I would support him in an effort to increase the salary for the position which is set by statute. I urge the City Council to pass the ordinance."

Raymondi said Fink's proposed restructuring placed too much emphasis on management and not enough on the DPW workers who repair the streets and sidewalks. "I'm looking for a plan that will generate more services on the street and sidewalk level," he said.

"The condition of the sidewalks and streets is the result of neglect for years and years," said the Mayor. "Now that we have a commissioner who knows we have to pay attention, we have to pay him to do the job."

"Where was the Council President over the past 10 years when the streets and sidewalks were deteriorating?"

Phelan said when he went looking for a new commissioner to succeed David Colton last winter he had difficulty finding one who would come to Quincy for the amount of money the job paid.

"That's a critical job," he said. "It took a while to find someone who was willing to come over. We can't afford to go through all that again. I am extremely please with Mr. Fink's input. Jay is extremely well qualified for the job."

Phelan said the public works commissioner in Weymouth is paid $93,000 and that of Milton gets close to $90,000.

"If we want to retain qualified individuals we have to pay the price," said the Mayor.

Chuck Phelan To Head Computer Services At Register Of Deeds

Charles "Chuck" Phelan Jr., Quincy's director of information technology for the past five years, is leaving Oct. 31 for a similar job with the county.

He'll be director of computer services for the Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

"Chuck Phelan will be missed," said Mayor William Phelan, no relation. "He did a fine job for the city. He'll do a fine job for the county."

Phelan's successor will be Ron Donovan, currently the Mayor's chief of staff. For the past week, Phelan has been helping him get established in the job.

CHUCK PHELAN

Donovan, a Hough's Neck resident and a graduate of Westfield State College, has been director of data center operations for Fidelity Investments and strategic account manager of a security firm in Bedford.

Chuck Phelan was a city councilor from Ward 5 from 1988 to 1995 and worked for a year as director of computer services for the Norfolk County sheriff.

He was a member of the late Paul Harold's transition team when he was elected Norfolk County Register of Deeds. Harold's successor William O'Donnell offered him the permanent post.

He was appointed director of information technology for the city by former Mayor James Sheets and worked for Sheets reelection in 2001. He was retained when William Phelan defeated Sheets.

Board Grants Storage Permit For 20,000 Gallons Of Oil

What started out as a request to the License Board to store 20,000 gallons of heating oil at a tunnel adjacent to Fore River Shipyard, just over the bridge turned into a heated discussion over whether the J.F. White contracting Co., had the proper license from the State of Massachusetts.

The site is a pumping station for the M.W.R.A., according to White representative Gerard Benoit. He told the board that the fiberglass tanks specifications have been approved by the M.W.R.A.

Walter White, director of inspectional services questioned whether a fuel tank could be constructed on a flood plain zone.

Benoit said he would check with the engineers.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the site is "entirely industrial property."

Benoit said the project has been ongoing for a year and a half and that it would be completed a year from now.

The board finally made a motion to grant the request pending a meeting with engineers from White Construction and the Environmental Protection Agency.

In other business the board granted a permit to Phillip Napolitano, doing business as North Quincy Billiards, 421A Hancock St. for a pinball/video license.

Board Wants Noise, Odor Problems Solved At Sprague Energy

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In an effort to deter noise and the odors emanating from barges arriving at Sprague Energy, 728 Southern Artery, loaded with fuel oil, the License Board made several demands at Tuesday's meeting.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, who said "I know we have no control over the tides suggested the company post a sign indicating a noise sensitive area somewhat like the airport, so the citizens believe that an effort is being made. O'Connell demanded the company find a way to conduct a quieter pumping operation when the barges arrive.

He said he wanted to be notified when the barges and ships arrive.

Steve Cipullo, manager of Sprague Energy said it takes from 12 to 16 hours to unload the fuel off the ship. He also told the board that a system is in place to deter the noise and will be in effect by Oct. 27.

An abutter, John Dinger spoke of "unbelievable noise" from what he described as "antiquated barges."

He said the company showed a "pattern of disregard for the seriousness of the noise issue," and added that the last barge arrived at 6 p.m. and began pumping at 8 p.m. and continued all night long.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond said last May when a similar meeting was held about noise and odors, a schedule of improvements related to noise problems and odors was supposed to be in place. The odors, he said have "literally forced persons out of their homes for hours sometimes days."

He said the License Board should continue to review the ongoing issue of noise until 2003.

He said that in the event that the issue of noise and odors cannot be resolved that No. 6 fuel should be eliminated. It was noted that No. 6 fuel has the strongest odor.

Cipullo and John Didier, director of terminals both told the board that they have expanded the terminal 40 feet from the shoreline to accommodate ships, instead of barges which will be delivering fuel most of the time. This change they said will eliminate a lot of the noise.

The ships will carry a larger quantity of fuel, thus making lesser trips to the company, they said.

Raymond and board members questioned if the same laws apply to the noise ordinance on non-traditional working hours as machinery noise from a carpenter or anyone else working late. Cipullo said the absence of noise is "difficult to accomplish" and that the business is a 24 hour one.

Didier said suction from a blower will collect the carbon and remove the source of odor. He asked the board to be patient until the new system is put into effect the end of this month.

Walter White, director of inspectional services told Cipullo to bring more of your team at the next meeting so that more positive solutions can be made since we all know that "we need oil, and try to figure out a way to protect the neighbors against noise."

Chairman Joseph Shea said he and members of the board will go to the site and monitor when the barges come in.

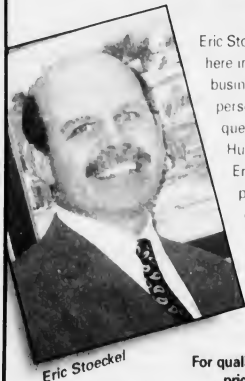

One of the neighbors, Susan Keady said two weeks ago, a significant odor caused nausea and headaches and said they couldn't go outdoors. She said she hoped the license board would "stay on top of the problem."

The board will continue the hearing on Nov. 26.

$30 Million Project Hailed As Economy Stimulant Luxury Apartments At Munroe Place To Be Completed Next Sept.

ARTIST'S RENDERING of Munroe Place.

Residences at Munroe Place, the $30 million, 111-unit luxury apartment complex at 1187-1257 Hancock St., due to open in September, 2003, already is being hailed as "a positive addition to downtown Quincy" that will "stimulate the economy" of the city.

James F. McAuliffe, the principal in Abbott Investments of Boston, told the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) that the hole for an underground garage has been dug at Munroe Place and steel for the frame should begin arriving next week.

"It's a clean site," said Mayor William Phelan, whose City Hall office is only a few doors down the street. "I've had few if any complaints about the work. It will be a positive addition to the downtown area."

Maralin Manning, executive director of the QCBPA, called the project "another step toward dramatically changing Quincy Center from a 1950s retailing community to a mixed-use environment."

"We anticipate that this new Quincy resident will complement the existing, large commuting workforce thus creating an ancillary need for goods and services. These needs will stimulate the local economy as we add new businesses and work toward building a lively 7-24 business and residential community."

Ground for the first stage of the development, which will introduce the residential component into downtown Quincy, was broken in May with the 34-foot deep hole that will contain the parking garage. The garage will have security card access.

Abbott Investments purchased the land and the approvals from the Grossman Companies, whose original plan was to construct an eight-story, 111-unit luxury apartment building at a cost of $18-$20 million in what was a parking lot next to the Munroe Building.

The cost has now escalated to $30 million with 126 underground parking spaces on two levels and 10,000 square feet of retail space for four to six stores on the ground floor and 111 one and two-bedroom apartments on floors two through eight.

The apartments tentatively will rent for $1,400 to $1,700 for one bedroom and $2,400 to $2,600 for two bedrooms, said McAuliffe. The name of the complex will be "Residences at Munroe Place."

The adjoining Munroe Building at 1229-53 Hancock St., which was purchased by the Grossman Companies from the Faxon Family Trust two years ago, remains under Grossman ownership.

The architect for the Munroe Place project is John Sheskey and Associates, Inc., of Franklin Street, South Quincy; and the contractor is Peabody Construction of Braintree.

PRINCIPAL FIGURES in construction of the $30 million, 111-unit Residences at Munroe Place in downtown Quincy gather to explain progress to the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association. Phelan Warming To Second Term

When it comes to city elections it seems it's never really too early to think about the next one. So, the big question: will Mayor Bill Phelan seek a second term?

A premature question, perhaps, considering he is only starting his 10th month in the politically coveted third floor office at City Hall.

And, that the 2003 city election is still more than a year away.

But in an impromptu moment the other day, Phelan was asked: "Are you going to run for a second term?"

He wasn't expecting the question, but didn't duck it. "At this point, yes, I intend to run for a second term. It's still early and, of course, there's always the chance something could change between now and then. But you asked me the question today and the answer today is that I am going to run."

Phelan seems to be more at ease in the job than when he took office in January after upsetting six-term incumbent James Sheets by 17 votes last year.

He had had little experience in municipal government -- just two years on the school committee.

But he is seen as a fast learner who grasps things quickly and is now wearing a look of experience.

But the city faces a number of problems, some of which he says he inherited. And others created by forced belt tightening budget cuts.

When there are problems, the mayor -- whoever he is -- gets the credit if they are solved. Or the blame if they are not.

Phelan hopes to solve them.

He snapped a long-time political tradition when he won the mayor's office. He is the first mayor in 79 years who did not come out of the city council.

The last one was Gustave Bates who defeated incumbent William Bradford in 1922.

If Phelan does make a second term bid, as he apparently intends to, it could set the stage for a showdown that has been building between him and City Council President Dan Raymondi.

Raymondi has been long considered a potential mayoral candidate. And he may have his eye on next year.

A Phelan-Raymondi match would be one to keep observers and voters tuned in all the way.

PHELAN

KOCH

TOM KOCH, who lost his bid for Norfolk County treasurer, has no regrets. And, may have some long-range plans.

Koch finished a strong third to Weymouth's Joseph Connolly and Braintree's Michael Joyce county-wide, But rolled over both in hometown Quincy.

Koch racked up an official impressive 9,891 vote here to Connolly's 2,128 and Joyce's 2,104. He also got some 83 write-in votes on the Republican ballot which don't count in the official tally but indicate Republican support for a Democrat.

And maybe Quincy is where Koch's political future is.

"It's nice to be able to come back to a job I really enjoy," he says, meaning as executive director of the city's Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, a post for which his performance has often drawn praise.

And what about politics?

"I'm not going to close the door," he says. "Somewhere down the road, if I thought I could serve my city in some elective office, I would certainly consider it."

"Not tomorrow but sometime. . ."

He doesn't say what office but some see him as a mayoral candidate somewhere down that road.

AND HERE'S a reminder from City Clerk Joseph Shea about the upcoming state election, Nov. 5.

If you are not a registered voter, the deadline to become one is Wednesday, Oct. 16. The Election Department will be open until 8 p.m. that day.

Or you can register during regular City Hall working hours, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

But Oct. 16 is the last call.

NICK PANARELLI, retiring after a near half-century as owner of Nick's Shoe Repair Shop, was honored by the City Council last week.

City Council President Dan Raymondi presented him with a City Seal pin and a state Senate citation on behalf of Sen. Michael Morrissey and also signed by Senate President Tom Birmingham.

"You are a big part of the community and you will be sorely, sorely missed," Raymondi said.

"I appreciate this honor and privilege," Nick said humbly. "For 50 years I repaired shoes in my shop and I loved everyone that came in there."

One of them was Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley who said:

"Nick epitomized the everyday man and he always had an opinion. He was an honest man that made an honest living."

The chamber burst into laughter when Hanley took off his shoes, pushed them toward Panarelli and mused: "Nick, one more time."

WILLOW: 3 1/2 y.o. highly intelligent Malinois cross (S/L). She needs an owner with strong breeds. Willow gets anxious and protective at first, but when she realizes she can trust you, she is a loyal and loving friend for life. She has a very high ball drive and is very energetic. She will require at least an hour and a half of play/walk time every day. She gets along with older children, but cannot live in a small home because they are too active and distracting for her. She does not like bicycles or motorcycles.

BAXTER: 2 1/2 y.o. Tuxedo Pit Bull (S/M). Very special and affectionate. Also well mannered, however, no other pets, please. Baxter loves to go for rides in the car, loves to curl up on the couch with someone, is OK with older children (14 y.o. and older) and loves to be "scratched" all over! Baxter will need 30 minutes to an hour of walking/activity/play daily.

ROSIE: 2 1/2 y.o. German Shepherd (S/L). Needs a stay at home owner.

BEAR: 10 y.o. Shepherd/Collie mix. Good with children, cats and other dogs.

PANARELLI

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1951 POSTCARD of the old Mayflower Diner on the Southern Artery. At that time the Artery was Route 3, and from Boston it was the main road to Nantasket and Cape Cod. Brand new at the time of this photo, this gleaming steel structure replaced the original bus shaped blue diner. This is now the site of a McDonald's Restaurant. For a short time in the 1950s, Mayflower owner Peter Calimeris also operated a similar stainless steel diner known as Peter's in Norfolk

Downs. In 1951 there were six other diners in Quincy: DeVoe's and Glover's on Hancock Street in North Quincy; the United on Hancock Street in Wollaston; the Pilgrim and Eddie's on Quincy Avenue, and the Capeway on Washington Street. The Wheelhouse hadn't opened yet, but remains the only diner of this type still in Quincy.

Mental Illness Awareness Week

The week of Oct. 6-12 in Mental Awareness Week, a nationwide recognition of the value and accessibility of mental health care.

One in five families will be affected sometime in their life by a serious mental illness. In fact, mental illnesses are more common than cancer, heart disease or diabetes. The good news is that with treatment, millions of people with mental illnesses can and do reclaim full and productive lives.

In recognition of Mental Illness Awareness Week,

South Shore Mental Health is urging individuals and families struggling with a mental illness to seek help and support.

South Shore Mental Health provides mental health and substance abuse services throughout South-eastern Massachusetts and the South Shore. If you suspect you or someone you love has a mental illness, call South Shore Mental Health at 617-847-1950 or visit our web site at www.ssmh.org.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Nixon Here On V.P Campaign Stop

By TOM HENSHAW

Se. Richard M. Nixon of California, the Republican nominee for vice president, spoke 20 minutes to a dimmerite crowd of some 4,000 people from the steps of First Parish Church on a whistle-stop tour.

"No man in American -- in the world is better qualified to keep America strong than Dwight Eisenhower, who has come through every time," he said, speaking of his Presidential running mate.

Nixon, who arrived from Boston in a motorcade at 6 p.m. with his wife, Pat, was presented a replica of the Abigail Adams Cairn and taken on a tour of the Adams crypt in the church.

"His approach is western in that it is direct, sincere and free from any affected mannerisms," said an observer.

"He talks to you about political principles with the same forthrightness a farmer would talk about the effect of rain or drought on laid-by-corn."

St. Catherine's Church Fundraiser Oct. 20

St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church in Quincy will host a benefit fundraiser Sunday, Oct. 20 from 7 p.m. to midnight at Lombardo's function facility, 6 Billings St., Randolph.

Proceeds from the benefit will go to aid the church building fund. St. Catherine's is planning to build a new church in Braintree.

Arthur Sakellaris, chairman of the Building Committee and president of the Parish Council, said St. Catherine's has been at its present location, 157 Beale St., North Quincy, for more than 40 years and has since outgrown the space it provides.

"The new location in Braintree has room for more people inside and outside," Sakellaris said. "There is more parking, it's easier to access and it holds more people."

The new church will be built in the Byzantine style. It will accommodate more than 400 people and will include an administration building, office space and a Sunday School.

The total cost for the entire project will be approximately $4 million. To date, St. Catherine's has raised $500,000.

The event will feature a buffet dinner and the Greek music of The Olympians. Representatives from Ekona, the architectural firm for the project, will also be in attendance to discuss plans for the new building.

"The response from the community has been great so far," Sakellaris said. "We're hoping to continue this positive outreach at Lombardo's on Oct. 20."

Tickets for the event are $100 per person and can be purchased by calling St. Catherine's at (617) 773-2545 or by calling Arthur Sakellaris at (608) 661-2218.

Donations can also be sent to St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church Building Fund, 157 Beale St., Quincy, MA 02170. All tickets sales and donations will go directly to the St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church Building Fund.

Quincy Center 12th Annual Harvest Festival Oct. 19

The 12th annual Quincy Center Harvest Festival will be held Saturday, Oct. 19.

Hancock Street will be transformed into a pedestrian mall from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. for the event, which is sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Hancock Street will be closed to vehicular traffic from Granite Street to Revere Road.

Rain date is Saturday, Oct. 26.

The traditional Halloween Costume Parade for youngsters in kindergarten through grade 5 will form at 1:30 p.m. in front of the QCBPA office, 1416 Hancock St. Judging will be at 2 p.m. Trophies for the best costume will be awarded in age groups under 6, and 6 and over.

Posters created by students in grades 4 and 5 on the theme "My Favorite Ghost or Goblin" will be on display in QCBPA member windows.

Robert Hanna of the Quincy Police Department will present a special program of activities focused on children's safety, including finger printing. There will also be a K-9 demonstration.

The Quincy Fire Department will distribute literature on Halloween safety. Both the police and fire departments will have equipment on display.

Scott Deware of the Deware Family Funeral Home will present the SCI

Escape Program, which teaches children and their families abduction prevention and survival tactics. Deware will explain how children can learn to identify strangers not by their appearance but by how they act.

The day-long event will also feature music, clowns, merchandise from local businesses and invited vendors and food specialties from local restaurants.

Free parking will be available in the Hancock parking lot across from Quincy District Court and in the Ross garage in the Parkingway.

For more information call the QCBPA office at 617-471-3232.

Quincy Mayors Fair Game At Historical Society Roast

Five ex-mayors and one current chief executive will be fair game for friendly insults Friday, Oct. 11, when the Quincy Historical Society holds a "Toast and Roast for Quincy's Mayors."

The event will take place from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy and will feature former Mayors James Sheets, Frank McCauley, Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRia, Walter Hannon and current Mayor William Phelan.

Congressman William

Delahunt will be the host.

Tickets for the roast are $100 each and the proceeds will go to support the Historical Society. Alba's Restaurant will cater the benefit with a variety of special hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar.

"This is the first time, to my knowledge, that the present and all the living former mayors have appeared together for a benefit event," said Joyce Baker, president of the QHS. "This will be a chance to look back, trade stories and have a good-humored time."

An exhibit of archeological finds from the Adams Birthplaces from colonial times through the 1800s, a collaborative effort by the QHS and the Adams National Historic Park will be on display during the Toast and Roast.

"It will chronicle changing daily life in Quincy," said Baker.

Those interested in tickets or more information should call the Society at 617-773-1144.

Phelan Proclaims October Fire Safe-Seniors Month

One week in October may be Fire Prevention Week to the rest of the country but the whole month has been proclaimed Fire Prevention and Safe-Seniors Month in Quincy by Mayor William Phelan.

For the sixth consecutive year the first Saturday in October has been designated as "Senior Serve Day," when teams of firefighters and Quincy Rotarians fan out in the neighborhoods to install smoke detectors and replace batteries for seniors.

Mayor Phelan met recently with planners and sponsors of Project S.A.F.E., sponsored by Beechwood on the Bay, to commend the Senior Service Program and issue the proclamation designating the month.

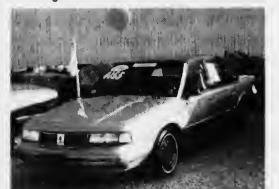

"This unique program provides and essential service for seniors at no cost to seniors or to the city," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay. "Since we launched this initiative six years ago, we have installed more than 5,000 smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy seniors."

A Special Dedication And Tributes

Papile Family Honored As A Quincy Legacy

By DELORES LORUSSO

Family, friends, city and state officials gathered Saturday to honor the legacy of Quincy's Papile family.

Atlas Street is now Papile Lane and that street, Washington and Pond Streets are now designated Papile Family Square in Quincy Point.

A granite memorial to seven brothers who served overseas in World War II was dedicated at the intersection.

The memorial is inscribed: "Seven Papile Brothers. Proud to have all volunteered and served overseas World War II." And with their names:

William J., Capt. USA
Angelo M., Sgt. USA
Albert V., Amica USA
Leo Q., Sgt. USMC
James P., SGT USCG
Ralph J., 1st Lt. USA
George W., 1st Lt. USA

The family's Quincy Point roots go back to the turn of the 20th century when Raffael Papile and Lucia Di Lorenzo came separately to the United States from Torre dei Passeri, Italy, and were married here in 1906. He was 21 and she 17.

They settled on Harkins Street, became parents of 16 children and struggled to raise them through the Great Depression.

Dr. Carmen Marrano, assistant superintendent of schools and grandson, who presided Saturday's dedication program, said:

"We are here to honor a family. We are here to honor a legacy. We are here to honor a name. Today, we link a family's name to courage, to service and to history forever. It doesn't get any better than that."

Congressman William Delahunt remembered growing up in Quincy and hearing the Papile name.

"The name meant something and it still does," he said. "Quincy inherited a legacy and we are all so proud. Contributions of the Papile family and families like them is what makes Quincy so special."

"This group of 16 Papile children not only represents what is great about our city, but is representative of the strength and moral values that have made our country what it is today," said Mayor William Phelan.

"We as a city and a community are grateful to the Papile family for the sacrifices they endured for their country. And we are particularly grateful to their parents, Raffael and Lucia, for instilling in them courage and values that set them on a course of success in all their life-long endeavors.

"I hope that generations to come can pass on the legacy of the Papile family.

WILLIAM PHELAN

"We as a city and a community are grateful to the Papile family for the sacrifices they endured for their country."

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

"Contributions of the Papile family and families like them is what makes Quincy so special."

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

"A remembrance of all the members of the Papile family to their unwavering commitment to country and community."

DANIEL RAYMONDI

"The Papile family helps us set a benchmark for measuring the quality of our city."

RONALD MARIANO

"I can't help but think that the Papile family represents all that is strong and good about Quincy Point."

JAMES PAPILE

"Lucia and Raffael have the family's unanimous vote as the real war heroes of the family."

CARMEN MARRANO

"We are here to honor a legacy."

We of the city of Quincy take great pleasure in hereby dedicating and renaming this avenue Papile Lane."

Phelan also recognized the late City Councillor Paul Harold for acknowledging the Papile's as one of the "most remarkable families in the city of Quincy" and for sponsoring the dedication of the street.

James Papile, longtime city assessor, who served with the Coast Guard, paid tribute to members of his "remarkable family" and all the servicemen and women from the neighborhood who served in World War II.

"Lucia and Raffael have the family's unanimous vote as the real war heroes of the family," he said. He praised them as strong parents "who endured many anxious years over the safe return of their seven sons and three sons-in-law."

Not long after settling in Quincy, Raffael Papile, along with friends, formed the Torre dei Passeri Society located on Washington Street not far from the new Papile Family Square.

Mary Papile, former city assistant treasurer and "matriarch of the family," noted the Torre dei Passeri Society was formed to "help members of the community who required assistance when they lost income due to sickness or death.

"Our parents always taught us to share, be kind and get along with and that is what my dad and his friends did when they formed the society. They were just good, honest working people."

State Senator Michael Morrissey referred to the dedication as a remembrance of all the members of the Papile family for their unwavering commitment to country and community.

State Rep. Ron Mariano expressed his pride to be an Italian-American that represents Quincy Point and the "tremendous values" of families like the Papile's who have shown their steadfast commitment to the city of Quincy.

"I look at the granite memorial and can't help but think that the Papile family represents all that is strong and good about Quincy Point . . . and this dedication lets them know we value their family's contribution," Mariano said.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi said, "The Papile family helps us set a benchmark for measuring the quality of our city.

"Some people measure the true value of a city by measuring its buildings and infrastructure and this is important. But I believe the true value of a city is measured by its neighborhoods and families."

"Raffael and Lucia Papile raised a remarkable family that cares about their country, community and each other . . . I could be no more proud of a family than I am of the Papile family."

The dedication ceremony began with a salute to the flag led by John (Jake) Comer, past National Commander of the American Legion, who later declared his opposition to flag burning.

"I say no to flag burning," said Comer emphatically. He also commended Congressman Delahunt for his dedication to the fight against flag burning.

Deacon Joseph Papile gave the invocation.

In addition to James and Mary Papile, five of the 16 children are alive. They are:

Amelia "Milly" Faherty, homemaker and wife of the late Edward L. Faherty, who served in the U.S. Navy and participated in the "D" Day invasion of the Normandy Coast.

Helena Mariano, homemaker and wife of Luigi Mariano, who served in the U.S. Army in the Southwest Pacific.

Ralph "Chick" Papile, proprietor of Chick's Barber Shop and World War II Navy veteran.

George "Jappa" Papile, U.S. Navy veteran of World War II, retired from the U.S. Postal Service and member of the Quincy High School Hall of Fame in both basketball and football.

Gloria Kelly, homemaker and wife of Alfred Kelly, who is a U.S. Army veteran of the Korean War.

Nine of the 16 children are deceased. They are:

William Papile, U.S. Army veteran of World War II and former Quincy City Councillor.

Albert Papile, U.S. Navy veteran of World War II.

Leo Q. Papile, U.S. Marine Corps veteran of World War II and retired Metropolitan Police Detective.

Angelo "Mike" Papile, U.S. Army veteran of World War II, retired from Charlestown Naval Shipyard.

Eddie Papile, active member of the Massachusetts National Guard who died due to a fatal accident while in employ at the Bethlehem Shipyard in Quincy.

Alfonzo "Pop" Papile, active in parent teacher and public housing organizations and former member of the Board of Directors of Quincy Housing Authority.

John "Pappy" Papile, a retired superintendent of the East Milton Post Office and until his death a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars of Voters.

Sadie Papile, manager of the former Lee Dress Shop in Quincy Center and active in civic affairs.

Jenny Papile, James' twin, who died shortly after birth at five weeks old.

Ralph, George, Gloria and Helena attended the ceremony. Mary and Amelia were unable to attend due to illness but sent their love and feelings of gratitude.

George Bryan Post Seeks Computer Donations

The George F. Bryan VFW Post, 24 Broad St., Quincy, is seeking donations of computer equipment for the post home.

Human Rights A Passion For Quincy's Larry Wood

His passion? Human rights.

Despite his own cerebral palsy and mild mental retardation, Quincy resident Larry Wood keeps his schedule full of activities dedicated to advocating for the rights of individuals with disabilities. Whether attending meetings or visiting businesses, Larry remains alert to opportunities to enhance the lives of his peers.

Since 1993, Larry has been involved with WORK Inc., a Quincy-based non-profit that provides vocational rehabilitation services, housing, transportation and employment opportunities for people with disabilities. Three days each week, you will find Larry collecting tickets from moviegoers at AMC Theaters in Braintree, where he has been employed for the past five years.

"Larry is an outstanding example of what WORK Inc. stands and strives for," says WORK Inc. President and CEO Jim Cassetta. "His dedication to making a better life for himself and others, despite his disabilities, is encouraging both to WORK Inc.'s staff and to other individuals with disabilities."

Serving as vice president of the Citizen Advisory Board of the Department of Mental Retardation, Larry attends meetings once a month at Tufts University to identify current needs of individuals with disabilities, discuss the Board's plans and progress, and devise ways to educate the community about issues affecting those with disabilities.

One of his responsibilities on the Board is conducting visits to local residences for individuals with disabilities to take note of the conditions of the property and ensure that any needed services are being provided.

Committed to improving conditions for people with disabilities in his own community of Quincy, Larry has been identifying public areas in need of improved accessibility.

While recent budget cuts have affected human services organizations across the state, Larry and many of his peers remain determined to make their voices heard and impact upcoming policy debates.

"We are taxpayers and voters, and our efforts contribute to the nation," says Larry. "People with disabilities will suffer from cuts in human services funding. We do all we can to support ourselves by working hard, and we would like the government to do the same."

"Larry is active both in the community and socially," said Rachel Cooper, house manager of the WORK Inc. residence where Larry lives. "His work for human rights is a true inspiration. He works hard for what he believes in and has so much energy."

With WORK Inc.'s support, Larry has made a difference in his own life and the lives of others.

Family Life Archaeology Exhibit At Quincy Historical Society

Adams National Historical Park in partnership with Quincy Historical Society will present an exhibit celebrating Massachusetts Archaeology Week beginning Oct. 7.

The exhibit will take place at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center, and will feature many archaeological artifacts recovered from the Adams Presidential Birthplaces.

The exhibit opens Oct. 7 and is available for public viewing for the remainder of October on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon.

The exhibit features many seldom seen objects from the permanent collections of Adams National Historical Park and the Quincy Historical Society. The artifacts on exhibit help to understand the domestic life and various occupations of the several families who occupied the homes during the evolution of Quincy from a small, rural town into a busy city.

The objects represent not only the Adams family but the families of craftsmen, shoemakers and farmers who lived in the presidents' birthplaces during the 19th century.

The exhibit will include artifacts that illustrate the work performed by these families in their homes, as well as more domestic and personal items like tableware, buttons and children's toys used and enjoyed in their everyday lives. Visitors can see the similarities and differences in the lifestyles and occupations of families in Quincy in the 18th through 21st centuries.

Council Committee, DPW Seeking Master Plan For Streets, Sidewalks

The City Council Public Works Committee began talks Monday night looking into devising a master plan for repairing Quincy's streets and sidewalks.

The committee, meeting at the Department of Public Works, noted the city currently has approximately 1,200 to 1,300 sidewalks on record that need to be repaired. The DPW will finish about 250 to 300 projects this year with roughly the same amount of new repair requests coming in leaving a repair backlog always nearing 1,300, according to the committee.

The city now uses between two and three construction crews per week for repairing sidewalks.

City Engineer Francis Sandonato assured the committee that funding is secured for spring 2003 construction of sidewalks in Squantum and South Quincy.

The main concern the councilors had was under what criteria will sidewalks be prioritized for the order of repairs. The initial agreement was sidewalks and streets that posed a severe safety hazard will be pushed up on the repair list along with those that have water mains older than 1920.

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink said streets with water main repairs will be fully repaired, curbs to curbs including the neighboring sidewalks.

"One reason for why the roads are in the condition they are in is due to the KeySpan trenches [left unfinished]," Sandonato said.

Ward Four Councilor

Bryan Connolly said he wanted to see not just rankings of the streets but also to be able to know in advance how much money each street project requires.

Councilor and Committee Chairman Joseph Finn explained the master plan calls for a three-part evaluation of streets and sidewalks starting with making an entire city inventory of the every street's condition. Next, a consultant would be asked to estimate the total cost. Then, based on a priority to implement the repair projects, according to Finn.

Finn added complications arise asking the inevitable question of what plan can we implement given the resource we have to work with.

Recount Confirms Connolly As County Treasurer Winner

A recount has confirmed Weymouth Town Councilor Joseph Connolly as the winner of the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County treasurer.

Brantree Town Treasurer Michael Joyce, who asked for the recount, conceded Saturday after Connolly showed gains in 11 communities.

Connolly's election night margin over Joyce was 389.

In Quincy, Connolly and Joyce each picked up four votes while third-place finisher Tom Koch gained eight.

The final Quincy vote

now stands at: Koch, 9,891; Connolly, 2,128; Joyce, 2,104.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said 20 workers were involved in the Quincy recount Saturday and estimated it will cost the city between $8,000 and $10,000.

There was no Republican candidate for county treasurer, virtually assuring Connolly of winning the post in the Nov. 5 final state election. He will succeed Tim Cahill of Quincy, who is the Democratic candidate for state treasurer.

Gas Transmission Line Work To Start In Quincy Nov. 1

Algonquin Gas Transmission started the pre-construction phase of the HubLine natural gas pipeline project Monday by mobilizing equipment to the Site plant in North Weymouth.

This will lead to the construction phase of the project that will begin with the horizontal directional drilling from Weymouth into Quincy which is expected to be complete by the end of October.

The remainder of the project will take place in Quincy waters along the shorelines of Germantown and Hough's Neck between Nov. 1 and May 1, 2003.

The HubLine project includes approximately 29 miles of pipeline extending offshore from Weymouth to Beverly in accordance with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission certificate Algonquin received on Dec. 21, 2001.

Mayor William Phelan and Quincy's Conservation Commission has issued very stringent orders of conditions to Algonquin for this project to ensure that Quincy's beaches and shellfish are protected.

The order of conditions includes safeguards such as an extension of the drilling to minimize impacts to the Fore River watershed and to the Germantown clam flats, use of environmentally safer construction methods, construction schedules to minimize impacts on fishing and shellfish industries, along with a comprehensive water quality program with compensatory mitigation in the event of non-compliance.

Algonquin has implemented a 24-hour Landowner Hotline to identify and address concerns in a responsive manner. Mark O'Connell is Algonquin's designated issues resolution coordinator for Quincy. Questions can be directed to him on the toll-free hotline at 1-888-367-7005.

MWRA Maintenance Work At Meters Next Week

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is performing maintenance work the week of Oct. 7 which could cause water discoloration in parts of Quincy.

The work will be performed at Meter 29 - Adams Street at Beale Street, meter 85 - Beale Street at Summit Avenue. It is being performed to support Mass Highway's Adams Street Bridge Rehabilitation Project.

While water may appear discolored during this period, it is perfectly safe to drink. Residents should be especially careful washing white or light colored items for three days after the work is completed.

The MWRA operates a complex water distribution network consisting of hundreds of miles of pipe and hundreds of valves. The valves connect community distribution systems to the MWRA's network of larger pipes. They allow water to be controlled or rerouted in an emergency situation, such as a break or larger fire. Each valve and gate is exercised and inspected yearly by MWRA crews to ensure operation if and when it is needed. Any problems that are identified are immediately corrected.

Water discoloration does not always occur during or after this work. When it does, the discolored water results from a small amount of iron in the pipes. While safe for drinking, cooking and other uses, please note that iron will stain light colored items in laundry, especially when bleach is used. Therefore, residents living near any valves involved in this project should probably check water clarity before washing any white or lighter colored laundry during this period of work.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at the Sept. 24 meeting.

• Granted a permit to Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association, to hold the 12th annual Harvest Festival Saturday, Oct. 19 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Manning said one-third of the event will be directed to children's safety addressed by the fire and police departments.

• Granted a one day alcoholic license to Edward Fitzgerald for a benefit for the Quincy Historical Society at the Adams Academy Oct. 11 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

• Granted a common victualer and beer and wine license to S.W. Kwong Ent. Corp. doing business as the Asian Cafe, 21 Scammell St. at the Pilgrim Plaza. It was formerly Gold Star Restaurant.

Hours of operation for the 62-seat restaurant will be 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, Sundays from noon to 10 p.m.

• The board told George Nassar, Iron Focus Marketing Group, North Providence, R.I., who was requesting a permit to hold telephone solicitation for Mothers Against Drunk Driving (M.A.D.D.) and that in the future he must come before the board months before instead of days before. And also some solicitors were involving the Police Department in their calls. A celebrity softball game to benefit M.A.D.D. was to be held at Faxon Park Sept. 28.

• Granted a request of Quincy Babe Ruth to reserve Adams Field, Aug. 14-Aug. 27, 2003 for the 14th world series. Dick Lombardi is president.

Each of the 25 Neat Neighbor winners will receive a certificate from the city of Quincy honoring their accomplishment and a gift certificate to a local garden center.

"We are happy to recognize those people who work hard to make our city more beautiful by keeping their yards and homes attractive," said Mayor William Phelan.

"The impact that privately owned properties have on the surrounding neighborhoods is considerable. Our Neat Neighbors play an important role in making our great city such a beautiful place to live."

The contest was conducted under the direction of Tom Koch, the executive director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"This year's winners deserve extra credit for maintaining their properties despite the extremes in weather conditions we had this year, the extended summer drought especially," he said.

"Despite the tough season, these people made their yards and gardens beautiful. In the end, we all benefited from their hard work."

Each of the properties was nominated during a period of Memorial Day through Labor Day. The winners were chosen at random from all the nominees that met the requirements. There was no competitive judging.

NICK PANARELLI (center), retiring after nearly 50 years as owner of Nick's Shoe Repair, was recently honored by the City Council. With him are Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton in whose ward Panarelli lives and Council President Daniel Raymond. Raymond presented him with a City Seal pin and a Senate citation on behalf of state Senator Michael Morrissey. He presented Panarelli with a council commendation earlier.

Sam Rounseville, Sandra Fennelly Honored For Sales Achievement

Sam Rounseville and Sandra Fennelly of Century 21 Abigail Adams, 221 West Squantum St., Quincy, recently were honored at a mid-year banquet held at Hyatt Regency Hotel on Goat Island in Newport, R.I.

They were bestowed the Pacesetter Platinum Award for Outstanding Sales Achievement & Performance for the first six months of 2002.

"We are thrilled to recognize Sam and Sandra for their notable sales contributions and commitment to quality real estate service," said Jayne Magown, broker owner. "This award commends the continued dedication, hard work and professionalism that is hallmark of the Century 21 system and Century 21 Abigail Adams.

"Sandra's tireless efforts as sales manager have continued to increase our market share, while Sam's sincere and personable interest in his clients result in repeat business and client referrals."

In addition, Rounseville is presently ranked No. 1 and Fennelly No. 3 in Quincy in overall sales as reported by the Plymouth and South Shore Multiple Listing Service.

"This is a huge achievement in a city the size of Quincy where there are hundreds of practicing Realtors," Magown said.

Overall, the office is presently ranked No. 1 in multi-family and condominium sales in Quincy according to M.L.S.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyers Workshop Starts Oct. 21

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. will hold a free, three-session workshop for first-time homebuyers Oct. 21, 28 and 29 at Thayer Public Library, 798 Washington St., Braintree.

Speakers will be practicing real estate professionals. Participants will receive a workbook with valuable web site and other reference material.

Participants who attend all three sessions will obtain a certificate at the end of the course, which is a prerequisite for favorable soft second mortgages, Mass Housing mortgages and down payment closing cost assistance.

The workshop will be conducted in accordance with standards set by the Massachusetts Homeownership Collaborative.

For more information and to register or learn of future workshops, call Rona Goodman at 617-479-8181, ext. 115.

Homebuyers Workshop Oct. 19, 26 At Crane Library

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in collaboration with Abington Savings Bank, will sponsor a free First-Time Homebuyers Workshop Oct. 19 and 26 at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day. Breakfast will be provided.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Down payment grants up to $10,000 per family are available. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

Cantonese Homebuyer Workshop Oct. 19, Oct. 26

A free Cantonese Homebuyer Workshop will be held Saturday, Oct. 19 and Oct. 26 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 11 Hayward St., North Quincy.

Speakers at the workshop are practicing real estate professionals familiar with the needs of the Chinese community.

Participants will receive a workbook in Cantonese.

Those who attend both sessions will obtain a certificate at the end of the course, which is a prerequisite for favorable soft second mortgages, Mass Housing mortgages and down payment closing cost assistance.

Advance registration is required.

Call Rona W. Goodman, 617-479-8181 ext. 115 for registration in English or Jonathan Yip, 617-376-5151 for registration in Cantonese.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Six Simple Steps To A Smooth Move

(NAPS) — Moving can strain more than just back muscles. It can put pressure on the pocket book, test organization skills and try patience. According to the Employee Relocation Council, moving is only less stressful than coping with death or divorce.

With a little guidance and a few tips, even a first-timer can conquer a move and come out on top of the packing boxes. Some important things to remember include:

- For a do-it-yourself move, start early by collecting sturdy, medium-sized boxes and stocking up on magic markers, heavy-duty tape, newspapers and twine. Arrange to rent a moving van six to eight weeks prior to the move.

- If a moving company will be handling the packing, research companies and associated costs six to eight weeks before the move by asking them to survey the items they'll be moving. At that time, the company can provide more details on the packing process and give an accurate estimate of their fees.

Doing preliminary research and following a few guidelines can start even the most inexperienced mover off on the right foot

- Contact the U.S. Postal Service to fill out a change of address form and notify important people and organizations about the upcoming move, including friends and family, banks, insurance and credit card companies, health care providers, government agencies and the IRS. Also remember to cancel or change the mailing address for any magazine or newspaper subscriptions.

- At least one month before the move, rummage through storage closets, the garage and the attic and identify items that won't make the move. Dispose of them by organizing a garage sale or donating the goods to a local charity.

- Research gas, electric, cable and telephone service providers at the new address and arrange for new utilities to be connected the day of arrival. To quickly and easily arrange long-distance telephone service at your new address, call Sprint at 1-800-877-4646. Remember to ask current providers to disconnect service the day after the move.

- Using a magic marker, write the contents and destination on the outside of each box so it's easy to identify where it belongs at the new address. Make sure boxes are marked with "fragile," "open first," or "load last," if applicable.

"In the midst of a move it can be difficult to remember easy ways to save time and money," said Cindy Rock, vice president of sales and services at Sprint. "For example, a lot of people assume their discount long-distance calling plan will automatically be available at their new location. People need to make a point of contacting their long-distance provider, not just their new local phone company, to retain any cost savings after the move."

Doing preliminary research and following a few guidelines can start even the most inexperienced mover off on the right foot.

Quincy Community Action Reverse Mortgage Counseling

Homeowners over age 62 can obtain a reverse mortgage -- a loan against your home which you do not have to repay as long as they live there.

Such mortgages are especially helpful to seniors who are short of cash and have little or no mortgage on their current home. With a reverse mortgage seniors avoid monthly mortgage payments and can get loans for home improvements or to increase monthly income.

Quincy Community Action Programs provides individual confidential counseling about reverse mortgages on an ongoing basis to seniors and their families. At the counseling sessions, seniors can explore alternatives to a reverse mortgage, learn what kind of reverse mortgage would best meet their needs, and find reverse mortgage lenders.

To arrange for an individual reverse mortgage counseling session, call Rona W. Goodman, Housing Coordinator, at 617-479-8181 ext. 115.

New Technology For Toilets

(NAPS) — When it comes to toilets, most people don't give them much thought — unless they're overflowing or in need of cleaning. However, a national mandate has required many homeowners to reconsider — and, in a number of cases, replace — their toilets.

Today, all toilets must flush on only 1 1/2 gallons of water, which has forced people to consider the notion of toilet performance. After all, this mandate is expecting current models to do the same job as their predecessors with 60 percent less water.

Today's Technologies
There are currently two basic toilet technologies used in homes, and both have their advantages and disadvantages.

The most common system is referred to as "gravity-fed." This type of toilet is easily identified because when you lift the tank lid and look inside, you will see the flush water is held within the tank. This technology is designed to deliver water to the bowl at a rate that allows the trapway to fill with water, developing a siphon action that empties the bowl.

Advantages: Common technology, relatively low cost (around $115, on average), serviceable parts sold retail.

Disadvantages: Less water in the bowl; more cleaning required; smaller, more complicated trapway; doesn't flush the same volume of waste.

Relatively new to the market (within the last 15 years) is "pressure-assist" technology. This system uses a vessel within the toilet tank. The vessel is designed to harness water line pressure coming into the toilet, so when the toilet is flushed, the vessel creates a pressurized flush. The bowls are specially designed to use this pressure flush to push the waste out of the bowl, instead of pulling it.

Advantages: More water in the bowl; less cleaning required; simple trapway sizes and push action create better flush, eliminates clogging; and non-sweating, insulated tank.

Disadvantages: Toilets cost slightly more (starting at around $200), perceived to be noisier (studies show similar noise levels to gravity-fed models).

How Do You Choose?

The best way to choose a toilet is to ask yourself some simple questions, such as:

- How did your old toilet, using four or more gallons per flush, perform? If it did the job, then gravity-fed might do; if not, better consider pressure-assist.

- In which bathroom will the toilet be located? If it's the kids' bathroom, you should consider your needs for a better flush. If sleeping quarters are in the attached room, you might want to consider the noise aspect.

- How old is the plumbing system? Most systems were designed for older toilets, meaning pipes are larger in diameter than what is needed. If you have any problem with your draining, you should consider the pressure-assist system.

Most toilets marketed today indicate that they use only 1.6 gallons per flush. The consumer is thinking that might save them money on their water bill. However, if you double-flush to achieve performance, what are you saving?

One rule of purchasing has not changed: you get what you pay for. Look for toilets that have larger water surface areas and larger, simpler trapways for the best performance. And, above all, know your needs before you buy. You must get the decision right the first time for a simple reason: you don't see want ads for slightly used toilets.

BOYS' SOCCER

Quincy Downs Dedham, Playoff Berth In Sight

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' soccer team should have been ecstatic with Monday's 3-0 shutout against Dedham at Varsity Field.

First, the victory moved them within four points of clinching a playoff berth for the first time in over a decade. Second, it made up for the season-opening loss to Dedham, which happens to be its only defeat of the season and Dedham's only win.

Instead, the Presidents (6-1-2) are feeling a bit down as they lost senior goalkeeper and co-captain Matt MacNeil for the remainder of the season with a hip injury.

With about 15 minutes left in the game MacNeil made a sensational diving save to his right to preserve Quincy's 1-0 lead, but hurt himself as he came crashing down to the ground on his hip. He was taken to the hospital by ambulance.

"It was an unbelievable save," said second-year head coach Kevin Orcutt, who left the game to accompany MacNeil. "He's been working hard all year. He's gone for the season. He tore up a piece of bone in his hip. There's nothing you can do. It was a freak thing."

"My goal is to try to get Matt MacNeil back before the season ends and the only way that could happen is if we make it to the second round of the tournament. That's about six weeks away. He's just a great kid. He's been the backbone of the team since I got here. I want to get him in there for one more game."

Rich Hanton, former Quincy High girls' soccer coach who was attending the game, took over the coaching duties when Orcutt left. "He's one of the top, if not the best, goalies in the league," Hanton said. "That was one of the best saves of his career."

Sophomore Ray Marchand filled in for MacNeil and will continue to do so for the rest of the season.

"He's a good player," Orcutt said. "He has almost two games worth of experience this year. He's capable and he needs to step up. I think he'll be good in the future but we need him now."

Quincy took a 1-0 lead midway through the first half when senior defender and co-captain Craig Keenan fired a pass just beyond midfield to senior forward Bruno Pereira, who gathered the ball at the top of the box and blasted a shot past the keeper. In the second half, the Presidents had plenty of chances to increase their lead but could not convert. After MacNeil's injury, though, they were fired up and Pereira knocked home his second of the game off a great head pass by senior forward Washington Morisset.

With about a minute left in the game, Morisset and Pereira worked a beautiful give-and-go break with Morisset finding the back of the net to close out the scoring. Pereira leads the league in scoring with 19 points (13 goals, 6 assists).

Quincy's turnaround this season has been remarkable. And there were signs a year ago the program was starting to move forward. After a slow start last season, Quincy won five of its last seven games, just missing the tournament by one game with an 8-10 record.

"We're off to a good start," Orcutt said. "We're starting to get the hang of it. We're not playing spectacular, but we're not shooting ourselves in the foot like last year."

Quincy hosts Whitman-Hanson this afternoon (Thursday) at 3:30 at Varsity Field and Saturday night at 7 it takes on neighboring North Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Presidents Post First Win In 4 Years

Katie Kisielius and the Quincy High School girls' soccer team celebrated her sweet 16th birthday in style last Wednesday.

Kisielius netted the game-winner in last Wednesday's 2-1 victory at Randolph — the program's first win in four years.

"I'm so proud of this team," said second-year head coach Don Martin. "This is a real milestone for this young program."

The Blue Devils took a 1-0 lead in the first half on a goal by Jen Mitchell. Ten minutes into the second half, freshman Courtney Hall was taken down in the penalty area.

Colleen Martin, who missed a shot of last season with a serious injury, netted the subsequent penalty kick to tie the game.

With two minutes left in the game, Kisielius gathered a punt from keeper Sarah Shea and scored.

Quincy played a strong defensive game, led by senior co-captain Liz Campbell, Marissa Powers, Katie Walsh, Fionnula Bohan, Jessica Carella, Donika Hajrizaj and junior co-captain Kaila Saxe.

"Kaila is the defensive brain trust," Martin said. "She organizes the defense and has the speed to challenge the other players. She provides leadership in the back."

Offensively, Jen Gordon and Megan Griffin provided tenacious pressure up front to prevent the Randolph counterattack, while forwards Kristen Clarke, Hall and Katie Connolly kept the pressure on the Randolph defense.

With only 17 varsity and 14 junior varsity players,

North Girls Soccer Records 1-1-1 Record -- Story Page 18

Quincy has one of the smallest programs in the league, and one of the youngest. Despite its youth, the team shows great maturity.

"I have a freshman, Marissa Monaco, who is so calm with the ball and sophomore midfielder Danielle Rand never panics and has great ball possession," Martin said.

"I'm thrilled with the progress of this young team," he added. "These girls have worked hard all season and their hard work is finally paying off. They demonstrated improved passing, improved first touch and have developed great combination plays. I see a great future for Quincy High School soccer."

AN ENVIEABLE POSITION

Increasing numbers of car buyers are coming to appreciate the convenience and accuracy of the Global Positioning System (GPS), which is offered as an option in many new vehicles. GPS eliminates the need to fumble with maps or ask for directions in strange surroundings. The system utilizes satellites ("man-made stars") as reference points to calculate the vehicle's position, while the system's software calculates routes to desired destinations. On the way, drivers can consult directories for restaurants, service stations, motels, and other roadside features. When integrated with portable communication systems, GPS also makes it possible for data to be delivered to a central service center, where a service professional can relay important information and emergency aid.

Your safety and that of your family is our concern. A GPS system can help locate your vehicle in the event of a problem. Maintaining your vehicle is also very important for safety. Bring it to the ASE Certified professionals at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our friendly staff will gladly answer all your questions here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are also your local source for propane for grills, motorhomes, and converted vehicles.

Turnovers, Penalties Doom Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

Maybe the fog was so thick last Friday night in Hanover that we thought we were watching the Quincy High School football team but it was actually an impostor.

That would explain the Presidents' discouraging, 7-0 loss in overtime to the winless Indians.

"Any loss is discouraging but this one in particular because we literally did everything we possibly could to lose this game," said head coach Bob Noble. "And it finally came back to bite us on our backside at the very end."

In OI, junior fullback Nick Riordan scored on a 5-yard run and senior Dana Hansen kicked the extra point on Hanover's series, while Quincy fumbled on its first play of its series to end the ballgame.

"You have to give credit to Hanover," Noble said. "They hung in there, they hung in there, they hung in there. And it paid off for them."

Last season, the Presidents also won their season opener against Middleboro and the following week lost to Hanover, the start of a five-game winless streak. Quincy (1-1) will try to avoid that scenario tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when it squares off against Plymouth South in its home opener at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Against Hanover, Quincy committed seven costly penalties, two turnovers — one to begin the game, one to end the game — and two other blunders (blocked punt, bad snap) that led to its demise.

"I don't know how much more we could do to lose this game," Noble said. "How many turnovers can you have? How many penalties can you have that take away opportunities to score?"

After fumbling on its first play, Quincy got the ball back when senior captain and safety Shawn Munchbach picked off senior quarterback Adam Pardo's pass. On the next play from the Hanover 20, Quincy couldn't connect with wide-open receiver off an option pass.

Still, the Presidents marched into Hanover territory. But with a first down at the 35, they were penalized for an illegal snap and eventually had to punt. On its next possession, they had a second- and 5 at the Hanover 39, but another penalty (pass interference) pushed them back to their 46 and they ended up punting.

"We had two or three drives stall in the first half because of penalties," Noble said. "You get a penalty and all of sudden it's third- and 15 or third- and 20 and it takes you right out of it."

The Indians had a great opportunity to get on the board late in the half. With a first-and-goal at the Quincy 2 and 16 seconds left, Hanover called senior Mike Sirignano's number but the Quincy defense stuffed the 6-foot, 245-pound fullback for no gain and time expired.

In the second half, Hanover's ground game picked up the pace on the opening drive as it marched 61 yards to the Quincy 19. On third down, tough, Quincy junior linebacker Roger Palermo sacked Pardo for an 8-yard loss and Hanover turned the ball over on downs.

Although neither team did much in the passing game (Quincy senior Kevin O'Connell went 1 for 8 for 5 yards and Riordan finished 3 for 9 for 15 yards and 2 interceptions) both ran the ball effectively. Hanover rushed for 141 yards, led by junior fullback Pat Dwyer (71 yards) and Riordan (45 yards). Quincy gained 139 yards, paced by junior tailback J.J. Niamkey (111 yards).

Quincy gained two first downs on its first possession of the second half. After that, neither team could move the chains as they exchanged three-and-out possessions until late in the game.

With under a minute left on the clock, Palermo intercepted Pardo's pass at the Hanover 48 and jetted down the right sideline to the 15-yard line. However, a flag was thrown on the return as Quincy was penalized for blocking in the back.

Now Quincy had a first down back at its own 48 with 38 seconds left. And to make things worse, on second down it snapped the ball of O'Connell's head in shot-gun formation for a 25-yard loss.

"Penalties killed us," Noble said. "We had a big play defensively. We picked the ball off and then we block somebody in the back. And then we snap the ball over the quarterback's head for a 30-yard loss."

"The effort is there," he added. "But for whatever reason we just made it as tough as possible to win this game. We're better than that. But tonight we weren't and we lost."

we made a lot."

Junior backup quarterback Jimmy Burke started in place of Holleran and may also start against Falmouth.

"We're hoping that with a week of running the offense and taking a majority of the snaps he'll get acclimated to the varsity level," Green said.

Senior fullback Braun Goodson led the Skippers with four touchdowns and Cosimo Cambi returned an interception for their other score.

"We're playing a lot of younger kids and some performed well at Cohasset," Green said. "As a team we have to step up and play Red Raiders football. We didn't get to that level last week."

Win, Loss, Tie For North Quincy

Still fighting the injury bug, the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team finished 1-1-1 in its last three games to run its overall record to 5-3-1.

On Monday, the Red Raiders gave a lackluster effort in a 2-1 loss at Silver Lake. Last Wednesday, they played to a scoreless tie at Plymouth South and last Monday they notched a 2-1 home win over Barnstable.

"The effort early in the week was terrific," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "However, we played poorly against Silver Lake. Injuries and a lot of away games have made this a tough stretch. For the most part we've responded well."

North Quincy hosted Marshfield Tuesday and will travel to Taunton today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. On Saturday, it battles rival Quincy at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

North Quincy, which was dominant throughout the half, gave up the tying goal with a minute left. The Lakers notched the game-winning eight minutes into the second half.

The go-ahead goal seemed to wake the Red Raiders, who controlled the game the rest of the way and had two quality chances off corner kicks. Senior captain Christina Conley's header just missed the far post and freshman Lauren Milone and senior Lauren McGee could not poke home a loose ball in front of the net.

In the Plymouth South game, the Red Raiders had the better of play for most of the game but could not finish at the offensive end. Their best chance to score came late in the second half when Milone hit a rocket to the far post that the keeper just tipped wide with her toe.

North Quincy received fine efforts from seniors Nancy Yankun, Lisa Schifone and Venuti. Sophomores Eileen Price and Caitlyn Peters, filling in for injured starters senior quarterback Lauren Kalil and junior Katy Faherty, had tremendous efforts, both playing nearly the entire game at outside midfield.

In the win over Barnstable, North Quincy played without injured starters junior Sarah Gregory and Kalil. Senior captain Rachel Enos staked North Quincy to an early 1-0 lead when she tallied her second of the year on a cross from McGee. McGee, filling in for Gregory, continued her excellent play and was a presence on the field all game.

Barnstable tied it before halftime as some miscommunication in the back resulted in an easy goal. The Red Raiders responded early in the second half when Faherty took a pass from Conley and whistled a low shot into the net for the game-winner. It was Conley's fourth assist of the season.

Junior keeper Kristina Manganaro, along with senior sweeper and captain Erin McFarland and senior defender Jessica Jacques, were solid defensively in the second half. Midfielders Ashley Ridge and Amanda Saylor also played well.

Squantum Storm Bow, 22-8

The Squantum Storm gave a valiant effort but lost a tough game to the bigger Milton Mustangs, 22-8, in recent Quincy Youth Football action.

The Storm used a wide-open, run-and-shoot spread offense to try to counteract a 20- to 30-pound weight disadvantage.

Squantum trailed 22-0 after Milton ran the second-half kickoff for a touchdown, but turned it on and controlled the game at that point.

Quarterback Matthew Jaehrig (16 of 28, 184 yards) and Michael Garland (5 receptions, 119 yards) hooked up for a beautiful, 30-yard catch and run for a touchdown. Dave Guerriero (4 receptions) caught the 2-point conversion pass. On the drive, Jay Lewis made a nice catch off a screen pass to help set up the score.

Shortly after, R.J. Borden made the defensive play of the game when his solid tackle caused a fumble. Three plays later Squantum had moved the ball 70 yards down the field and appeared poised to score again before Milton safety Steve Lambert (2 TDs) intercepted a pass to squash the rally.

Michael Horgan had a strong offensive game with 5 catches for 40 yards. Matt Edgerly made a huge catch over the middle, good for a first down as he hung on to the ball despite getting blasted by the safety.

The offensive line of Nick Brown, Nash Winters, Tom Pasquantonio, Roger Cufaude, Anthony DiPalmo and Borden did a great job of protecting the quarterback.

Richie Groves, Ian Campbell, Jeff Davis, Cory Mayo and Dan MacAuley played well on the defensive side of the ball.

Granite Playoff Opener Friday

The Quincy Granite's home game last Saturday night against the undefeated Charlestown Townies was canceled.

Instead, the Granite (6-3) will travel to Charlestown (9-0) tomorrow (Friday) night at 8 for a game that will count both as the regular season final and the first round of the Eastern Football League Eastern Conference playoffs.

The extra week off should benefit Quincy, the No. 4 seed, which has had some nagging injuries, most notably to starting quarterback Liam Higgins and starting center Mike Zawilinski.

If Quincy can knock off the top seed, it will face the winner of the No. 2 Middleboro-No. 3 Roxbury matchup.

Last season, Quincy earned the No. 1 seed in the playoffs with an undefeated record but lost in the semifinals to Springfield.

Century 21/Richmond Associates Celebrate Triple A Championship

Century 21/Richmond Associates recently held a party at Cathay Pacific to celebrate the Triple A city championship won by the team it sponsors in Quincy Youth Baseball.

Stephen and Janice Richmond hosted the event for all the players, their families and employees of Century 21/Richmond Associates. Each player received a custom championship sweatshirt.

Also, Nicholas Poli was named the Joe DiMaggio League MVP of Triple A Baseball this past season.

Poli posted a perfect 7-0 regular-season record on the mound with 84 strikeouts and a 2-0 playoff record with 29 more strikeouts. He also batted .604 for the season with a home run and a team-leading 29 RBI.

NQHS Alumni Soccer Game Scores For Scholarship Fund

Alumni soccer players from North Quincy High School recently met the boys' varsity team in an exhibition game at Varsity Field to help raise money for a college scholarship for one current Red Raider.

The alumni team, which featured players from the 1970s, '80s and '90s, ended up losing the game, 4-1.

A raffle raised $300 for the scholarship fund. Some donations were from DiBella's Pizza, Jimmy's Tire, Victory Supermarkets, Applebees and Balducci's Pizza, all of North Quincy, Dunkin' Donuts of Wollaton, the Marriott Hotel in Quincy and the New England Revolution.

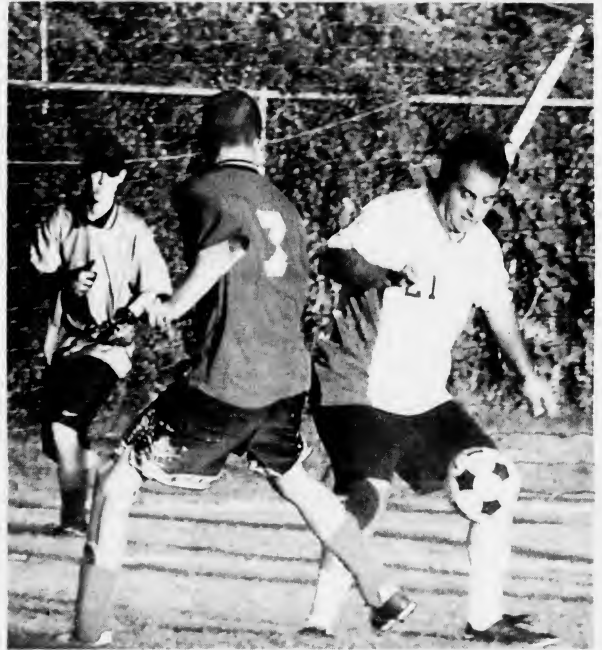

"It's a good start," said Joe LaPierre, event coordinator who founded the scholarship fund and is a 1984 graduate. "We hope this will be an annual thing. We want to get more businesses and people involved."

The scholarship winner will be announced at the team's annual soccer banquet at the end of the season.

The scholarship committee is still looking for donations. To make a donation, send checks to: North Quincy High School Boys Soccer Boosters, c/o Tricia Graeber, 43 Park St., North Quincy, MA 02170.

For more information about the fund, e-mail LaPierre at JLPierre@Netzero.com.

Quincy Travel Soccer Teams In 3 On 3 Tournament

Five Quincy Travel Soccer teams recently participated in the "Got Milk!" 3 vs. 3 Soccer Tournament in Framingham.

Comprised of five players per team, the game is made up of two 12-minute halves and is fast paced. The Milk Association of America sponsors the tourney nationally.

The 11-year-old team of Amy Carchedi, Corrine Barry, Paige Bonanni, Kerry

Coughlin and Lauren MacIsaac went undefeated and won its division.

The Quincy High School team of Marissa Powers, Courtney Peterson, Meagan Griffin, Colleen Martin and Sara Shea reached the finals.

The 13-year-old team of Mary Burke, Devin Cahill, Meg Therrien, Lauren Stille and Mary Kate Stille reached the finals where it lost, 3-2.

The 14-year-old team of Annamarie Campanale, Kaitlin Fish, Carolyn Gillis, Molly Mansfield and Caitlin McCleary made it to the finals where it lost, 4-3, to the 2002 Massachusetts Futsal champions in a thriller.

The 9-year-old team of Jillian Carchedi, Sammy Bonanni, Julia Nee, Michelle Barry and Kelsey McCarthy competed in eight games in the weekend tourney and played well against some tough competition.

Salome's Stars

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone has some suggestions to offer regarding your new project. You might find them helpful. Remember to avoid speculation and to stick with just the facts, Lamb.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An old friend suddenly reappears. Whether this proves to be a boon or a bane in the Bovine's life depends on the reason for this surprising reappearance. Be cautious.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Vital information finally emerges, allowing you to make that important personal decision. You can now move your focus to an upcoming professional development.
- CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might not like seeing so many on-the-job changes. But some of them could open new opportunities for the Moon Child's talents to shine to your best advantage.
- LEO (July 23 to August 22) An apparently solid-gold opportunity beckons the Lion. But check to see if all that dazzle isn't just a sprinkling of surface glitter. Check it out before making a commitment.
- VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A close friend could offer advice on how to handle a difficult family matter. But in the end, the decision has to be made based on what is best for you and those you love.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Family problems are best worked out with all those concerned contributing suggestions that will ease tensions. Stay with it until a workable solution is found.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Expect to hear more about an offer that has piqued your interest. You earn respect for insisting on solid facts, not just a fancy talk about potential opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) What seemed to be a reasonable workplace request might need to be defended. Don't fret. You have both the facts and a surprise ally on your side.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A bit of capriciousness might be just what you need. Plan to kick up your heels in a round of fun and games with family and friends this weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although some of your plans might have to be put on hold, things do begin to take a turn for the better by midweek. Your financial crunch also eases.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your financial picture begins to brighten by week's end. There are also favorable changes in your personal life. Someone you care for has good news to report.

BORN THIS WEEK: You seek balance, but not at the expense of justice. You would make a fine judge.

ing, jogging, swimming and jumping rope.

"If possible parents should try to schedule activities in 10 to 15 minute blocks of time throughout the day to help reduce fatigue, frustration and even boredom," Dr. Malanga said. "The overall goal is to make physical activity a way of life."

Although health benefits can be achieved simply from becoming more physically active, the greatest benefits come from engaging in planned and structured exercise. The best way to accomplish this is to get the whole family involved by planning activities that can provide everyone with exercise and enjoyment. For example, take a hike, play a game of tag or organize a neighborhood-sporting event.

With any form of physical activity, it is important to keep in mind the following safety guidelines recommended by Dr. Malanga:

- Warm up/cool down. Gradually begin and end your exercise session with five minutes of a light intensity activity such as walking at a slow pace. It is also important to stretch after your activity to help increase flexibility and prevent muscle strain.
- Proper equipment. Make sure both you and your child wear activity specific safety gear. For example, helmets for bike riding and elbow and kneepads for in-line skating.

- Exercise intensity. A good rule of thumb is the talk/sing test. If you or your child is breathing too heavily to sing, but still able to talk, the intensity is good.
- Prevent dehydration. Drink water before, throughout and after exercise. A good rule of thumb is to take a water break every 15 minutes. Therefore, if you're leaving the house, bring water with you.
- Don't overdo it. Exercise should stop immediately if you or your child experiences any of the following symptoms including pain, headache, dizziness, nausea and/or severe fatigue.

"Childhood is the best time to start formally healthy exercise habits," Dr. Malanga said. "By teaching your child the importance of exercise, you can instill fun and healthy habits that will last a lifetime."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.
IN THE GROOVE

A healthy tooth is surrounded by firm, pink gums (gingiva). At the edge of the gumline, gum tissue folds back underneath itself before connecting to the teeth. This creates a snug, 1- to 3-millimeter groove around each tooth called the gingival sulcus. One of the best measures of the health of gums is the depth of the gingival sulcus groove. The dentist or hygienist gauges this depth at several points around each tooth by inserting a thin measuring rod (periodontal probe) in the gingival sulcus between the gum tissue and the tooth. A depth of over 3 millimeters may indicate that a pocket is forming between the tooth and gum, which is evidence of gum disease.

Your teeth are intended to last a lifetime -- and they can, with proper care. You need not lose your teeth to gum disease. Periodontal disease is usually a slow, painless, progressive disease. We will check your mouth for any disorders, including gum disease. We will do everything possible to insure that your visits to us will be as comfortable and pleasant as possible. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our sole aim is to provide gentle, compassionate dental care of the highest quality. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The symptoms of red, swollen, and bleeding gums associated with the mild early form of gum disease (gingivitis) is caused by the immune system's inflammatory response to plaque or tartar buildup along the gumline.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We like this quotation by Robert South -- "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives."

BE GENEROUS - SHARE YOUR LIFE

Do I always think in terms of money when I think of being generous?

If I think about being generous with the richness that is always a part of my life, I lift the limitations I have set upon myself and always have plenty with which to be generous. I can be generous with words of praise and encouragement.

I can be generous with my smile.

I can be generous with my time.

I can be generous with my friendship.

I can be generous with my talents and skills.

I can be generous with my prayer.

I can be generous with my word of appreciation.

I can be generous with my example of a faith-filled God-directed life.

Yes, I can be generous with the richness of my life. --

Four Residents Freshmen At Simmons College

Four Quincy residents have enrolled at Simmons College as members of the Class of 2006. They are

Diana Chow, a 2002 graduate of North Quincy High School; Nicole Morrissey, a 2002 graduate of Quincy High School;

Valerie Ricciardi, a 2002 graduate of North Quincy High School; and Vanessa Wong, a 2002 graduate of Quincy High School.

Interest In Shipyard Property Development Impresses Mayor

By TOM HENSHAW

The future of the former Fore River Shipyard is a little clearer — but not much — today after prospective buyers detailed their proposals for development of 7 1/2 acres of the 130-acre site owned by the MWRA.

"I was most impressed by the interest that was shown in the area," said Mayor William Phelan, who attended the City Hall meeting. "I was not so much impressed by a particular project but by the willingness to invest in it."

However, the proposal that seemed to interest the Mayor the most was one advanced by Bluefin Robotics to construct unmanned submarines for use in mapping the ocean floor in places where divers cannot venture.

The Bluefin proposal was supported by a letter from the MIT Department of Ocean Engineering.

"We would see right away 50 or 60 new employees," said the Mayor. "Eventually up to 200."

Phelan said the creation of new jobs is one of three criteria he has for whoever buys the site from the MWRA. The others are the return of the property to the tax rolls and its compatibility with nearby residents.

The next move in the sale process is the selection of those whose proposals meet the MWRA's standards and a call for them to submit bids on the property, maybe as soon as later this month.

While it's up to the MWRA to choose a purchaser, the deal must be approved by the State Legislature, which gives the city some control over the sale through its legislative delegation. The MWRA has indicated a willingness to consult with the city, said the Mayor.

Other proposals for the 7 1/2 acre site included:

Jay Cashman, Inc., a construction company that would move its headquarters and marine division from South Boston to the Yard. Phelan called the Cashman proposal "interesting."

Northern Materials, a heavy construction company now headquartered in Boston, which would develop the site with Hub Technologies.

Shawmut Crane & Rigging, which would use the land for repairing digging equipment and as a warehouse. It would share the site with Bluefin Robotics.

Boston Development Group of Newton, which would develop the site for retail, office and storage use.

Building 19, which is looking for a place to relocate its closed Hingham store. Acorn Management of Quincy, which would dock a cruise ship as a hotel with up to 500 rooms on part of the property and turn the rest into a marina.

Eastern Salt Co. of Chelmsford, which would import and store as much as 200 tons road salt for distribution to local communities in the winter.

Mayor Phelan said one of the problems in selecting selling the land is the MWRA's pellet-making plant, which began as a temporary arrangement and now appears to be permanent.

"The pelletization plant limits the possibilities of what can be developed on the land," he said. "It is not an ideal neighbor. The fact that mitigation to the city has not been decided is a concern."

"We have to make sure the MWRA pays the city for having a plant in the city that limits the type of industry or other development that is brought into the Shipyard."

The rest of the 120 acres — 80 in Quincy and 40 in Braintree — that make up the former Shipyard is owned by the U. S. Maritime Administration as a result of the default by Massachusetts Heavy Industry of $70 million in government-backed loans.

The federal government plans to auction it off this winter.

A Special Side Trip

Oklahoma Governor Comes Here To Visit Adams Sites

Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating made a special stop in Quincy last week — as a tourist.

Keating was in the Boston area in his role as chairman of the National Review Board on Clergy Sexual Abuse to which he was chosen by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in June.

Keating, who spoke that night at Regis College on the clergy sexual abuse crisis in the church, found some free time Friday afternoon and he knew what he wanted to do with it: come to historic Quincy.

He's a fan of the Adams family.

While in Massachusetts he was assigned a state trooper to escort him while here.

The trooper happened to be John Cahill of the Executive Protection Unit. And Cahill happens to be a friend of Laurie Allen, Mayor William Phelan's quite able executive secretary.

They knew each other when Allen was a special assistant to Gov. William Weld and worked with the Executive Protection Unit.

Cahill called Allen and told her he was with the governor of Oklahoma who wanted to come to Quincy and see the Adams' sites.

Allen quickly cleared the way and met them. First stop was First Parish Church where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the church crypt.

Then it was off to the Adams Mansion on Adams Street, the summer White House for the presidents and the home of four generations of the Adams family, where he was joined by Phelan.

They also visited the Stone Library next door, the oldest Presidential library in the nation, with approximately 13,000 volumes that belonged to the two presidents and other family members.

"He was very excited to see these sites," said Allen. "He has a deep interest in the Adams family and may someday write his own book about them."

Sun photographer Robert Noble, who was there to record the visit, presented Keating with a photo he had taken of the statue of Abigail Adams and her son, John Quincy Adams, depicting her at age 32 and him as a 10-year-old boy. The bronze statue is beside First Parish Church.

Keating thanked him and said it was similar to a statue in Oklahoma of the Pioneer Woman and Her Son.

"My wife will appreciate the similarity between the two statues," he told Noble.

Phelan Sees Vote Undermining City Council PW Committee

Fink Pay Raise Goes Down, 8-0

By TOM HENSHAW

Mayor William Phelan says he feels the City Council undermined its own Public Works Committee Monday night when it voted opposition to a $10,850 raise for Public Works Commissioner Jay Fink.

"The proposal is part of the reorganization plan," said the Mayor. "It was not intended to be voted up or down. It is a work in progress. The purpose of bringing it to the committee was to come up with a final product. It was never fully discussed."

Actually, it was public opinion that sent the pay hike to an early demise.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi, a staunch opponent of the raise, held up a stack of e-mails and phones messages for all his fellow councillors to see.

"No issue," he said, "has generated the controversy that this one has. Countless e-mails, phone calls, letters to each and every city councillor during the past several days have been received.

"It is important that the City Council reflect the attitude of the public. The pay raise is outrageous and now the City Council has indicated to the Mayor that we're not going to vote for it."

And the City Council — jumping the gun, according to Mayor Phelan — voted 8-0 to delete the raise for Commissioner Fink from a reorganization plan for the DPW. Councillor Tim Cahill was absent.

In voting its opposition to the raise, the City Council bypassed its own Public Works Committee which is considering the reorganization proposal devised by Fink to bring the DPW to a new level of efficiency.

"Let the process work."

Joseph Finn, chairman of the Public Works Committee, told his colleagues.

"I don't think it necessitates a strong vote at this time. We should avoid this discussion because the committee could continue to do its work and bring only those things that are appropriate before this body."

Fink's reorganization plan called for him to receive the 13 per cent raise on top of his $84,312 salary which Phelan said he promised to help him get when he hired him as commissioner some seven months ago.

"We all realize the commissioner of public works is a very important position," said Councillor Frank McCauley to Fink, "but you

Coughlin Seeks Solution To Abandoned Shopping Carts

The battle has been joined and it's City Councillor Kevin Coughlin vs. the shopping carts that have been showing up in the streets, sidewalks, front yards and vacant lots across the city.

"It is really an issue of light," said Coughlin of the problem that has been rearing its head periodically for the past decade at least.

"It is a nationwide issue as I discovered on the Internet. I would like the representatives of the retail markets to come before the City Council with ideas on how best to solve the problem."

At the conclusion of Monday night's meeting, Coughlin introduced a resolution asking supermarkets and retail outlets that provide shopping carts to do just that.

In Meeting With Phelan

Parents Feel Confident Marshall Mold Will Be Solved

By TOM HENSHAW

Parents and teachers at the Marshall School came away from a meeting with Mayor William Phelan confident that the city is making progress in the battle with mold that has been plaguing the school at 200 Moody St. Extension, Quincy Point.

"It was a wonderful meeting," said Donna Brodeur, president of the Marshall PTO. "The parents were very pleased. We're confident the problem will be cleared up."

"The meeting went quite well," said the Mayor. "I think the parents and teachers appreciate the steps that have been taken. We are going to get to the bottom of this. It is not going to be swept under the rug."

Phelan said he has assigned an individual to interview parents and teachers to get the facts in the matter.

"There's a lot of hearsay out there," he said.

"We want to find out the employees' concerns, root out the areas of distrust and flush out and what was done to cover up the issue in the past and report to the PTO."

The School Committee has authorized $10,000 for an investigation to determine whether the four-year-old Clifford Marshall Elementary School is structurally deficient and who is responsible.

Phelan said the field has been narrowed to three or four firms to conduct the investigation of the mysterious mold that has appeared in the tile ceilings.

"We have to check out their reputations and find a company that all parties are comfortable with," he said.

Phelan said the issue first came to light last year when, as a member of the School Committee, he was running for mayor and happened to knock on Donna Brodeur's door.

"She told me about it and I brought it to the School Committee," he said. "How it went on as long as it did without the School Committee knowing about it I don't know."

"We had air quality tests made by state regulators. The issues were identified but there were no potential causes. This year there were no incidents. We assumed the tests were done properly. "Then there was a setback. We are concerned with some of the work that was done over the summer."

"We still haven't gotten to the bottom line. I hope the firm that we hire can identify this and we can hold whoever it is responsible. Meanwhile, the air quality is being monitored."

Mold could cause health problems to students and staff of the school by leading to respiratory infections and chronic ailments such as asthma.

As yet, Brodeur says she has not heard of any health problems due to the mold at the Marshall School.

Sherman St. Sewer Main Being Replaced

The Department of Public Works has started work on replacing a 10-inch sewer main on Sherman Street between North Central Avenue and Everett Street in Wollaston.

The DPW will replace 300 feet of the aging sewer main, a project expected to take approximately one week. Work began Wednesday.

Residents are requested not to park on Sherman Street between 7:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. in order to facilitate construction.

The need to replace the main was determined after a resident requested assistance for a sewer back-up Sept. 30.

The DPW determined that the sewer main had a blockage. The flushing truck dislodged a large grease plug from the main. A review of sewer blockage records indicated there have been five similar calls with the same conditions since July 8. It was determined that closer examination of the sewer system would be necessary.

DPW Commissioner Jay Fink concluded "that such a grease build-up in a relatively short time was not normal especially considering that the service area is residential."

Two days later, a joint effort between the MWRA TV inspection crew and City

Sewer Division found the existing 10-inch clay sewer main had deteriorated to the point that emergency replacement is required. There are several sections of pipe with lateral and longitudinal cracks, offset pipe segments and pieces of the sewer missing. Also, there are several locations where grease build up is evident.

Tracey Dorgan, a lifelong resident of Quincy and advocate for sewer and drainage improvements around the peat bog, said, "It's nice to finally see someone come down here, evaluate a problem and get it fixed in a timely manner."

Council Oversight Committee Hearing Oct. 21 City Employees Want Life Insurance Increase They Say Was Promised

By LANCE MORGANELLI

Personnel Director Roberta Kety told city councilors Monday night there was never any proof that city life insurance for current and retired city workers would be increased from $7,500 to $10,000 on July 1, 2002.

However, most councilors indicated there may be a legally binding obligation to honor the increase.

"It is another example of outrageous promises made, never discussed and never brought before the council in terms of an appropriation," Kety said.

In a memo dated March 2001 former Mayor James Sheets said that the money for the budget year was tight and the city would be unable to fund the request that year, according to Kety.

"There was no contract negotiation at that time," said Kety in reference to the lack of a legal agreement.

"It's not just a one item issue; it's a long-term issue that responsibility dictates we review it, that we look ahead," said Kety referring to a yearly increase that will occur once the initial raise is made. "It's a question of being competitive, of being conservative about our future, about making plans and not just idle promises..."

Kety did stress that the life insurance increase has not been concluded and she will explore situations in which there can be increases.

Apparently, the confusion over whether or not the benefit increase for city life insurance was expected came from a meeting between Sheets and the Insurance Advisory Committee in which a verbal agreement was reached that the insurance would be raised from $5,000 to $7,500 on Jan. 1, 2002 and then to 10,000 on July 1, 2002, it was noted.

According to reported memos, Sheets initially agreed to raise the insurance to $10,000 by Jan. 1, 2006. But in late October 2001, then Personnel Director Kevin Madden reportedly said the increase would take place $7,500 Jan. 1, 2002 with a subsequent increase to $10,000 July 1, 2002 with details coming later.

Council President Daniel Raymondi reasoned that if the increased life insurance benefit was agreed upon between two legally empowered bargaining parties – the mayor and the Insurance Advisory Committee – then the increase is a valid action that should be upheld.

"I don't see any document, I don't see any signatures or any memorandum in agreement [of the increase]," Kety said in response to Raymondi's reasoning.

Raymondi asked Kety repeatedly if she saw any merit at all in the legal qualities of the meeting to which Kety finally responded she saw no commitment.

Paul Phillips, president of Quincy Education Association and chairman of the Insurance Advisory Committee, said there is no signed document and they have never received any in the past even when, for example, the dental insurance plan was settled with Sheets in the same procedures.

"There is absolutely no question in [our] minds that we had an ironclad agreement from the mayor," said Phillips.

Kety said due to depleted funds, Mayor William Phelan will commit to half of the proposed $5,000 increase to bring the insurance up to $7,500.

Raymondi introduced a resolution at the Sept. 3 council meeting calling upon Mayor William Phelan to honor the commitment to current and retired city employees and increase the Basic Group Life Insurance benefit to $10,000.

The Oversight Committee of the council will hold a public hearing on the matter Monday, Oct. 21 at 6:30 p.m. in the council chamber.

The event was co-sponsored by The Improper Bostonian and MIX 98.5 FM.

Cahill Given Big Lead In Ch. 7, Suffolk U. Poll

Democrat Tim Cahill of Quincy has a big lead over Republican Dan Grabauskas in the race for state treasurer but almost a third of those taking part in a poll by Channel 7 News and Suffolk University said they were still undecided.

Some 35 per cent of the likely voters polled said they plan to vote for Cahill while 22 per cent leaned toward Grabauskas and 8 per cent for Green Party candidate Jamie O'Keefe. But a whopping 32 per cent had not yet made up their minds.

The margin of error is plus or minus 4.90 per cent in the poll that was conducted in the three days from Oct. 4 through Oct. 6.

The poll also showed Democrat Shannon O'Brien leading Republican Mitt Romney 42 per cent to 30 per cent for governor with 3 per cent going to Independent Barbara Johnson and 2 per cent each to Libertarian Carla Howell and Jill Stein of the Green Party.

Where Are The Republicans?

Looking at this year's state election ballot you can't help wonder where the local Republicans are.

Four important Beacon Hill seats held by Democrats are again a no-contest.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin are again assured of another term before the first ballot is cast Nov. 5.

The four, who have done a good job for Quincy, apparently are so deeply entrenched that no Republican wants to take them on.

That despite the fact that Republicans in recent years have vowed to do battle. But just don't get around to it.

There's also no Republican challenging Dist. Atty. William Keating or County Commissioner Peter Collins or Weymouth's Joseph Connolly who won the Democratic nomination for county treasurer over fellow Democrats Michael Joyce of Braintree and Quincy's Tom Koch.

The only Democrat with a Republican opponent in a local contest is Patrick McDermott. He is challenging Weymouth's Richard Schmidt who was appointed Register of Probate by Acting Gov. Jane Swift when Tom Hughes, of Quincy, retired a year ago.

The only other Quincy Democrat with a Republican opponent is Tim Cahill but he is running state-wide for treasurer. He faces Daniel Grabauskas, former Registrar of Motor Vehicles.

But on the local front, Republican candidates have been pretty scarce in both state and city elections.

Today, there are only two Republicans holding Quincy elective office: former Mayor Frank McCauley, now a city councillor; and School Committee vice-chairwoman Christine Cedrone.

Thus, Democrats far outnumber Republicans in municipal elective office 14 to 2. (Mayor's office, eight council seats and five school committee seats.)

It isn't easy to be a Republican candidate in Quincy these days. And it sometimes must feel lonely just being a Republican.

Quincy has done a complete political turnaround in a half century.

Fifty years ago -- and long before -- Quincy and Norfolk County were GOP country with that party holding just about every municipal, county and state (senator, representative) office.

Quincy and the county were as much a Republican stronghold back then as they are a Democratic stronghold today. With such prominent Republican names as Charlie Hedges, Tom Burgin, Charlie Ross, Clifton Baker, Dave (Tuck) McIntosh, Myron Lane, Amelio Della Chiesa.

Even as late as 1949, for example, there were twice as many registered Republicans as Democrats in Quincy: 14,786 to 7,034.

At last month's primary election, registered Democrats numbered 24,788 to 6,661 Republicans. That's a pickup of nearly 18,000 and a loss of 8,125 for the Republicans.

But the unenrolled -- formerly known as independents -- are coming on and have been for the past few years. Unenrolled registered at last month's primary numbered 20,237.

That's only 4,551 fewer than Democrats but 13,576 more than Republican.

The city and county shift to the Democratic side began in the 1950s with the political coming of John F. Kennedy.

There were other contributing factors, too. One was that during the GOP's heydays, Republicans lost promising young future political stars when the Old Guard was reluctant to step aside and give them room to run for office. They got tired of hearing "Your day will come."

So they started defecting to the Democrats who gave them the chance to run. One of them was a young Jim McIntyre whose father and mother were both Republicans. He probably would have been one, too, but opportunity was knocking at the Democrat's door. For him and others. And no Old Guard standing in their way.

A joke back then was that there were so few Democrats around, they could hold a pre-election rally in a telephone booth.

But they kept plugging away and as Quincy became more liberal, they numerically and politically took command.

No one wants a one-party system. But we could soon become a virtual one if Republicans surrender to the Democrats at the local level as they have been doing.

If Republicans are really serious about major two-party competition, they have got to be willing to take their lumps at the polls as the young Democrats did. They need some dynamic young people to reset their political roots.

And, as we have said before, maybe some of the older Republicans should get up off their memories of the good old days and help jump-start the party's future.

If Republicans fail at the local level, they eventually will fail at the state and national.

We need a lively two-party system with balances and checks. Not a one or one and a half system.

Republicans locally have come down with what you might call a case of tired blood.

Maybe a good shot or two of Geritol might help get them up and running.

Or the realization that the elephant is looking like an endangered political species that could be come extinct.

Very extinct.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930 real photo postcard view of one of the fleet of delivery trucks operated by Guay's System Bakeries Inc. The truck is parked on Maple St. next to the Quincy Post Office. Founded in 1920, Guay's became Quincy's largest bakery until it closed several years ago. The main store was at 1455 Hancock St. where in 1929 they built a building that is now the site of the Tae Kwon-Do Institute. At that time they also had stores in Norfolk Downs and Wollaston. By 1940, they had stores in Nantasket, Allerton, Scituate, Hingham and two in Dorchester. Owner Napoleon Guay and his wife, Mary, lived on Summer St. until they built a new house on Russell Park. The name Guay's can still be seen on the top of their building on Hancock St

The Atlantic Center And Pay Raises

As a member of the board of directors of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association, I recently attended an emergency meeting of the board called in reaction to the news that the city did not have the rent money to continue to house the Atlantic Neighborhood Center at 11 Hayward St.

Representatives from the Mayor's office came to explain the dire straits the city is facing. We were told the city and the Mayor's office were committed to providing the services at the center but they just didn't know where the services could be housed.

Sounds like a big problems to me and the other board members but how much bigger a problem is it for those using the services? When I questioned whether October's rent was paid yet, I was told September's still was unpaid. Sounds like a fiscal crisis spreading across the city to me.

Then I hear about the city's Public Works Commissioner who's been on the job six months wanting a $10,000 raise. He suggested hiking his salary by nearly 13 percent. He also wants salary hikes for four of his top managers too.

Said DPW commissioner Jay Fink, "I came to Quincy looking to do a good job. I think in the short time I've been here I've demonstrated my abilities. Therefore, if the salary continues to be below market rate and other opportunities arise, there is nothing keeping me here."

His below market rate salary is $84,132 and he wants $94,982. I've been with the state Department of Mental Health for almost 30 years, the last 17 years as a police officer and my salary is no ways near Fink's. Current salary. Mayor Phelan says he supports Fink and says Fink "is way underpaid."

Meanwhile, the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, a crisis is going on over how and where to provide services to folks in need. Fink's proposed 13 percent pay hike would pay the rent at Hayward St. through Dec. 31, 2002. If the city can fund a pay raise or should I say five pay raises for managers, they can pay the rent for the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

These opinions here are my opinions. They represent my frustration with a city government that needs to get its properties into better focus. Fink may need a raise but the timing couldn't be worse.

City Council President Dan Raymondi is right when he questions salary hikes when very little seems to be done in fixing our streets and sidewalks. These are hard times for everyone in this city. Both residents and city workers. Teachers get jerked around every spring. Bus monitors lost their jobs. Many school bus drivers were laid off. Everyone has been impacted by the souring economy.

If the DPW chief thinks he can find a better deal elsewhere, I say just be sure to close the door on the way out.

'Miracle' In Faxon Park

On Sept. 12, over 70 employees of State Street Bank, in cooperation with the United Way, descended on Faxon park to perform perhaps the most extensive cleanup the park has ever seen!

Overgrown paths were cleared, stone benches built in 1938 completely obscured by vegetation were uncovered and beautiful views of the ocean from various benches were restored through selective pruning. Massive amounts of trash were hauled away.

As a citizen of Quincy I would like to express my deep gratitude to State Street for allowing its employees to take a day from work to clean up our park and to its employees for the countless hours of effort they devoted to creating a true miracle in our park.

Wildcat Strike Ends At Fore River

By TOM HENSHAW

A wildcat strike of some 5,500 workers at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River Shipyard ended when management and labor agreed to turn their dispute over to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

First of the workers to walk out were 1,800 welders, complaining the company had upgraded rates and revised the bonus contract system without consulting with the union.

William Mullaney, president of the Independent Union of Fore River Workers, said the strike was not authorized but was led by "loud-voiced demurrers" in disregard of an understanding with the company.

The strike was kept from spreading throughout the yard by Major Edward C. Madden, an Air Corps veteran just back from 30 months in Europe, who spoke to the men about hardships suffered overseas.

The shipyard continued to operate during the walkout. TEACHERS' SALARIES SURVEYED

A survey of Quincy teachers' pay by Dr. Alfred D. Simpson of Havy and showed that the average salaries in high schools was $2,391, in junior high schools $2,276, and in elementary schools $2,017.

Dr. Simpson said the average salary for male teachers was higher than that for female teachers.

HOSTESSES SOUGHT

The USO said some 500 junior hostesses from Quincy will be needed to entertain the crew of the USS Quincy at a football game and a formal dance at the Armory while the Fore River-built cruiser is visiting Boston after participating in the invasion of France.

Spinach, Eggplant, Lasagna Rolls

Almost everyone loves lasagna, and I enjoy serving it. However, when you're serving a crowd and you're busy and have to begin cutting into the lasagna, it becomes sometimes a bit messy.

This recipe with a rolled lasagna is the answer and one I will probably use most of the time.

It's made with spinach and eggplant. Try it on your favorite. And the nice part is that you can also make this ahead of time.

I had cooked this before, but never as a lasagna.

- Spinach, eggplant lasagna rolls
- 1 tomato sauce
- 2 small eggplants (cut lengthwise) slices about 1/4 inch thick
- 1 bag spinach (or frozen equivalent)
- 1 pound ricotta
- 1 egg (slightly beaten)
- 10 lasagna noodles
- 1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese
- salt and pepper to taste

First prepare the eggplant with a bit of olive oil, salt and pepper, and place on a cookie sheet in a 350 degree oven for about 10 minutes.

Cook the spinach for about a minute or two. Drain and let cool for a bit. Squeeze any water left and chop. Now stir the ricotta, egg, spinach, parmesan, salt and pepper. Set aside.

Cook the lasagna until tender. Rinse under cold water.

In a baking dish, place some tomato sauce on the bottom. Lay out the lasagna on a work surface, and spread 1/3 cup of filling over each noodle and cover with eggplant slices. Roll up each and arrange them seam sides down. Spoon sauce over each one and cover with foil.

Bake in the center of the oven for about 20 minutes. Serve with extra sauce and grated cheese if desired.

They are so pretty to look at with their colors of the spinach, ricotta and tomato sauce. And so easy to serve. Of course if you don't like eggplant, just do the spinach mixture instead.

'The World Goes Round' At Quincy Dinner Theater

Two community activists are this year's recipients of the Good Scout Awards.

P. J. Foley and Don Uvanitte were honored for their community service at the annual Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast last week at the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Foley and Uvanitte were presented the Neponset District Boston Minuteman Boy Scout Council awards by Mayor William Phelan.

Phelan received a Crystal Eagle Award for his work with the Boy Scout movement and for organizing and hosting the breakfast. The presentation was made by Brian Shankey, director of the Neponset District Boston Minuteman Boy Scout Council.

"The scouts do an outstanding job to instill important values in our young people during their most formative years," Phelan said. "The activities are purposefully chosen to build character in boys which help them to go on to lead full productive lives."

One of the most important values learned in scouts is the appreciation of the community to which they belong and the significance of making a contribution to our community," Phelan said.

"Today's honorees are remarkable for their contributions to our community."

Foley, employed at Verizon, is a member of the IBBW 2222 and vice chairman of their committee on political education. He serves as a volunteer on the Mayor's Commission on Tourism and the Mayor's Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Phelan noted Foley's leadership in cleaning up the Hough's Neck marshes which included three years of preparation and development of an integrated management plan which reduces mosquito breeding, enhances fish breeding and attracts birds.

"Pretty good for a guy from the neighborhood, eh?" said Phelan. "Some call him an environmentalist. Some call him a community activist. Some call him the guy who saved the marsh."

Foley started his cleanup effort after he purchased a piece of land near his home and the Conservation Commission asked him to clean it up. He was doing just that when he noted the abutting marsh land needed a cleanup, too. He was doing that also when he realized the job was getting too big for him alone.

He approached state and federal authorities to see what funds were available. He pursued all avenues of possible funding. He spoke at the Hough's Neck Community Center. He spoke to friends and neighbors about it. Pretty soon he had a small army ready to march on the marshes at his command.

"John F. Kennedy once said, 'One person can make a difference and every person should try,'" said Phelan. "I can think of no better example of that."

The second honoree, Don Uvanitte, a lifelong resident of Quincy, is vice president of Allied American Insurance in Quincy.

"But this guy is not your average insurance agent," said Phelan.

"When I first became mayor, I went to a breakfast meeting at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Don was there. He's on the Board. Then I met with representatives of the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board. Don was there. He's chairman of the Board."

"I attended the Quincy 2000 Executive Board meeting. Again Don was there. He's the chairman of that Board, too. He was also at the Quincy Partnership meeting. He's on that Board, too. In fact, he's on the Board of the Quincy Medical Center, the Beechwood Community Center, the Quincy College Foundation, the Lions Club, Work, Inc., Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts, the Salvation Army, and the March of Dimes."

"Don has chosen causes which he believes benefit his community and they tell a lot about what kind of a man Don Uvanitte is."

"He values his community and helps those who are most in need. He works to support our local economy. He is chairman of the Board of an organization charged with assisting people secure meaningful employment. He supports our local health care facility and he volunteers on behalf of those with particularly difficult challenges to face."

Lynne Harrington Volunteers Summer In South Africa Caring For Newborn Babies

Lynne Harrington, granddaughter of Mrs. Leroy E. Bertoni of Quincy, recently returned from 10 weeks of volunteering at the Love of Christ Ministries in Eikenhof, South Africa.

Established in 1993, the organization takes into care any newborn infant who has been abandoned or is totally destitute. It provides them with a long-term family environment in which to grow to adulthood.

Harrington, currently a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst who hopes to become a doctor, spent from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., six days a week, with the babies.

She changed nappies (diapers), made about 100 bottles of milk and formula, fed porridge to up to 10 babies, and received endless hugs and smiles.

She received a certificate

LYNNE HARRINGTON recently returned from volunteering at the Love of Christ Ministries in South Africa caring for newborn babies.

of appreciation for her 840 hours of dedication and service.

In addition to helping with the babies, Harrington befriended other volunteers from all over the world, including Ireland, Germany, England, Australia and Canada as well as South Africa.

The Love of Christ Ministries relies heavily on donations and at times they ran out of baby wipes and strained vegetables and had to wait for donations in order to replenish the supplies. Unfortunately, some of the babies are seriously ill and two died while Harrington was there.

17 Domestic Violence Victims Remembered At Interfaith Service

By DOLORES TORTUCCO

Seventeen victims who died of domestic violence this past year were memorialized Sunday night at a solemn Interfaith Service of Remembrance and Healing Candlelight Vigil at Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston.

A single white rose for each of the 17 victims was placed in the altar. The names were read by Karen Brinkman, president of the South Shore Coalition for the Prevention of Domestic Violence, and Tracey Phelan, community counselor with the domestic violence unit under Commissioner William Delahant and wife of Mayor William Phelan.

Another rose was added signifying all those whose stories are not known but also died of domestic violence during this past year.

In front of the altar where the names were read stood some of the "Silent Witnesses." Others were lined up outside the church. Peace at Home, a human rights agency dedicated to stopping domestic violence, displayed the red wooden silhouettes, one for each of the 17 victims who died since January. Each silhouette was a plaque listing the person's name, date, and place of death.

"The plywood cut-outs are stark and simple, but moving, still the same when you see them there in front of you. It is almost as if those who have died are there in spirit," said Gini Kurtzman, president of the board of directors of Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE).

The following people were honored at the seventh annual Interfaith Service of Remembrance and Healing, sponsored by the South Shore Coalition for the Prevention of Domestic Violence:

Jeffrey Smith, 38, Brockton.
William Ouellette, 53, Danvers.
Rosa Alarcon, 28, Waltham.
Bernard Harfield, 72, Framingham.
Nancy Hensley, 45, East Boston.
Dorothy Giunta-Cotter, 35, Amesbury.
Destree Saunders, 38, Cambridge.
Sheryl Gordan, 43, New Bedford.
Annette Soares, 39, Haverhill.
Karen Trudeau, 38, Blanford.
Donald H. Edwards, 72, Lynn.

Candace Scola, 32, Worcester.
Denise Shearman, 36, Roxbury.
Tindsay Hazard, 24, Worcester.
Deyst Carras, 25, East Boston.
Connie Gagliardi, 41, Salem.

Ching Lee, 65, Quincy.
After hearing the names of the 17 victims and survivor testimony, members of the congregation stood and spoke the first names of those in their own life who have been wounded, threatened or killed by violence.

"From silence, to naming, to action," the service was all about remembrance and raising the public's awareness that the cycle of domestic violence which not only harms lives, but also claims them can be stopped.

"We are only a small group of people, but we can make a world of difference. Violence is learned; therefore, it can be unlearned. We are here to prevent domestic violence from continuing in our country," said the Rev. Carol Stine, pastor of Quincy Community United Methodist Church and one of the founders of the South Shore Coalition for the Prevention of Domestic Violence.

City Councillor Joseph G. Finn said the fight against domestic violence is a community issue he supports.

"I am happy to participate in an event showing the kind of support being expressed here this evening...it is very moving," said Finn.

A survivor of domestic violence, who wished to remain anonymous, told her story of survival and hope. She said she was with her abuser for 16 years, 13 in marriage. She gave a brief history of herself to explain the "power of brainwashing" in a violent relationship.

"When I met him," she said, "I was the first woman to receive a BS in construction engineering from Wentworth Institute of Technology in Boston. I was young, strong, positive and energetic...The bruises from his abuse lasted for over a week. But, they were nothing compared to the emotional deterioration process of my self esteem, self respect, self confidence and self worth that was taking place without my knowledge."

Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore YMCA, called her an "inspiration." Yohe said that as a survivor she wanted to ensure others received the same assistance she did.

"She has reached out to raise money so children and families who are in need can receive services like daycare, after school care and teen programs," said Yohe.

Tracey Phelan said, "It is great to celebrate the survivors. There are so few success stories. Women are afraid to ask for help and the only way they can get out is if they are financially independent and have a good support system in place."

The support system which cited by Sunday's survivor as her "life line" are: family, DOVE, South Shore YMCA, Quincy Community United Methodist Church, the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, Headstart, Norfolk County Probate and Family Court, Quincy District Court, Quincy Police Department and Quincy Public Schools.

Karen, of Quincy, another survivor, participated in the evening's dramatic presentation entitled "Under the Blanket" along with Gwen Devasto of the Weymouth Police Department and Susan Canavan, a hairdresser and Quincy resident.

The presentation strongly conveyed the message that victim's of domestic violence are not to blame. It demonstrated that victims are isolated from their family and friends to keep the truth about the abuse hidden or "under the blanket," but in reality they are calling out "help me!"

DOVE sheltered 113 women and their children since last October.

"We directly helped to insure that these 113 women would not be among those we memorialize here tonight...We worked to help these women heal, to support them, counsel them and to attempt to give them back their self-esteem so they could begin a new life safe from the fear of abuse," said Kurtzman.

After listening to the names of the victims and survivor stories participants lit candles and silently walked around the neighborhood carrying signs with the victims' names. After the silent candlelight procession around the block was completed the group returned to the church where survivors were encouraged to get up and identify themselves as a "survivor to celebrate" their life.

RED PLYWOOD SILHOUETTES represented each of the 17 victims who died of domestic violence this past year at the Interfaith Service of Remembrance and Healing at Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston Sunday. Nearly 100 people took part.

DAFFODIL BULBS are distributed as a Symbol of Peace.

PARTICIPANTS AND THE planning committee for the Interfaith Service of Remembrance and Healing included, from the left: Shirley Smith, Roberta Kedy, Karen Brinkman, Laurie Kelliher, Pauline Collins, Sue Canavan, Tracey Phelan, Ralph Yohe, Joseph Finn, the Rev. Carol Stine and Nakyoung Im.

Margaret Buckley, an organizer of the event and a member of the North Quincy and Wollaston Interchurch Council, said the candlelight vigil is a powerful way to catch people's attention and raise awareness about domestic violence.

Mary Lou Gifford, associate pastor Union Congregational Church, Braintree led the "Call to Mindfulness" in which she encouraged everyone to go deep within their hearts to honor those lost.

"This is truly a cause to still our lives and pause for a brief moment. A chance to express our outrage and grief as we recall the senseless killings of those we honor here tonight. Lives cut short at the hands of anger and violence."

Gifford also led the offering. However, it was not what everyone expects of an offering. When the offertory plates were passed, they were not sent to seek a donation but to give something to the congregation.

Daffodil bulbs were offered as a symbol of peace.

"Let yourself be nurtured and nourished as you plant them and in the spring they will come up as a sign of peace and remembrance," said Gifford.

'Defending Our Lives' Film At First Parish Oct. 19

The Candlelight Vigil was one event planned to mark Domestic Violence Awareness Month. At 7 p.m. Oct. 19, a screening of "Defending Our Lives" will be shown at the United First Parish Unitarian Church in Quincy.

The film, which won an Oscar in 1994 for best short documentary, tells the story of the "Framingham Eight," women convicted of killing their abusive husbands. Stacey Kabat, who produced the film, lives in Quincy.

Quincy College To Lease Classroom Space At Former Ledger Building

Quincy College President Sean Barry told the Quincy City Council Monday that part of Quincy's historic center would become home to a "flagship academic program" under a new lease by the college.

Quincy College's allied health programs and community development programs will move into the long-vacant 13-17 Temple St., known more commonly as the Ledger Building, in the coming weeks, once City Hall processes the appropriate lease.

The new space replaces the classrooms and labs in the Heritage Building further down Hancock Street, Barry said. The college is using the basement of the Bethany Congregational Church for allied health programs until the move.

"While the current temporary space is a large inconvenience to students, all of us at the college are thrilled with the new classrooms, offices and labs being built by the landlord for our programs," Barry said. "This space replaces space occupied under an expired lease.

SEAN BARRY

It doesn't represent new growth, but it does mean our programs will be located closer to campus in state-of-the-art facilities."

Barry explained the search for replacement space began in the spring, working with City Hall and according to the law, an RFP was produced and this location provided the best proposal and a willingness to build to suit. Students and staff had urged the president to move the classrooms closer to Coddington Hall.

"The proposal brings allied health closer to our campus, and stimulates pedestrian flow, commerce and the thriving appearance of the lively center of Quincy," Barry said. "As our college nears the 50th anniversary, our founders would be very proud of the reputation and image of the college and the exceptional nursing and surgical technology programs."

"We urgently need to move into the space by early December. We're excited to be here and to share with you this great news," he told the council, before a council chamber filled with nearly 100 college employees and students.

"I was encouraged by the compliments and the support provided by the council, and by the large number of public employees present with our students in a demonstration of support for the college," Barry said.

Some 4,400 students attend Quincy College each semester. The college receives no funding from the state or federal government. The college budget relies 100 percent on tuition revenue to provide degree and certificate programs, Barry said.

Germantown Food Pantry In Danger Of Holiday Meltdown

Families in Ward 1 who depend on the Seaside Food Pantry at 15 Bicknell St., Germantown, for their Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners are in imminent danger of going without this year.

"With the holidays coming up, we have to make a decision on whether to give families a turkey or just a certificate this year," said Peter Seppala, the pantry director.

"We just got a grant of $2,700 from Project Bread but we need $5,000 or $6,000 to cover both holidays. It's been difficult this year because of 9/11."

Last year the pantry, which covers all of Ward 1, dispensed more than 350 complete holiday dinners to those families who needed them but this year's donations are falling far short.

Anyone who wishes to donate food or cash to the Seaside Food Pantry should contact Seppala at 617-479-0828. It's open Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Concourse Bridge Soon To Open, FR Bridge Dec. 1

Two Major Roadway Projects Near Completion

Two major roadway construction projects will soon be completed, Mayor William Phelan announced this week.

The Mass Highway Quincy Center Concourse Phase I project has completed the final paving process. This restores two lanes of traffic in each direction on Bugin Parkway, easing the congestion of the past few months. The new bridge is expected to open in four or five weeks after the completion of traffic signal work and landscaping.

The Washington Street project from South Street through the rotary to the Fire River Bridge is also ready for final paving. The roadway will be milled and structures adjusted over a period of two weeks before final paving and line painting of the roadway is performed.

The failure on the part of the owners of the abutting properties to respond to numerous requests for information to allow for the relocation of underground electrical lines resulted in unnecessary delays in the project, the Mayor's office said.

"We worked very closely with the state to move the concourse project along," said Phelan. "We are pleased that both projects will be completed in a matter of weeks and confident that we will see an improved traffic flow in both areas."

At this time, the temporary Fore River Bridge is scheduled for opening Dec. 1. The temporary bridge will tie into the existing approaches and will only carry southbound traffic. The northbound lanes will continue to use the existing bridge until March 1, 2003, when northbound traffic will also be relocated to the bridge.

QSD Sewer Project To Start Oct. 14

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has begun preliminary work to enhance the protection of a sewer line along Quincy Shore Drive from East Squantum Street to Fenno Street.

The work will not impact Quincy's sewer service, the MWRA said, but during some stages of the project some traffic impacts will be experienced.

MWRA's contractor, R. Zoppo Corp. of Stoughton, will begin construction work on Monday, Oct. 14. Initial test pits were dug near Milton Road last week. The project is slated to be complete by Dec. 17.

The MWRA cleaned and relined this sewer line, the Squantum Force Main, in 1998. At the time it was discovered that more corrosion-mitigation work would be necessary to assure the long-term integrity of the pipe.

The Squantum Force Main conveys sewage from the Squantum Pump Station in Quincy to MWRA's High Level Sewer, which then travels to Nut Island for screening. It then heads under the harbor to the state of the art Deer Island Treatment Plant for treatment.

The total cost of the project is $981,123.

Due To Vaccine Cuts

Only Two Public Flu Clinics Scheduled

Due to drastic cuts in state supplies of vaccine for the 2002-03 flu season, there will be only two public clinics to handle that part of the city's population at highest risk, the Quincy Health Department announced.

They will be held Wednesdays, Nov. 13, at the Elks Home, 254 Quarry St., and Nov. 20 at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., both from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The target population are those 65 years and older and those with documented medical conditions.

The Boston Visiting Nurses also will hold clinics at the Star Market on Granite Street, Saturday, Nov. 2, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon; at the Brooks Pharmacy on Hancock Street, Sunday, Nov. 3, from 12 noon to 2 p.m.; and at the Brooks Pharmacy of Granite Street, Sunday, Nov. 17, from 12 noon to 2 p.m.

"This is a very difficult situation," said the Health Department. "The department does not like to turn away anyone, but people must remember that this free vaccine is targeted to the most needy and most vulnerable."

It is recommended that people inquire when their physicians will have vaccine. The state has made available to doctors a list of companies from whom they can purchase vaccine. They have been told not to rely on state vaccine alone.

It is hoped that more vaccine will be available in late November or December to vaccinate those at lower risk. Since the flu season typically peaks between January and March, flu shots can be given through December and even January and February.

The public will be notified of new clinic dates when vaccine becomes available.

Last year, Quincy received 4,310 doses of vaccine for its public clinics and the 2002-03 allotment was set at 3,510. But a $2 million shortfall caused the state to cut its purchase of vaccine by 19 per cent, bringing Quincy's allotment down to 2,850 doses.

$138,000 Common Street Reconstruction Underway

Phase 1 of the Common Street Reconstruction Plan, for which the city of Quincy has allocated $138,000, is scheduled to begin this week.

Common Street will be reconstructed and repaved from the intersection of Quarry Street to the intersection of Cross Street.

"As you know," said Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly, "the difficult financial situation the city faced this year significantly hampered the city's ability to undertake any major roadwork.

"However, I fought hard to make sure the Common Street project would proceed."

Connolly has scheduled a neighborhood meeting to discuss the Common Street plan tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. in the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The city engineer will discuss the project schedule and work that will be completed.

Fink Pay Raise Goes Down, 8-0

Blow in here in March and you're looking for $10,850 in October. There's no way we can justify it."

Phelan said the council's action in prematurely voting down the raise has undermined the public works committee.

"This should have been done in the context of a working committee," he said. "In cooperation with the council, the unions and the DPW."

The commissioner was asked to come up with a reorganization plan to be worked on by the committee. Raises for the commissioner and others were included. But it never got out of the box.

"The raises that were in there actually would have decreased the cost to the DPW. One job would be eliminated and another job decreased. It was to have been a cooperative effort."

Councilor Finn had it right. The Council tried to remove a minor point in the plan without looking at the overall process as a whole. It didn't allow the committee to do its work."

Phelan said the public works committee "will take up what is left of the plan — unless someone wants to undermine that, too."

Council President Raymond said his main concern is that "it's not a reorganization plan at all and it does nothing to repair our sidewalks and streets. What it was all along was a pay raise for the commissioner and a few other people in the DPW."

He asked rhetorically how a raise can be considered when so many other programs and positions in the city are suffering from the financial crunch.

Finn said he opposed the motion to reject the commissioner's raise only on the grounds that his committee should be allowed to do its work on the issue before a vote is taken.

Raymond insisted that the salary increase issue would cloud the work of the committee and should be resolved right away by the Council as a whole.

"It is so outrageous and the public has so responded that if you truly believe in reorganizing this department we need to rid ourselves of this issue because it will dog the work of the committee," he said.

"This has received such an overwhelming response from the public in the negative that we have an obligation to respond to it and it does not interfere with the work of the committee at all."

The Council President added that the issue should not be extended out in committee because Fink has the right to know upfront if his raise will go through because he has indicated that he may want to look for other employment.

"There's no way we can leave it in committee," said Councilor McCauley, "because it will fester there. But, unless you want to really stir up the pot in the city and have a lot of disgruntled employees, don't let it sit and let's pass this."

McCauley also offered an amendment to include all the other proposed pay increases for DPW personnel but it failed on the vote meet the approval of the Council.

QUINCY'S NEWEST TAKE-OUT restaurant, Wing Dings To Go, opened recently at 1610 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Wing Dings . . To Go Opens In Quincy Center

Wing-Dings . . To Go, Quincy's newest takeout restaurant, recently opened at 1610 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Owner Lorraine Lee has been in the restaurant business 16 years and was involved in the opening of three other local restaurants, including Pat Flanagan's Pub in Quincy and Boston.

In January, Lee graduated from Quincy 2000's NxLevel Program for Entrepreneurs business planning course. Quincy 2000 is the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

"NxLevel program taught entrepreneurs how to create a business plan that would give guidelines for all business owners to follow and the research to outsource for private funding to help create their businesses," said Lee.

She also brings the financial acumen she developed in her Account Management

Business to this new initiative.

Wing Dings . . To Go has a unique concept, offering customers a variety of 12 different sauces for their fresh chicken wings and chicken tenderloins, ranging from New York Style Buffalo, Honey BBQ, Spicy Mexican and Terodactil.

There is a wood smoker on premises for hickory smoked pork ribs and pulled pork sandwiches. A selection of fresh salads and appetizers completes the concept. This is a specialty takeout with a significant upgrade in quality from standard fast food fare.

The restaurant hours are Monday and Tuesday from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 12 noon to 6 p.m. through the football season.

Produced in collaboration with the UMass/Boston Small Business Development Center, Quincy 2000's business training program will offer a focus on finance this fall. Interested parties can contact Quincy 2000 for this six session course which starts Oct. 23.

Neighborhood Crimes Issues To Be QCNA Meeting Focus

Neighborhood crime issues will be the focus of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association at its meeting Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library's first floor meeting room, Washington Street.

Representatives from the Quincy and MBEX police and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gatro will attend.

The crime issues to be discussed include a recent homicide on the Library grounds.

Time permitting, there may also be updates or discussion on previously cited issues, such as present and future construction project in the area: the proposed new high school on Faxon Field wetlands, leakage in Keyspan's 24 inch high pressure gas line, the local rodent problem, and the opening of the new Quincy Center Concourse.

Quincy Center residents and the general public are invited to attend.

Funds Can Be Used At The Homeowner's Discretion

Senior Homeowners Seeking Benefits, Flexibility Of Reverse Mortgages

A home financing alternative that allows senior citizens to tap the equity in their home to supplement their retirement income is gaining popularity, and quickly.

According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the number of reverse mortgages has more than quadrupled since the early 1990s, when the product was first introduced.

"We've seen tremendous increase in demand for reverse mortgages over the last few years," said Jeffrey Taylor, vice president of senior products for Wells Fargo Home Mortgage. "This year alone, we expect to close nearly twice as many as last year.

"We believe there are three primary reasons for this growth: a better understanding of the product; an aging population; and an effort by the American Association for Retired Persons (AARP) to promote the benefits and flexibility of the product."

A reverse mortgage is a loan that enables senior homeowners to convert part of the equity in their home into tax-free income without having to sell their home, give up title or take on a new monthly mortgage payment. In general, reverse mortgages are limited to individuals 62 years or older who own their own home free and clear of debt or only have a small loan balance remaining.

One of the biggest selling points of the reverse mortgage is its flexibility. The product allows senior homeowners to choose how they want to receive their mortgage funds: 1) as a lump sum; 2) as monthly income — for up to life; 3) as a line of credit; or 4) as a combination of monthly income and line of credit.

These funds can then be used at the homeowner's discretion — to pay for home repairs, medical costs, in-home care or education, or simply as supplemental retirement income.

No monthly payments are made on a reverse mortgage during its term. It simply becomes repayable when the home is sold or vacated for other reasons.

Here's how a reverse mortgage might work: a 75-year-old homeowner, with a property value of $150,000, could select a monthly disbursement of $628 for as long as they live in the home. The homeowner could also choose to receive an open credit line or lump sum payment of $100,499.

"A home is one of the most powerful assets we have during our lifetimes," Taylor said. "A reverse mortgage is a privilege of longtime homeownership, and a great opportunity for eligible seniors to ease their financial burden. It's no wonder so many are exploring this option."

For more information about mortgage products and services, call Wells Fargo Home Mortgage at 1-800-336-7359.

Real Estate in the New Era

IT'S YOUR MOVE

When moving, look to friends and family to recommend a mover who have provided them with good service in the past. Also consider that bigger may not be better when it comes to movers. In fact, people are increasingly tending to use smaller specialty movers who can offer personalized attention. Homeowners should ask for a "not-to-exceed" estimate, which ensures that the final price for the move will not exceed the estimate figure. There are three levels of insurance available, from limited liability to full protection. Ask for an explanation of each alternative, and choose a plan that corresponds with the value of your possessions. Also review your homeowners policy to see if it provides appropriate coverage for valuable items.

Whether you're moving across town or across the country, it's important to hire a reputable mover who you can trust with your valuable possessions. At CENTRAL REAL ESTATE, we work in your best interest to make sure your move goes as smoothly as possible. We can help you locate the home of your dreams and advise you on mortgage lenders, house inspectors, and movers. Call us at (617) 328-1312 to arrange a consultation. Visit us at 128 McGrath Highway.

HINT: The most important document of a move is the bill of lading, which is your written contract with the mover.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Six Century 21 Annex Realty Realtors Complete Certified Buyers Training Course

Century 21 Annex Realty Inc., with offices in Quincy and Haverhill, announces six Realtors from the company's Quincy office recently completed a training course to become Certified Buyer Representatives (CBRs).

Century 21 Annex Realty's newest CBRs are Dianne Demarkles, Julie DiSciacca, Judy McDonough, Mary O'Brien, Mitch Rudnick and Phyllis Rudnick, all of Quincy.

A CBR is a cooperating agent who legally represents the real estate buyer. They generally do so under an exclusive buyer representation agreement, similar to how a traditional real estate broker represents the seller under an exclusive right to sell listing agreement.

Buyer representation is rapidly changing the face of real estate. Propelled by knowledgeable home purchasers, legislative action and consumer watchdog groups, homebuyer representation has gained momentum in the residential market in recent years and is now available nationwide.

A CBR limits the seller's liability, since the buyer's own agent becomes responsible to the buyer, rather than the seller's agent. CBRs are highly professional agents, representing qualified, motivated purchasers.

"We are proud of these Realtors for adding another dimension to their capabilities by becoming CBRs," said Art Foley, Century 21 Annex Realty Broker/Owner. "This industry knowledge makes them a valuable resource for our customers who are looking for seasoned, service-oriented real estate professionals."

For more information about Century 21 Annex Realty, call the Quincy office at 617-472-4330 or toll-free 800-345-4614.

North Quincy Blanks Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

Excuse the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team if it appeared a bit flat in the first half of last Saturday's game against rival Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The night before it had lost senior forward Missy Miller when she was hospitalized after being hit by a car. She was in the intensive care unit at Boston Medical Center while the Red Raiders knocked off the Presidents, 5-0.

"I'm not sure how focused we were on the game," said head coach Paul Bregoli, whose team honored Miller by wearing her No. 42 on their uniforms. "We settled down and played better in the second half."

North Quincy (7-4-1) hosted Martha's Vineyard Monday and Falmouth Wednesday, and tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 4 it hosts Bridgewater-Raynham.

Ten minutes into the first half, the Red Raiders got on the board when senior midfielder and quad-captain Lauren Kalil took a pass from senior forward and quad-captain Christina Conley and beat junior keeper Sarah Shea to her right.

North Quincy had a couple more chances in the first half, but Shea made a great save on junior forward Jenn Ryan's shot and freshman Lauren Milone's header just missed wide.

In the second half, Shea made another nice save on a shot by senior forward Katy Mercurio about six minutes in. Shea was putting forth a valiant effort, but the Red Raiders had too much firepower and depth and they

"Shea is a very athletic goalie," said Quincy second-year head coach Don Martin. "The balls that got in had nothing to do with her."

Halfway through, Conley fired a shot on goal and Shea made the initial save but the rebound came out to Ryan, who knocked it home for a 2-0 lead.

With 10 minutes left, Milone blasted a shot past

Shea and several minutes later she tallied her second of the game for a 4-0 advantage. Conley added the final goal with an assist from Mercurio. Junior keeper Kristina Manganaro, who had missed the last one and half games with an injury, recorded the shutout in her first game back.

"Quincy's very aggressive and they always play hard," Bregoli said. "It was a little scary with just a 1-0 lead with 20 minutes left. The kids played well the last 20 minutes. The midfielders did a much better job. Ashley Ridge came in and settled us down."

"The first half was good," Martin said. "In the second half we couldn't maintain shape in the back end. We got frazzled in the second half and I'm not sure why. North played very well and they were the better team."

Last Thursday, North Quincy blanked Taunton, 6-0, as senior quad-captain Rachel Enos notched her first career hat trick.

The Red Raiders struck five minutes into the game when senior defender Lauren McGee converted a corner kick from 6 yards out for her first career goal.

Four minutes later, Enos took a pass from Conley and hit the corner from 10 yards out. She made it 3-0 at half-time off a nice throw ball from Ridge.

Senior midfielder Katie Timmins tallied her first of the season off a feed from sophomore Eileen Price. Enos made it 5-0 when she ripped a direct kick from 20 yards out into the top left corner.

Sophomore midfielder Amanda Saylor closed out the scoring with an assist from Milone.

Seniors Nancy Yankin and Jess Smialek played well on defense along with sophomore Caitlyn Peters, Price and Ryan.

Milone, starting in goal, combined with sophomore Shauna Kelly for the shut-out. Kelly was brought up from the JV team because of Manganaro's injury.

Last Tuesday, North Quincy outplayed Marshfield in the second half but fell to the OCL front-runner, 2-0.

Manganaro was injured in the first half when she was kicked in the left eye diving for a loose ball. Milone replaced her and blanked the Rams in the second half. Senior Lisa Schifone, junior Katie Faherty, Kalil and Saylor played well.

Quincy, North JV In Scoreless Tie

Quincy High junior varsity keeper Stephanie Kozlowski made several outstanding saves in last Friday's scoreless tie with North Quincy.

It was the first tie of the season — and the first in many years against the Red Raiders.

"I have such a hard-working group of girls," said first-year coach Jenn Palmacci. "I only have 14 girls on the JV squad and many times we have to play with no subs because of injuries or illness. North Quincy High comes out with an army but we were able to outflank them during this game."

North Quincy threatened in the first half but missed a gold opportunity when a penalty kick sailed over the net. For Quincy, co-captain Katie Connolly and Courtney Hall played well up front.

Palmacci said she was pleased with the defense, which has been working on improving communication and first touch to the ball. Sophomore sweeper Marissa Powers, co-captain Sherry McKenzie, Donika Hajrizaj and Sarah Guidici played well.

Turning in strong games at midfield were Michelle McArthur, Marissa Monaco, Danielle Rand, Kerry Mormino, Brianna Nolan, Nicole Brosnan, Elisa McCarter and Chrissy Brewster.

"The North Quincy girls ran us ragged but we hung on," Palmacci said. "We have been letting too many goals come into our net so this 0-0 score was a real victory for Quincy High."

GETTING A REAL CHARGE

In cold weather, bear in mind that physics dictates that electrical storage batteries become less efficient as the temperature drops. Moreover, an engine may be more difficult to turn over in cold weather, and these two factors may combine to cause problems. While a battery in less-than-peak condition may be acceptable at moderate temperatures, it shows its vulnerability as the cold settles in. Have your vehicle's battery checked before the possibility of hearing that sickening clicking sound associated with a dead battery. Check the sticker on your battery to find out its age, and see if it falls within the outside safe limit of a battery's ability to hold a proper charge, typically four years.

Cold weather is not that far away. Make sure your car and its battery is in the best condition. Our ASE Certified team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO has earned a wonderful reputation from our many satisfied customers... your friends and relatives. Presidents Shut Out Red Raiders, Secure Playoff Spot

By CHRIS POISSON

What's the price for success if you're Kevin Orcutt? It's getting a cooler of ice water dumped on you on a chilly October night.

Drenched and shivering, the second-year head coach of the Quincy High School boys' soccer team could not have been more happier after last Saturday night's 3-0 win over rival North Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The victory, their fourth straight, qualified the Presidents for the state tournament for the first time at least 12 years.

"Now we're competing for the league title," Orcutt said.

On Monday Quincy (8-1

3, 4-0-3 ACL) tied league leader Nauset, 2-2, and remains one point behind the Warriors in the standings having played one less game. Senior forward Bruno Pereira tallied his 18th goal and 11th assist to raise his point total to 29.

Quincy hosted Boston Latin yesterday (Wednesday) and tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 4 it takes on Dennis-Yarmouth at Varsity Field. Two teams it has already beaten this year.

In last Saturday's showdown, Quincy and North Quincy both entered the game on a high note. The Red Raiders (3-7-1) were coming off a 2-0 win over Taunton while the Presidents were fresh off a 4-1 win over Whitman-Hanson.

Neither team could muster much of an offensive attack in the first half as the game remained scoreless at the break.

North Quincy had the best chance midway through. Sophomore midfielder Frank McKenna headed for the net but sophomore goalkeeper Ray Marchand came out to make the save near the top of the box. Marchand then made a nice save on senior forward Brian Weeks' follow-up shot.

In the second half, Marchand continued to shine between the pipes when he robbed senior forward and quad-captain Mike Torney on a breakaway about four minutes in.

Marchand was making just his second start in place of starter Matt MacNeil, who is out for the rest of the season with a hip injury.

"He was outstanding," Orcutt said. "He's following in the footsteps of a very good goalie. He didn't miss a beat back there. He's getting confidence and when his confidence is there, he'll be one of the top goalkeepers in the league."

After Marchand's save, Quincy came back down the other end and was awarded a penalty kick, which senior defender and quad-captain Craig Keenan shot wide right. Keenan, though, more than made up for it when he later made a sliding stop on McKenna in front to knock the ball away.

"Keenan's just an animal," Orcutt said.

North Quincy couldn't contain the potent Quincy offense much longer as it struck for all three goals in the final 20 minutes.

Pereira put the Presidents on the board with a goal just past the midway point and the sniper made it 2-0 when he beat goalkeeper Dan Coughlin, a senior quad-captain, with about six minutes left.

"It takes him a while to get cranking," Orcutt said. "He just seems to find a way to get it down. He's a good finisher."

Several minutes later, senior forward Washington Morisset streaked past a couple of defenders and slipped a shot past a charging Coughlin for the final goal.

"The North Quincy game is always a war," Orcutt said. "We've been a second-half team most of the year. We've been explosive like this. There have been three or four games where we've been down by a goal and we've come back in the second half."

Quincy Youth Soccer Scores And Highlights

Quincy Youth Soccer continues its season and here are results from recent action.

Under 14 Boys

Infinity Mortgage edged Karsten Company, 3-2. Brendan Carnell, Erik Johnson and Glen Misho scored. Joe Gallant had an assist. Jackie Kremidis, Brian Mahoney and Myles Berry played well.

For Karsten Company, Dave Regan and Martin Bowes scored. Chris Iredale had an assist. Andrew Gormley and Steve Matos played well.

Rafael's tied Earthquakes, 2-2. Matt Meyers and Marc McAuliffe scored. Conor Lohan and Sean Clifford had assists. Chris Eng, Matt Johnson and Zack O'Hara played well.

Under 14 Girls

The Magic knocked off the Renegades, 4-3. Kerianne Cabral, Eileen Deasy, Lauren Stille and Mary Burke scored. Sarah Caruso, Jackie Callahan and Allison Russell played well.

For the Renegades, Megan Therrien scored a pair of goals and Jennifer Pettit added the other. Jackie O'Connell and Rene DiPietro had assists. Leanna Lam, Donna Hapizar and Carolyn Casper played well.

Quincy Rolls Over Plymouth South, 28-7

By CHRIS POISSON

Attending his daughter's wedding rehearsal, Bob Noble showed up at Veterans Memorial Stadium last Friday night just in time to witness an amazing first quarter by his Quincy High School football team.

Playing like they had a curfew, the Presidents scored all four of their touchdowns in the first 11 minutes of play, rolling to an easy, 28-7 victory over Plymouth South of the Old Colony League.

"A little better than last week," Noble said, clearly an understatement, in reference to the 7-0 loss to Hanover. "It's a big win for us going into the Whitman-Hanson game. We got to play a lot of kids, which is always positive, especially on senior mothers' night."

"This is going to turn out to be a great weekend," he added. "My daughter is getting married tomorrow [Saturday]. My whole family is going to be home."

Quincy (2-1) travels to Whitman-Hanson (2-1) tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 for its first Atlantic Coast League match of the season.

If the Presidents can turn in the kind of rushing performance they had against Plymouth South (220 yards), they'll have a great chance to knock off the defending Division 3 Super Bowl champs.

Junior tailback J.J. Niamkey powered the ground game, rushing for 179 yards on 14 carries, including two long touchdown runs.

But it was the special teams that got things started for Quincy. On the opening kickoff, senior quad-captain Shawn Munchbach took the ball up the middle, cut to his right and raced along the sideline for an 85-yard touchdown.

"That got us off to a big start," Noble said.

Most certainly did. Quincy's defense forced Plymouth South to go three-and-out on its first series and junior Roger Palermo returned the punt 47 yards to the Quincy 26-yard line. After a 20-yard run by Niamkey, senior quad-captain Matt Ramponi found paydirt from 6 yards out.

Special teams came up big once again when it recovered a Plymouth South fumble on a punt return with 4:16 left. On the next play, Niamkey glided right for a 45-yard TD run.

"It was a great job by the special teams," Noble said. "All the credit goes to coach Dan Morrell. He does a great job working with the kids every day at practice."

Quincy did make one mistake in its spectacular quarter when it fumbled on a punt return. The defense, though, came through again as it forced Plymouth South to go three-and-out for the fourth straight series.

On the next play, senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell faked to Ramponi and handed off to Niamkey, who burst through the middle of the defense and jetted 78 yards into the end zone for a touchdown. Senior Thiago Goes added his fourth extra point for a 28-0 lead with 57 seconds left in the quarter.

"Those were two beautiful runs," said Noble of Niamkey's touchdowns. "It shows how explosive we can be. We jumped out to a big lead in the first quarter."

In the second half, Plymouth South engineered a long 15-play, 76-yard scoring drive capped by Kyle Perry's 1-yard plunge on fourth-and-goal. Michael Paronick added the extra point. However, the Panthers ended up using too much time as they chewed off 7:29.

"We allowed them to score in the second half but the good thing about it was that they took almost eight minutes off the clock," Noble said.

On Quincy's series, Noble called upon Ramponi's hard-nosed running to take off more time and he responded, gaining 28 tough yards on four carries. "That's what he provides for us," Noble said.

Palermo had a 35-yard TD run called back because of a penalty, but Quincy used a valuable 6:29 on the drive. Junior linebacker J.D. Hyacinthe picked off quarterback Adam Long's pass on Plymouth South's next possession.

Rob Mooney for the 2-point conversion.

Falmouth senior quarterback Bill Perry torched North Quincy, rushing for 150 yards and three touchdowns while also tossing a 70-yard TD pass.

North Quincy Girls Seeking To Hit Stride

The North Quincy High School girls' cross country team has recently lost three straight Old Colony League dual meets.

The Red Raiders fell at home last Wednesday to Plymouth South, 22-35. On Sept. 26, they lost at Barnstable, 15-40, and on Sept. 24 they suffered as 23-32 setback at home to Bridgewater-Raynham.

North Quincy traveled to Silver Lake Tuesday and it will participate in the Tufts 10K Road Race Monday, Oct. 14.

In the Plymouth South meet, North Quincy placed runners in the No. 5 through No. 13 spots on the 2.5-mile course. They are Evan Allen (19:36), Kayla Martin (19:41), Brenna O'Brien (19:53), Lauren Ready (20:13), Lily Luo (20:17),

X-COUNTRY

Beth Goodrich (20:22), Sheila Jafarzadeh (20:22), Lisa Rubino (20:47) and Adrienne Doucette (21:33). Danielle Larose (25:05) finished 16th.

In the 1.5-mile walk-jog, Kateyn Girard (12:19), Valerie Ayer (12:53), Lis Luo (14:09), April Suprey (14:14), Sheila Lynch (14:15), Jennifer Kane (14:16), Caitlin Saia (14:29) and Kristen Berry (16:10) finished.

In the Barnstable meet, North Quincy didn't have anyone place in the top five on the 2.9-mile course, but it took the six through 10 spots with Martin (23:35), Allen (23:35), O'Brien (23:43), Ready (24:29) and Goodrich (24:40).

Other finishers were Lily Luo (24:48), Doucette (25:05), Rubino (26:28) and Lynch (30:43).

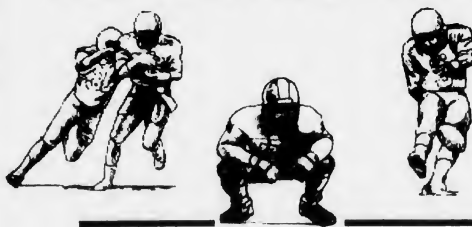

In the walk-jog 1.45 miles, Ayer (12:51), Lisa Luo (13:44), Saia (14:30) and Kristen (14:45) finished.

In the Bridgewater-Raynham meet, Martin finished fourth (19:19) and O'Brien fifth (18:50) for the Red Raiders on the 2.5-mile course.

Other finishers were Ready (18:53), Allen (19:01), Goodrich (19:26), Lily Luo (19:27), Sheila Jafarzadeh (19:37), Rubino (19:55), Doucette (20:22), Lynch (23:30) and Danielle Larose (24:17).

In the walk-jog group 1.5 miles, Kateyn Girard (12:01), Ayer (13:39), Lisa Luo (14:26) and Saia (15:03) finished.

North Quincy Falls To Falmouth

The North Quincy High School football dropped its third straight game last Friday night with a 48-8 loss at Falmouth.

The Red Raiders (1-3) will try to snap their losing streak tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when they host Barnstable at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

North Quincy scored its lone touchdown in the third quarter on senior tailback Chris Dolbear's 25-yard touchdown run. Senior quarterback Kevin Holleran connected with senior split end

FALL CAR CARE

Failed Batteries Don't Have To Be A Drain

Almost everyone who drives knows the frustration of a failed vehicle battery.

No matter when a battery fails to start a car, it never seems to be at a convenient time or place, and the complications of finding and installing a replacement battery can seem endless.

Knowing what to expect from a vehicle battery, and what can be done to prevent inconvenient battery problems, are the keys to avoiding this common and stressful event, says AAA Southern New England.

Despite warranties that claim an expected battery life of four, five or six years, most vehicle batteries will fail after 3.5 years, or even sooner," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's Car Doctor. "The constant chemical reaction inside a lead acid battery, vibration caused by driving and extreme changes in temperature all conspire to rob a battery of its ability to be recharged."

Last year, AAA roadside assistance responded to more than 5.3 million calls from members with cars that wouldn't start. Many of these calls involved batteries that could not be recharged. In many other cases, car owners assumed their vehicle battery would be a fine after a jump-start, only to experience a second battery failure then text time they tried to re-start their vehicle.

"To end this frustration motorists should change their thinking about batteries," said Paul. "New technology has made it possible to reliably determine the condition of a battery in a few minutes without removing the battery from the vehicle. This test should be requested by vehicle owners any time they have their vehicle inspected."

Signs of a weak battery are slow engine cranking, dim headlights and illumination of the battery/charging system warning light on the dashboard.

AAA offers these battery care tips:

Keeping the battery case clean by wiping it down with a moist paper towel and mild detergent will help reduce any current drain caused by dirt or grime. Corrosion around the terminal connections and battery hold down can be cleaned with a small stiff brush and a solution of baking soda and water.

Battery terminal connections should be tight. Adjust loose fittings or replace fittings that have cracked.

Instructions for jump-starting a failed battery can be found in a vehicle owner's manual, however, jump-starting can be dangerous and motorists uncertain about battery maintenance and safety should seek professional assistance.

When selecting a new battery, always choose one that is of the same physical size as the original battery. This will ensure proper fit and avoid excess vibration, which will shorten battery life.

Don't Forget Boots, Belts And Hoses

Tire care and maintenance are deserving of special attention by motorists because of the tire's role in vehicle stability, braking and traction, yet it is important not to overlook the other rubber components on a car or truck, says AAA Southern New England.

Although tires are easily inspected for air pressure and overall condition, studies show they still are not being checked often enough. But tires aren't the only component on your car or truck that needs to be checked.

"Drive belts, radiator/heater hoses and even the rubber boots that protect the steering components and today's cars need to be inspected. AAA's research shows that many motorists inspect the condition of their vehicle's belts and hoses only once a year," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's Car Doctor. "This is far too long considering rubber components can degrade and rapidly fail once they begin to crack, glaze or blister. AAA recommends having these compounds inspected during each oil change service."

Because newer vehicles often use "serpentine" belts that drive several vital engine and electrical functions, the loss of this one belt means a vehicle will need to be towed. Finding a replacement in a hurry can also be difficult depending on the make, model and age of the vehicle.

Ruptured hoses can be another trip buster, Paul noted. "Finding replacement hoses at a moment's notice can be problematic because most are custom-formed for different engine configurations. It is far more convenient to request a replacement from a repair shop while the existing component is still functioning," he said.

Car Maintenance Tips

(NAPS) - Keeping a car or truck running smoothly doesn't always have to be a job reserved for a professional.

To help make the process easier, WD-40 has developed a brochure of tips and tricks for everyday auto maintenance.

The product can be used to clean, lubricate and protect a number of items on a vehicle.

Tips include using the lubricant to:

- Polish and shine chrome bumpers, trim, license plates, headlights and wheels
- Clean and maintain vinyl parts and restore lost oils from dashboards - which need to be treated regularly due to high sun exposure
- Help remove paint streaks, road tar and street oil from fenders and chassis
- Lubricate door and trunk locks to prevent them from freezing during cold weather
- Remove unwanted adhesive leftover from bumper and price stickers
- Lubricate lug nuts for easy removal
- Lubricate mechanisms in automatic mirrors and windows
- Help remove tree sap and bugs from exterior
- Lubricate convertible top gear mechanisms.

A brochure illustrating these tips is free to consumers, and available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to WD-40 Stock Car Full of Uses, P.O. Box 881515, San Diego, CA 92168-1515.

The brochure, titled Stock Car Full of Uses, was designed with the help of NASCAR Winston Cup driver Ward Burton.

Mental Illness Awareness Week

Treatment Can Help Millions Of People With Mental Illness

By HARRY SHULMAN
President, CEO South
Shore Mental Health

Mental illness does not discriminate. It can affect persons of any age, race, religion or income. In fact, one in every five people suffer from a disorder of the brain.

The good news is that treatment works. With the right help, millions of people living with mental illness can and do reclaim full and productive lives.

Unfortunately, the stigma associated with mental illness keeps many from seeking the help they need. While the public's perception of mental illness is slowly changing, stigma continues to be the single most significant barrier to people accessing mental health services. Millions of people are living without the care they need to recover from a mental illness.

Consider these statistics from the National Alliance

HARRY SHULMAN
for the Mentally Ill

- One in 10 children and adolescents have mental illnesses severe enough to cause some level of impairment, yet fewer than one in five receive needed treatment.
- Less than half of persons with schizophrenia receive adequate care.
- Approximately 150,000 people with severe mental illness are homeless, living on the streets or in public shelters.

It doesn't have to be this way. We know how to help those who need it. We know how to give people back their lives and their self-respect. Now we must help ensure that people can and do access the mental health services available to them.

In recognition of Mental Illness Awareness Week (Oct. 6-12), South Shore Mental Health urges individuals and families struggling with a mental illness to seek help and support. If you or someone you know could benefit from talking with a licensed professional, call South Shore Mental Health at 617-847-1950.

During Breast Cancer Awareness Month American Cancer Society Urges Women To Get Annual Mammogram

National Mammography Day is Friday, Oct. 18, and the American Cancer Society urges women to make their health a priority, starting with a mammogram.

Many mammography facilities offer special programs, including extended hours, lower fees or payment schedules during Breast Cancer Awareness Month or on National Mammography Day. Additionally, women age 40 and older who are Medicare recipients are eligible for free annual mammography screenings.

Mammography screening remains the single most effective method to detect breast cancer early. Death rates from breast cancer showed their first significant decline between 1992 and 1996, dropping 1.8 percent each year, due to earlier detection and improved treatment. In 2000, 72.2 percent of women age 40 and older had their annual mammograms in Massachusetts.

The American Cancer Society is the nation's largest non-governmental supporter of breast cancer research, investing $185 million in breast cancer-specific research since 1972.

There are 24 local American Cancer Society breast cancer researchers, with grants totaling $7 million, at institutions such as Harvard Medical School, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston University, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and Brandeis University.

Health Literacy: Understanding Your Doctor's Directions

Recent studies from the American Medical Association (AMA) show that as many as 90 million Americans do not understand physicians' instructions regarding prescription drug usage or other therapeutic regimens.

The same study estimates that this lack of comprehension leads to unnecessary doctor visits, hospitalizations and longer hospital stays, costing more than $73 billion a year.

A Need To Know
According to the AMA, "health literacy" means that patients can: follow a doctor's instructions, manage an illness and understand how to take medication properly. While there are no specific boundaries defining those with low health literacy, national statistics indicate the poor, the elderly, minorities and non-English speaking ethnic groups are most deeply impacted.

"Patients need to clearly understand what a physician is telling them, especially when and how to take their medications, and what their medications are for specifically," said Barbara A.P. Rockett, M.D., former president of the Massachusetts Medical Society and an advocate for greater health literacy among patients.

As a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the AMA and the AMA Foundation, Dr. Rockett is deeply involved in a health campaign to promote effective communication between physicians and patients.

What Patients Should Do

Some steps patients can take to ensure compliance with their physicians' recommendations:

- Ask your doctor questions about your health care and your medications, and keep asking them until you fully understand the answers.
- Prepare your questions before visiting your doctor. Write them down and bring them with you to the office visit.
- Write down the answers that you receive and share them with a friend, family member or caregiver.
- When you receive your prescriptions, make sure they are what your doctor ordered. If you're unsure when or how to take the medication, ask your pharmacist for assistance.

Additionally, Dr. Rockett acknowledges that other measures can be taken to overcome low health literacy.

"If patients find they are having difficulty understanding their physicians' instructions, we advise that they bring a child, parent or friend with them to the appointment," Dr. Rockett said.

Dr. Rockett says patients should never be reluctant to pose questions that concern their health care.

"Every patient should feel free to say 'I don't understand what you're saying,' and every physician should encourage patients to ask more questions," Dr. Rockett said.

JUST BRUSHING THE SURFACE

Brushing your teeth, preferably twice daily, is the most important thing you can do to preserve your teeth. When purchasing a toothbrush, choose one with soft bristles that have rounded ends. Hard bristles can wear away enamel, as can a "death grip" on your toothbrush. With this in mind, use a light grip when brushing. If the bristles become splayed after a month of use, it is an indication that you are exerting too much pressure. It is also important to take your time, being sure to brush all surfaces. Each tooth has at least four surfaces (front, back, and both sides), while molars have a fifth, top surface. A thorough brushing requires at least two to three minutes.

Regular exams to check the health of your teeth and gums and regular cleanings to remove plaque and tartar are essential for a healthy mouth. Ask us today about ways to improve your smile. Our goal is to provide the very best dental care possible for our patients so that each may achieve optimal dental health throughout their lifetimes. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our entire staff operates as a team. Trust your teeth to our experience and expertise. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Flossing is important for getting at the tooth surfaces between teeth that brushing cannot reach.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A reader sent me the following poem by an unknown Author and we would like to share it with you.

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing
And you like him, or you love him, say it now!
Don't withhold your approbation
'Till the parson makes oration
And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow.
For no matter how you shout it

He won't really care about it
He won't know how many tear drops you have shed.
If you think some praise is due him
Now's the time to hand it to him
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead!

More than fame and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny
And the hearty warm approval of a friend;
Oh! it gives to life a savor
And strengthens those who waver
And gives one heart and courage to the end.
If one earns your praise - bestow it!

If you like him - let him know it!
Let the words of true encouragement be said:
Let's not wait 'till life is over,
And he lies beneath the clover
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

There is no substitute for praise from a well-meaning and good heart.

Robert F. Leonard, 64

Self-Employed Oil Burner Repairman

A funeral Mass for Robert F. Leonard, 64, of Quincy, a self-employed oil burner repairman, was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Joseph's Church.

He died Oct. 4 at Quincy Medical Center after a brief illness.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., Mr. Leonard came to Boston as a child and was raised in Roxbury. He lived in Quincy for many years. He was educated in Boston schools.

He is survived by two daughters, Marie C. Leonard and Patti-Ann Jaehning, both of Weymouth; two sons, Robert F. Leonard of Pembroke and Thomas J. Leonard of Seekonk; two brothers, Ernest Leonard and Paul Leonard, both of Quincy; six grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was private.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy Center.

Donations may be made to the American Lung Association, 25 Spring St., Walpole 02081.

Dorothy L. Duane, 71

A private funeral service was held for Dorothy Louise Duane, 71, of Sandwich, formerly of Quincy, who died Sunday at home.

Mrs. Duane was born in Milton and raised in Quincy. She was a member of the Corpus Christi Catholic Church in Sandwich.

She loved cooking and gardening and enjoyed traveling to Florida for the winter.

She is survived by her husband of 49 years, John

Joseph Duane Sr., of Sandwich; two sons, John J. Duane Jr. of Northhampton and Stephen J. Duane of Forestdale; two brothers, David Doyle and Richard Doyle, both of Quincy; a sister, Ruth Hurley of Weymouth; and three grandchildren.

Burial was in Sandwich Town Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by Nickerson-Bourne Funeral Homes, Sandwich.

Agnes C. Valencia, 93

Homemaker

A funeral Mass for Agnes C. (Sugrue) Valencia, 93, of Quincy, a homemaker, was celebrated Tuesday at St. Francis of Assisi Church in Braintree.

She died Oct. 3 at Quincy Medical Center.

Mrs. Valencia was a former member of the Sacred Heart Church charismatic prayer group.

Born in Boston and raised in Dorchester, she moved to Quincy 45 years ago.

Wife of the late Harry A. Valencia, she is survived by three daughters, Gail M.

Walsh, Lois A. Youngworth and Lorene O'Keefe, all of Braintree; two sons, Harold A. Valencia of Braintree and Kenneth J. Valencia of Weymouth; 14 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Donations may be made to the Sophia Cancer Fund, c/o Community National Bank, 96 S. Bolton St., Marlboro 01752.

Marion A. Austin, 85

Hostess

A private funeral was held for Marion A. (Brady) Austin, 85, of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy and Worcester, who died Oct. 4 at the Braintree Manor in Braintree.

Mrs. Austin was employed as a hostess for the Canteen Vending Service in Waltham.

Born in Worcester, she was also a former resident of South Boston.

Wife of the late Francis S. Austin, she is survived by a son, Francis L., and his wife, Rena Austin of Weymouth; and many other family members. She was the sister of the late Jean Army and Ann Rainha.

Burial was in Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Norfolk County Agricultural School Holds Open House

Norfolk County Agricultural High School students and staff members, along with their new principal, Gail Murphy of Quincy, recently held an open house on the school's grounds, 400 Main St., Walpole.

An old-fashioned country hayride across the campus was one of the activities for visitors. Among the many demonstrations were the Equestrian Drill Team Performance, dog grooming, dog obedience and agility demonstration, exotic birds and fish, flower designing, senior student design and constructed landscape gardens, arborist equipment display, and heavy equipment operation.

All departments: agricultural mechanics, plant and environmental science and animal and marine science along with the Library/Media Center and academic areas were open.

NCAHS is a fully accredited, four-year public high school. Residents of the 28 municipalities of Norfolk County -- including Quincy -- pay no tuition. Out-of-county residents are assessed a tuition fee which is usually paid by the student's home school district. Bus transportation is provided.

A blend of academics and agricultural/vocational training is offered at NCAHS, preparing students for a career or for further study. Many students continue their education at the collegiate or other post-secondary level after graduation.

The open house provided an opportunity for families of sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth grade students, as well as current high school students considering a change in schools, to find out first hand about an agricultural education.

City Awarded $297,000 Federal After-School Grant

Quincy Public Schools have been awarded a $297,000 competitive federal after-school grant.

Announcement was made Tuesday jointly by Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor William Phelan and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

The grant program is under Title IVB of the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001, the Massachusetts 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program.

The award for Quincy is renewable for five years. The focus of the program is to establish or expand community learning centers that operate during after-school hours and provide students with academic enrichment opportunities and other activities designed to complement the students' regular academic program.

The grant will enable students at Atlantic, Broad Meadows and Sterling Middle Schools to expand their extended day and summer initiatives and continue the commitment of providing middle school students with excellent academic enrichment programs. In addition, the Massachusetts 21st Century Community Learning Centers will offer families of these students literacy, GED and ESOL training.

Delahunt and Phelan credit Linda Stice of the Mayor's Constituent Services Department, Keith Segalla, Director of Adult and Continuing Education for the Quincy Public Schools, Emily Lebo, Director of Occupational Education at the Center for Technical Education, as well as the middle school principals for their "creative grant application" which encompassed a broad range of community involvement.

The Mayor's Constituent Services Office, now located at City Hall, the South Shore Quincy YMCA, the Gillette

Company Volunteers, Quincy Police Department, Bay State Community Services, Quincy-School Community Partnership and Quincy Adult & Continuing Education will be active grant participants, partnering with Quincy's 21st CCLC sites and providing an array of youth development activities.

"This is an exciting opportunity that will ensure that all middle schools in the city have opportunities for their students after school," said

Dr. DeCristofaro.

For more information on this grant check the Massachusetts Department of Education web site (<http://finance1.doc.mass.edu/grants>).

Snug Harbor Receives $70,000 State Literacy Grant

The Snug Harbor Community School has recently received a $70,000 Elementary School-Wide Literacy grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education.

The goal of the grant is to improve reading and writing proficiency of students in kindergarten to grade 3 through the implementation of school-wide literacy programs. Only 36 schools in the state received grants under this program. In total, $2,584,000 in grant funds was distributed.

Literacy has been a school-wide instructional focus at Snug Harbor School for the past three years. The grant will allow the school to continue providing quality instruction that emphasizes the five essential components of reading: phonemic awareness, phonics, fluency, vocabulary and text comprehension.

"Early detection of reading problems is a critical step in providing a happy and productive school experience for a young child," said Mayor William Phelan.

The Elementary School-Wide Literacy grant funds Snug Harbor received will be used to provide additional personnel in the school in order to give added literacy instruction to students who are having difficulty in this area. Funds will also be used to purchase additional materials for literacy instruction.

Snug Harbor will also form a literacy leadership team that will establish measurable reading and writing goals and benchmarks by grade level that will reflect the standards of the Massachusetts English Language Arts Curriculum Framework and scientifically-based reading research.

They're On The Same Note:

Reinstate Instrumental Program At Elementary Schools

By TOM HENSHAW
Dick Striano, the director of the Quincy High School band and music teacher at three middle schools, introduced Richard Kenneally, director of the North Quincy High School band and teacher at two middle schools.

"We," he said, "are the entire instrumental music program in the Quincy schools."

It was, all agreed, a far cry from the 1970s when each high school had a fulltime band director; there was an instrumental music staff of 10, a coordinator and an assistant — and the Quincy band went to the Cotton Bowl and the North Quincy band to Ireland.

Striano and Kenneally were together at one place and one time the other day to receive a check for $500 from Daniel Raymondi, the City Council president from Ward 2.

The money would be used to help reinstate an instrumental music program in the elementary schools during school hours and to pay for instruments and after school programs for Ward 2 youngsters.

It comes from private funds that have been given to the city as mitigation funds and passed out to city councilors as development funds for use in their wards.

"Music was a wonderful program in the Quincy schools," said Raymondi. "It gave young people a chance to excel. It helps to cultivate well-rounded students. I am hopeful that the School Committee will find a way to continue it."

There were no funds in the Quincy Public Schools' budget for the 2002-03 school year as the School Committee was forced to slash more than a million dollars out of the school appropriations.

"We were told in May that we would get $400 each as a budget," said Striano. "I used my $400 to hire drums for the little kids to use in a parade. That wiped me out. Dick (Kenneally) never got his $400."

Right now, there is no in-school program to teach instrumental music to students but the School Committee has set up an after-school program for the musically inclined funded by the parents themselves.

The problem the program is only at the two high schools and it costs parents $70 they can ill afford. In addition, the rental of instruments can cost the student's family another $250 to $500 for the year.

"Even if the after-school program works, we will have such a small number of youngsters at the elementary level that there won't be enough to support middle and high school bands," said Striano.

"If we don't fix it now, we won't have a high school band in a few years. Is that what Quincy wants?"

It's certainly not what Arlene McAuliffe wants. She has a son, Mark, and a daughter, Jenna, who play saxophones at Central Middle School and a second son, Timothy, who is at the Parker Elementary School and hasn't decided between the sax and trumpet. (Cont'd On Page 15)

Names 8-Member Advisory Committee Phelan Seeks New Open Space Plan

Mayor William Phelan has named an eight-member Open Space Advisory Committee to recommend an overall open space plan for Quincy, including park improvements and rezoning initiatives.

"We do not wish open space to be a rapidly disappearing commodity in Quincy," said the Mayor.

"I think that we have assembled a great group of individuals to review and improve the open space plan for our city."

"They have experience and diversity to make innovative recommendations to me and I am looking forward to receiving their proposal."

Members of the committee:

Thomas P. Koch, director of Parks & Forestry; Richard

Meade, director of Planning; Laurie Allen, the Mayor's executive secretary; Mary Ellen Cronin of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Steve Perdios, of the Quincy Environmental Network; William Keener of the Conservation Commission; Robert Evans, the Ward 4 representative on the Park & Recreation Board; and Ward 6 City Councilor Joseph Newton.

They will be asked to review the existing open space plan and clarify the three

Vote On New Auditor Set For Nov. 12

The city of Quincy will have new auditor on Tuesday, Nov. 12 — the City Council willing, that is.

That's the date of the meeting selected by Council President Daniel Raymondi for his fellow councilors to vote on a successor to the resigned Michael McFarland.

McFarland is scheduled to leave at the end of October after three years in the $84,000 post to become business manager of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

Applicants for the post will have to have their applications and/or letters of interest at Raymondi's office at City Hall no later than 4:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 21.

Raymondi said members of the City Council have already gotten queries about the job, which was advertised for the first time today in The Quincy Sun.

"Each of the city councilors has received three or four queries already," he said. "With the economy the way it is we expect a lot more."

Raymondi said McFarland has agreed to make himself available to

Quincy Taxpayers Association Forum On New QHS Oct. 24

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association will hold a public forum Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 11 Hayward St., North Quincy, on the issue of building a new Quincy High School.

The forum is entitled, "A new Quincy High School: What will it really cost, and is it worth it?"

According to QTA President Alan Cousin, no one has published a cost analysis of building a new Quincy High School at Faxon Field, as opposed to any of the alternatives.

While he agrees Central Middle School should be replaced, Cousin said he thinks Quincy High School does not have to be replaced.

"The city's plan calls for renovating the existing high school to serve as a new Central Middle School. Central does need to be replaced, but that doesn't necessarily mean we must have a new high school. One alternative would be to build a new Central," Cousin said.

Cousin has invited all elected city officials, as well as the superintendent of schools and the commissioner of public works, to participate in the forum. He said he has received confirmation that DPW Commissioner Jay Fink will attend the forum.

In Campaign Stop Here

Healey Pledges To Protect Jobs, Avoid Tax Increases

Kerry Healey, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, in a campaign stop in Quincy last week pledged to protect South Shore jobs and avoid tax increases.

Speaking at Presidents Place, Friday, Healey attacked Treasurer Shannon O'Brien, Democrat candidate for governor, saying she would raise taxes to deal with the state's fiscal situation.

Healey said O'Brien's 12-year legislative record shows she voted to hike taxes by $2.6 billion.

She said if she and Mitt Romney, Republican candidate for governor, are elected, they would avoid tax increases.

Healey said O'Brien "helped make the mess on Beacon Hill." Claming, "If she's elected governor, she will raise your taxes to pay for it."

Healey also criticized O'Brien for calling large companies "dinosaurs," saying she and Romney will work to bring new companies and jobs to Massachusetts, O'Brien, she said, recently denounced such efforts and complained that large fortune 500 companies are "dinosaurs." O'Brien's job creation plant center on creating a Secretary of Economic Development Office, Healey said.

REPUBLICAN LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR nominee Kerry Healey pledges to support jobs on the South Shore and avoid tax increases while campaigning outside Presidents Place in Quincy Center last Friday.

"This is simply another reminder why Massachusetts cannot afford Shannon O'Brien. Her views on economic development are one-dimensional. And her tax and spend policies are a threat to our economy, our jobs and our pocketbooks," Healey added.

Healey joined Romney in challenging O'Brien to name a single Fortune 500 company that she does not want to relocate to Massachusetts. She noted there are 13 Fortune 500 companies in the commonwealth that together employ more than 100,000 people here and produce annual revenue of more than $100 billion.

"Mitt Romney and I believe all companies — small, medium and large — are important to the success of the Massachusetts economy," said Healey. "And we will fight to make sure they thrive in our state and create jobs our people need."

At QCNA Meeting Roomers, Transients Blamed For Crime In Quincy Center

By DOLORES LORUSSO

The proliferation of rooming houses in downtown Quincy, loitering at the Quincy Center T Station and homeless people with nothing to do have been cited as root causes of increasing crime in Quincy Square.

Michael McKenna of Newcomb Street told a meeting of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association last week that he had researched rooming houses in the city and found that 39 are licensed, 20 in downtown Quincy, with 454 residents.

"The concept of rooming houses is fine as long as they are well-managed and well-maintained," he said, "but it has been evident to residents that these rooming houses cause a multitude of issues in the area, including prostitution and drug dealing."

"If there is criminal activity on the premises the license should be revoked."

McKenna said he wants a moratorium placed on new rooming houses and monitoring of those now in existence.

The QCNA, meeting in the Thomas Crane Public Library, with Ward 5 City

Councilor Doug Gutro in attendance, agreed to take the matter to City Councilor Joseph Finn's Housing Committee and seek a hearing on the rooming house issue.

"We want to make the city a healthy environment for families, free from fear," said Nancy Jolly, president of the QCNA. "It is not right that we do not feel safe in our own neighborhood."

Tom Berry, a Quincy resident for 37 years, told the meeting of finding the slain body of Dan DeCosta, a city custodian and a Francis Avenue neighbor, on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library two months ago. The murder is still unsolved.

"It reminds us why we are here," Berry said. "I am looking for confirmation that government officials and law enforcement know we exist and care about us. We want to feel safe in our own community."

Gutro assured Berry and some 20 other residents who attended the meeting their concerns would be addressed.

"I feel a strong responsibility to work with the neighborhood," he said. "We must research the specifics of the problem and see if they are symptomatic of a larger problem. Then we can chip away, issue by issue, location by location, with the broad picture in mind."

One problem location that kept coming up was Spear Street.

Ralph Radzevich, the Community Policing Officer, cited 31 calls to three houses alone on Spear Street since the first of the year.

"These calls include medical, lost property, disorderly conduct, unwanted disturbances, fire alarms, drunkenness and decay," he said.

Coughlin Presents $6,500 For Improvements To Bishop Field

Ward Three Councilor Kevin Coughlin presented Park Director Tom Koch with a $6,500 check for improvements to the Bishop Field in the Montclair area.

The money came from the Ward Three Mitigation fund which aids in community improvements throughout the ward.

Coughlin, who is Chairman of the City Council Park and Recreation Committee, has been working with Koch to upgrade the surface of the tot-lot as well as to add fencing around this play area. The sand will be replaced with wood fiber surfacing similar to most of the tot-lots throughout the city.

These improvements will enhance safety for the children and families that utilize this facility.

In addition to the tot-lot upgrades, the Park Department is making improvements to the turf areas of the ball diamonds. These areas will be regraded, leveled with additional loam provided and reseeded. The fields will be ready for spring use by the baseball and softball leagues, Coughlin also provided funding for tree planting at the Wollaston School tot-lot and on Wollaston Hill.

They used to make fun of people who didn't have money in the stock market. Not anymore!

Not long ago, some people thought having a Certificate or Passbook Savings Account was hopelessly old-fashioned. Today those former "stock market wizards" — the ones who couldn't talk about anything else! — have developed a new appreciation for the safety insured bank accounts provide. There's nothing like the peace of mind that comes with having money in the bank. And that's a fact that will still be true even when the market starts going up. Come see us today for an FDIC-insured investment that will give you your money back plus interest.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Oct. 14, 1066, King Harold II of England is defeated by the Norman forces of William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings. At the end of the bloody, all-day battle, Harold was killed — shot in the eye with an arrow, according to legend — and his forces were destroyed. He was the last Anglo-Saxon king of England.

• On Oct. 18, 1922, "Robin Hood," starring Douglas Fairbanks, opens. Searchlights crossed the sky for the first time at a Hollywood premiere. As a publicity stunt two weeks before the premiere, Fairbanks had posed atop a New York hotel in costume, with bow and arrow. He and several others shot arrows from the building and accidentally injured a man through an open window.

• On Oct. 16, 1946, at Nuremberg, Germany, 10 high-ranking Nazi officials are executed by hanging for their crimes against humanity, crimes against peace, and war crimes during World War II.

• On Oct. 20, 1973, after 15 years of construction, the Sydney Opera House is dedicated by Queen Elizabeth II.

The $80 million structure, designed by Danish architect Jørn Utzon and opened by the profits of the Opera House Lotteries, was built on Nennelong Point in Sydney, Australia.

• On Oct. 19, 1982, maverick automobile executive John DeLorean is arrested in a Los Angeles airport motel with a briefcase containing $24 million worth of cocaine. According to authorities, DeLorean was attempting to make a mammoth drug deal in order to rescue his financially ailing company, the DeLorean Motor Company.

• On Oct. 15, 1989, during a game against his old team, the Edmonton Oilers, Canadian ice hockey great Wayne Gretzky breaks Gordie Howe's National Hockey League career scoring record of 1,850 points.

• On Oct. 17, 1989, the deadliest earthquake to hit the San Francisco area since 1906 strikes. Measuring 7.1 on the Richter scale, it killed a total of 63 people, while more than 3,000 others were injured and more than 100,000 buildings were damaged.

Sheets, Phelan Olive Branch?

Was that an olive branch being passed between Jim Sheets and Bill Phelan the other night at the mayoral "Toast and Roast" fundraiser for the Quincy Historical Society?

It kind of looked like one.

Phelan, who defeated Sheets by 17 votes last year, has been critical of the final months of Sheets' 12-year administration as mayor.

Sheets, who has shed some weight and grown a goatee-like beard since leaving City Hall, has not responded much publicly but privately he reportedly has been more than a little annoyed.

Last Friday night, the pair were among the city's six living mayors participating in a $100-per-ticket fundraiser at the Historical Society's Adams Academy headquarters.

They sat side by side.

The last time they were seen that close together in public was last December when they teamed to man a Salvation Army kettle in Quincy Center to help the needy at Christmas time.

At Friday's fundraiser, they joined four other mayors -- Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin and Frank McCauley -- in recalling humorous moments in their administrations and poking a little fun at one another or themselves. With a big helping hand from Congressman Bill Delahunt, the evening's toastmaster and roastmaster.

But there were serious moments, too. And a couple came near the end of the program.

The mayors spoke in the order in which they occupied the office. Sheets, the fifth, in concluding his remarks, turned to Phelan and said: "Bill, you're going to do all right. You will learn like the rest of us."

As Sheets sat down, Phelan reached over to him and they shook hands.

Phelan revealed that Sheets, before the program started, had asked him to give him a call and they would go out to lunch.

"I accepted," Phelan said, adding it would be "an opportunity to learn from the wisdom of someone who held the office of mayor for 12 years and did very well for the city."

The olive-like comments by Sheets and Phelan may have been the highlight of the night.

Something Quincy residents want to see: the present and immediate former mayor friendly and maybe working together for the good of the city. Especially in these not so good economic times.

Feuding between mayors and former mayors is nothing new in Quincy politics.

HANNON

TOBIN

Hannon, LaRaia and Tobin sat together Friday night, now friends after bitter campaigns in the 1970s when LaRaia ousted Hannon and in turn was ousted by Tobin.

And there was McCauley, who had political differences with Tobin and LaRaia with an observation that recalled some of the hard feelings of the past:

"There was a time," he said, "if you put LaRaia, Tobin, Hannon and McCauley together in the same room, you'd have to call the state police."

But that was the past. And today is today.

And that handshake between Phelan and Sheets might be a good sign for the future.

TWO LONG-TIME favorites of the downtown business community --

Cindy and Charlie Ryder -- will be retiring at the end of the month.

But not before some well deserved recognition.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association are hosting a fond farewell party Wednesday, Oct. 23, 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Alba Bar & Grill, 1495 Hancock St.

Charlie and Cindy, owners of Ryder's Home Decor & More Shop, a downtown retail landmark, decided that after 26 years in business, it was time to take things easy.

They've been putting in 80 hours between them each week for years. Time to rest.

"But," says Charlie, "the saddest thing is that I was not able to find anyone to buy the business."

Both he and Cindy hate closing the door for good.

Charlie founded the business in 1976 after his former employer, W.T. Grant located in the Parkway area, closed.

Charlie is a former early president of the QCBPA and both he and Cindy have been active in the association and community down through the years.

They live in Hull but a good chunk of their heart will remain in Quincy.

Stop by and wish them well.

Downtown won't be quite the same without them.

A HOMETOWN fundraiser for Quincy's Tim Cahill,

Democratic nominee for state treasurer, is set for Saturday, Oct. 26, 7 to 9 p.m. at the Granite Rail, 16 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center. Tickets are $25 and may be obtained by calling 617-786-1846. They will also be available at the door.

Mayors' 'Toast And Roast' Story, Photos On Page 12

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A RARE antique postcard view of the July 27, 1907 christening of the first USS Salem (CL-3) at the Fore River Shipyard. Smashing a bottle of American wine on the hull is Miss Lorna Pinnock, the 13-year-old daughter of the Mayor of the City of Salem, Mass. The 423-foot Scout Cruiser Salem was the first US Navy ship to use the new Curtis direct-drive turbine engines developed at the yard. She reached an unprecedented speed of 26 knots during her trials. During WWI the Salem served in anti-submarine patrols off the coast of Florida and in the Caribbean. Decommissioned in 1921 she was scrapped in 1930. A trainload of Salem city officials and other dignitaries, many of who were Elks, came to witness the launching on a special train from Salem that went right into the shipyard. After the usual launching ceremonies and luncheon, the train left the yard and was met at the Quincy Center depot by members of the Quincy Lodge of Elks. They had arranged for special electric trolley cars to take over 200 of their brother Elks and others on a tour historic places in Quincy and to view the operations at the Rogers granite quarry. Later, after a greeting at city hall from Quincy Mayor James Thompson, they continued on to the Elks Lodge, then located on Foster Street. There, under a large tent, they were treated to a hearty buffet and lively entertainment before boarding the 6:13 train back to Salem.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

GUIDES FOR HAUNTING: pre-Halloween tour of the Hancock Cemetery, appropriately dressed in colonial finery, are Karen Yourell, John Stanwich, Eric DeCelle and Nancy Huntington in the role of "mine hostess" Morticia Addams.

Community Harvest Festival At Wollaston School Oct. 19

The Wollaston Elementary School will sponsor a Community Harvest Festival Saturday, Oct. 19, from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at 205 Beale St., Wollaston. Rain date is Saturday, Oct. 26.

Activities will include kid's crafts and games, moon walks, a bake table, a craft table, pony ride, raffles and more.

Pre-Halloween Tour Of Hancock Cemetery Oct. 25

The Adams National Historical Park will host a pre-Halloween candlelight tour of the Hancock Cemetery, one of New England's oldest burying grounds, Friday, Oct. 25, between 6:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Three centuries of historic figures — Adamses, Hancocks and Quineys — will return briefly to life to share stories and little-known facts of Quincy's past to those who will dare to enter the graveyard after sundown.

Morticia Addams (no relation to John and John Quincy) will be the ghoulish hostess for the evening.

After the haunting of the old cemetery, all souls who are still with us will repair to the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St. for refreshments of spirits and angel's or devil's food cake.

The program is free of charge. For more information on the tour or any other National Park Service program, call 617-770-1175.

Poems 'Go Bump In The Night' At Thomas Crane Library Oct. 26

"October means it's Halloween/When pumpkins don their faces/And moans and groans and rattling bones/Are heard in haunted places."

That poem by Harriet Cooper is one of those "Poems that Go Bump in the Night," a specialty of the storyteller/mime/poet David Zucker.

Zucker will present his program of Halloween poems Saturday, Oct. 26, at 2:30 p.m. in the large meeting room of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center.

Parents take warning — The program, like all tales of things that go bump in the night, is definitely not recommended for pre-school youngsters under the age of six.

The poet sets out on All Hallow's Eve only to get lost in the woods where he meets assorted ghouls, ghosts, goblins and witches through the poems of Edgar Allen Poe, James Whitcomb Riley, Hillaire Belloc and many others.

Domestic Violence Film At First Parish Church

DOVE, Inc., and United First Parish Church will present the Oscar-winning documentary "Defending Our Lives," Saturday, Oct. 19, at 7 p.m. at the church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The picture deals with the magnitude and severity of domestic violence in America, the greatest cause of injury to women that all the muggings, rapes and car accidents combined.

Sarah Buel, an assistant district attorney, will outline the problem and human rights activist Stacy Kabat of Quincy will discuss the film and the overall issue.

The suggested donation is $10 a person, $15 for a family. Refreshment will be sold. For further information, call 617-773-5306.

Squantum Seaside Gardeners To Hold Fall Fair Saturday

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum will hold their fall fair Saturday, Oct. 26 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Squantum Community Center, 136 Standish Rd.

The fair will feature crafts, a white elephant table, home baked goods and a drawing.

MEMBERS OF THE BOARD attending included Kay Borek, Jacque McCarthy, Anne Clarfells, Janet Lynch, Maria Blanchard and Pat Artis.

Wollaston Garden Club Celebrates 75th Anniversary

The Wollaston Garden Club, an institution in Quincy since Calvin Coolidge was president celebrated its 75th anniversary last week with a gala "President's Tea" at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Invited guests included Teddi Hickey, president of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, and Helen Weiser, district director for the South Shore as well as 20 presidents from local garden clubs.

Wollaston C-President Jo Costello honored nine of her predecessors, spanning 30 years of Wollaston Garden Club history and shared some memories and reflections of the club.

Bill Graham, a noted floral designer, made an informative and entertaining demonstration of "Floral Design Through the Decades" with special applause for the introduction of "oasis" in the 1950s.

Many garden club members came wearing their finest or funniest hats, some decorated with flowers picked that morning. Many local florists donated raffle items and "garden club gambling" concluded the celebration.

The Wollaston Garden Club was founded in 1927 by Mrs. Herbert Albee and Mrs. Horace Richmond. It has 87 members today, spanning the generations from the oldest at 93 to the youngest in her 20s.

The goal of the club always has been to "enrich the members knowledge of the beauties of nature, enhance their home grounds, and develop skills in plant propagation and the art of flower arranging."

Ruth Griffin, chairperson of the celebration, and her committee spent a whole year planning the special event, creating a tribute to the past but also allowing time for members to reflect on the present and the future of the club.

Retired Teachers Hold Fall Luncheon Meeting

Torre Dei Passeri Society To Celebrate 80th Anniversary

The Torre Dei Passeri Mutual Benefit Society will celebrate its 80th anniversary Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St.

The Organization was founded in 1922 in the Italian immigrant neighborhood of the Edwards St. area in Quincy Point by several men to aid one another's family in times of sickness and death.

It started when a married man with children working as a laborer injured his foot while digging with a pick.

Unable to afford medical attention, he suffered from gangrene poisoning and died. His widow could not afford burial expenses and the family was destitute financially.

A neighbor, Raffaele Papile, his brother, Giuseppe Papile joined with two close friends, Antonio Manano and Carmen Mariano to recruit others and raised money for the burial costs and to provide living expenses to the widow and young children.

It was decided to continue this help for others in need.

In the early years, the group would meet in the basement of Raffaele Papile's Edwards St. home and eventually obtained a charter from the state as a mutual benefit society.

The society was named Torre Dei Passeri after the town in the Province of Abruzzo, Italy where most of the members and immigrated from.

Today, 80 years later, it continues to help families of members unable to work because of sickness and with burial expenses.

James P. Papile, son of Raffaele Papile, is now vice president of the society and committee chairman for the celebration. Gino Stracco, Jr. president, is honorary chairman. Other committee members are Luigi J. Mariano, recording secretary; Enrico Salvaggi, treasurer and Steven Papile, financial secretary.

Daniel Raymond, president of the City Council and Ward 2 Councillor, will be the honored guest.

Other officers of the society are:

Arthur Della Barba, Carmillo Della Barba and Emilio DiNardo, trustees; Richard Vena, Jr., orator; Robert A. Pettinelli and Robert Mariani, masters of ceremony; Richard Vena Sr., guard and Anthony DiNardo, Chaplain.

The Program is dedicated to the society's past presidents:

Raffaele Papile, Jon Papile, Luigi Masciarelli, Salvatore Della Barba, Alfonso Papile, Florenzo Fertile, Victor D'Olympio, Enrico Salvaggi, James P. Papile, Richard Vena, Robert Mariani and Gino Stracco, Jr.

Jo-Ann Bragg Wins MASC Award For Achievement

The Massachusetts Association of School Committees has selected Jo-Ann Bragg of the Quincy School Committee to receive its Lifetime Achievement Award for 2002.

The award will be presented to Bragg, an eight-year member of the School Committee, at a special luncheon Thursday, Oct. 31, during the MASC/MASS Joint Conference at the Worcester Centrum Centre.

The honor recognizes Bragg's "contributions to the children of the Quincy school district, both through your years of service on the School Committee and through the many activities in which you participate as an advocate."

Bragg, who was nominated for the award by Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the Quincy School Committee, said many others deserve to share the award with her.

"I consider the award a city of Quincy, Quincy Public Schools and Quincy School Committee award because no member can accomplish anything by themselves," she said.

JO-ANN BRAGG

"I am lucky to be working with caring, dedicated colleagues whose goal is to improve education in our great city."

In her nominating letter, Cedrone characterized her colleague as "dedicated to her role as School Committee member."

"She has the same level of enthusiasm as the day she ran for office," said Cedrone. "She does thorough research on all issues and makes sure all information and ideas are addressed. She also makes sure that there is plenty of community involvement in all aspects of decision making.

"She is a true leader and excellent mentor."

Bragg is immediate past vice chairman of the School Committee and currently serves as chairman of the budget and finance subcommittee during this extremely difficult time for the schools.

She was also a member of the Mayor's School Buildings Task Force during the creation of a 10-year plan to renovate and build new school buildings.

Prior to her election to the School Committee, Bragg was president of the City Wide Parent Organization where she led a successful fight to keep open the Wollaston Elementary School.

She is married, a mother of three, grandmother of one, earned an associates degree from Quincy College in 1983 and runs her own accounting business, "Up and Running."

Along the way, she founded "Teen Get-A-Way," a program to keep young teenagers off the streets and involved in after school activities.

DeCristofaro To Speak At Parents' Council Meeting

The Quincy Citywide Parents' Council will meet Monday, Oct. 21, at 7:15 p.m. in the Broad Meadows Middle School. School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro will be the speaker.

The meeting is open and all parent representatives are encouraged to attend.

Wollaston Garden Club Plant Sale Saturday

The Wollaston Garden Club will hold a plant sale Saturday during the Fall Festival Saturday at the Wollaston School, Beale St. Hundreds of more than 30 varieties of perennial plants, many of them grown by club members, will be available for purchase from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cynthia Antonopoulos, club vice president and "master gardener" will be present to advise on plant selection and care.

There will also be a "white table" with special items for gardeners including containers, wreaths and garden books.

Information about joining the Wollaston Garden Club will also be available.

Free Seminar On College Funding Oct. 23

A free seminar on "How to Get Thousands of Additional Dollars to Pay for College" will be held Wednesday, Oct. 23 from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at The Four's, 15 Cottage Ave, Quincy Center.

The seminar will cover a number of topics, including how to double or triple eligibility for financial aid, how to locate and apply for every need-based scholarship grant, and low-interest loans that a student may be eligible for, and how to pick the colleges that will give you the best financial aid packages.

The speaker will be David

Gerstenblatt, college funding specialist. The seminar is free, but reservations are required. For reservations or more information, call 617-969-8530.

Snug Harbor School Marks 50th Anniversary Oct. 23

The Snug Harbor Community School will hold a ceremony Wednesday, Oct. 23 at 9 a.m. to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the school's opening.

The ceremony will be held in front of the school or if the weather is inclement in the gymnasium. The public is invited to attend, former students and faculty members.

President Principal Allan Osborne notes a demand for school in Germantown was created when the Quincy Housing Authority acquired 63 acres of land from the Sailors' Snug Harbor on Palmer St. A portion of this parcel of land, where the school gym is now located, had once been the site of the Crame School which was in operation from 1838 to 1874. It was decided to name the new school Snug Harbor, after the nationally renowned mariners' home.

Construction began May 28, 1951 with the laying of the cornerstone by Mayor David S. McIntosh. Imbedded under the stone was a box containing issues of the Quincy Patriot Ledger, letters from school children, and other school documents. It was presumed that the box would be opened sometime during the 21st century when the school had outlived its usefulness. The original structure contained 18 classrooms, administrative offices, and a combination gymnasium and auditorium. The main classroom wing was two stories high.

After a delay of five days the new school opened in September, 1952. Work was still going on in several classrooms, necessitating double sessions for a short time. The enrollment on opening day was 475 pupils. The school was formally dedicated Jan. 15, 1953 with Mayor David McIntosh, City Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa, School committee Vice-Chairman Wendall Clark, School Supt. Paul Gossard, and Principal V. James DiNardo officiating.

During that first year it became apparent that the school was not large enough to accommodate the number of families living in the area and in August 1953 a four-room addition was started – currently rooms 19, 20, 21 and the Germantown Neighborhood Center. During the 1953-1954 school year the student population rose to 542 and a year later soared to 711. Thus, to handle this influx of students, in 1954 another addition of eight rooms – currently rooms 23-30 – which opened in 1956, was started. By that time the student enrollment was over 800. Enrollment eventually peaked at 890 in 1962. In the 1970s, consistent with national trends, the population began to decline. The school currently houses 450 students from pre-school through grade five.

In the latter part of the 1980s, the school was designated as a community school, allowing it to open its doors to community programs. One of the unique features of the Snug Harbor Community School is that it houses a community center – the Germantown Neighborhood Center. The school and the Neighborhood Center collaborate on many programs to provide students and Germantown residents with academic, enrichment, and recreational programs during non-school hours.

The Snug Harbor Community School was designated as a Schoolwide Project under the federal Title I program in 1989. In 1994 the United States Department of Education presented the school with the prestigious Blue Ribbon School of Excellence award at the ceremonies in the White House. The Blue Ribbon program honors the nation's best schools for demonstrating excellence in leadership, teaching, curriculum, student achievement and parental involvement.

A Rare Get-Together

Six Mayors Have A Fun Night At Quincy Historical Society

By DOLORIS LORUSSO

Quincy's six living mayors took center stage at a fund-raiser for the Quincy Historical Society Friday night, mixing humorous and serious anecdotes reminiscing about their time in office.

Those attending the $100 per ticket event at the Adams Academy enjoyed the show.

Congressman William Delahunt, a former city councillor, said it was about the Quincy Historical Society's "special effort to keep Quincy's history alive."

Joyce Baker, president of the Quincy Historical Society now in its 110th year, expressed hope the event would raise $10,000 which is needed to help make up for cutbacks in aid to non-profit organizations.

Baker credited Delahunt with the idea of the Mayoral "Toast and Roast" and thanked him.

Before the fun started, Delahunt noted in a serious vein:

"We all share in a love of this city and the special place it has in history. Every mayor has made a substantial contribution to the quality of life in Quincy. It is a historical tradition."

Delahunt also paid tribute to Paul Harold, Norfolk County Register of Deeds and former city councillor and president, who died Aug. 12 after a long battle with cancer.

"He made so many contributions to the community, but probably his greatest contribution was to remind people everywhere of the history of Quincy," he said.

Delahunt then set the tone for the evening's program, warning the six mayors to MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN and former Mayor James Sheets, who have had their differences, shake hands at the Quincy Historical Society fund-raiser.

JOYCE BAKER, president of the Quincy Historical Society, with Congressman William Delahunt, who served as emcee. Baker credited Delahunt with the idea for the event and expressed hope it would raise $10,000 to help the society.

keep their remarks brief, referring to the "five-minute rule" applied to Congressional floor debates.

"If you can't say what you have to say in five minutes, the microphone goes off. They ought to try that at city council meetings," he said.

The six mayors spoke in the order in which they served.

Introducing Walter Hannon (1972-1975),

Delahunt joked there was "a great fear of terrorism in the early '70s and Hannon proposed that all Quincy residents and police carry machine guns."

Hannon retorted that Delahunt's pokes were part of a long-standing political grudge dating back to 1969 and their rivalry for the Ward 5 city council seat.

"I'm the only one who ever beat Bill Delahunt,"

QUINCY'S SIX LIVING mayors got together last Friday for a "Toast And Roast" fund-raiser to benefit the Quincy Historical Society. From the left are former Mayor Francis McCauley, present Mayor William Phelan and former Mayors James Sheets, Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and Walter Hannon.

JOSEPH LARAIA, Arthur Tobin and Walter Hannon, who were involved in hard-hitting mayoral campaigns, sat, chatted and smiled together at the fund-raiser.

Hannon said, "I crushed him." (Hannon actually won by 60 votes — but it was Delahunt's only political defeat.)

Hannon recalled John Adams rode a horse all the way from Quincy to Philadelphia to serve his country and zinged Delahunt with: "Do you think this guy would ride a horse to Philadelphia?"

Joseph LaRaia (1976-1977), whose two years as mayor were turbulent, said he was told the program was going to be humorous.

"My experience in office wasn't humorous at all," he mused.

LaRaia told of the time he got food poisoning at a conference in Washington, D.C. He got so sick, he stumbled on the way to the elevator. Onlookers, he said, must have thought "boy, did that guy hang on."

"I survived it all and I was very glad to work hard for the people of this city and I appreciated all of their support," he said.

Arthur Tobin (1978-1981) recalled receiving 51 letters from the late James McIntyre, a former mayor and close friend, recommending 51 different people for the same job.

"George Riley, my executive secretary, wanted to have a little fun," Tobin said. "I agreed and George drafted a letter to McIntyre asking him who he really wanted to have the job. He put a fake cc: on the letter to all 51 people McIntyre recommended."

Francis McCauley (1982-1989), now a city councillor, recounted how he often pretended he wasn't mayor if he wanted to avoid certain people. When they would ask "aren't you the mayor?", he would tell them he wasn't. He even once said he was his son.

On one occasion he got stung in a local supermarket. A man asked if he was the mayor and McCauley denied it.

The man's wife came up from behind, McCauley recalled, and said: "Of course that's not the mayor. The mayor is much better looking."

As a "former bank president and Republican," McCauley declared that he was the least funny of all the former mayors, but he still had a lot of fun while in office. Many people often said he would "rather read a balance sheet than a good book," he said.

James Sheets (1990-2001) recalled that during his 16 years as Ward 4 councillor he "served with the masters."

"I had a lot of great experience while in office. I was on the city council under Hannon, Tobin, LaRaia and McCauley. The learning experience with these men made my 12-year tenure as mayor easier."

Sheets got a laugh when he recalled attending a mayor's conference in Salt Lake City. In the morning there was a commotion going on down in front of the hotel, he said.

It turned out, he said, to be "five Quincy firefighters picketing McCauley — out there in Salt Lake City."

During his political career, Sheets said, "People gave to me far more than I ever gave to them."

Sheets had some supportive words for current mayor, William Phelan: "You're going to do all right. You will learn like the rest of us."

Phelan had an accolade of his own for Sheets.

"Jim kindly extended a lunch offer," he said. "And I accepted. An opportunity to learn from the wisdom of someone who held the office of mayor for 12 years and did very well for this city."

Phelan reflected on and referred to a debate over his inaugural speech.

"I wanted to include a line 'when I stumble and I will, I ask for your forbearance.' Many on my campaign staff did not agree. They said 'the mayor won't stumble.' At the last minute I decided to keep it in."

Phelan, who had just put in a somewhat tough week, added: "After this week, I am sure glad I did. I guess it's going to be a lot more fun looking back at it than it is right now."

In addition to a night of jokes and stories of Quincy's recent past, the event featured the latest exhibit at the historical society: a narrative display of the birthplaces of John and John Quincy Adams.

Among the artifacts are glazed red ware vessels which Abigail Adams used in dairying as well as artifacts from the shoemaking industry, one of the most important trades in Quincy at the time.

Caregivers Self-Help Support Group

John Keohane President Of Quincy Kiwanis Club

John Keohane, a funeral director for the Keohane Funeral Home, was recently installed as the 79th president of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy during a ceremony at the Neighborhood Club.

Keohane, an active Kiwanian since joining the club in 1994, has served as secretary and president-elect as well as on many club committees.

Other officers installed were:

Michelle Stenberg, manager of the Quincy Youth Arena, president-elect; Josephine Vidal, office manager at Dennis & Associates CPAs, vice president and treasurer; and Bonnie Hanisch, president of the Boston Insurance Group, secretary.

Seven directors were also installed. They are: Richard Sweeney of Sweeney Brothers Funeral Homes; Jeffrey Bertman, Rogers Jewelry; John Farmer, Bank of Canton; George Nolan, Mansfield and Nolan CPA; Jean McCarty, CSR Staffing Solutions; Michelle Higgins, Bank of Canton; and Maralin Manning, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Robert Bosworth, editor of The Quincy Sun and a former Kiwanis lieutenant governor and a distinguished past president of the Quincy club, served as the installing officer.

The installation ceremony was emceed by Yves Poirier, proprietor of Quincy Memorials and a distinguished past president of Quincy Kiwanis.

Keohane is a funeral director for the Keohane Funeral Home, a third generation family business located in Quincy, Hingham and West Roxbury.

In addition to Kiwanis, Keohane is a member of the Quincy Easter Seals Committee and the Knights of Columbus. He attended Boston College High School and graduated from Providence College in 1990.

He and his wife, Karen, live in Quincy and have three sons: Patrick, age 5; Timmy, 3; and Matthew, 1.

Also at the installation, Past President James Stearns was recognized for 35 years of membership with the Kiwanis club.

Entering its 79th year, the Quincy Kiwanis Club, one of the old Kiwanis clubs in New England, has dedicated itself to serving the community. Club members have provided leadership and manpower, assisted countless worthwhile projects, and have engaged in various fund raising activities.

One of the hallmarks of the club's service is sponsorship of an international youth hockey tournament which will observe its 30th anniversary during school vacation week in February.

The hockey tournament, as well as other fund raising initiatives including an annual golf tournament and bowling tournament, has generated hundreds of thousands of dollars in charitable funds.

Since 1924, Quincy Kiwanis has expended more than $650,000 in charitable donations, camperships, scholarships and countless other worthwhile causes.

The club's primary focus is helping underprivileged children -- young children priority one. In recent years, the club has also sponsored a bicycle safety day for local youngsters.

For membership information, call Keohane at 617-773-3551.

River Bay Club Food Drive On Make A Difference Day

The River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy, will sponsor a food drive on National Make A Difference Day Saturday, Oct. 26 from 1 to 3 p.m.

Admission to the event is free with a donation of a non-perishable food item. Additionally, those attending are encouraged to bring their favorite dessert recipe. The best recipes will be published in the River Bay Dessert Cookbook. When published, the cookbook will be sold and the proceeds will go to Interfaith Social Services in Quincy.

On the day of the event, attendees will enjoy desserts compliments of SYSCO Foods and be entertained by John Henry, a magician.

Those unable to attend may drop off donations and recipes during the week prior to the event.

To attend, RSVP by Oct. 23 to the River Bay Club at 617-472-4457.

The River Bay Club is one of Brookdale's senior rental communities. Brookdale Living Communities, Inc., is a leading provider of retirement and assisted living throughout the United States.

For more information on Brookdale Living Communities, Inc. or its properties, visit the company's website at www.RiverBayClub.com.

Eastern Nazarene College To Present 'The Sound Of Music'

The Communication Arts Department of Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm Ave., Wollaston, will present The Sound of Music with performances beginning today (Thursday) at 6 p.m.

Other performances are scheduled Friday, Oct. 18 and Saturday, Oct. 19 at 6 p.m. and Thursday, Oct. 24, Friday, Oct. 25 and Saturday, Oct. 26 at 7 p.m.

For tickets, call the ENC Box Office at 617-745-3715. Tickets are $12 for adults and children 12 years and under are $10.

Faculty member Misti B. Wills is director. Boston musician Jose' Delgado will lead the musical direction. Performances will also feature Quincy youths playing roles of the von Trapp children.

This year marks the 100th anniversary of composer Richard Rodgers and the continuing popularity of the award-winning musical by Rodgers and collaborator Oscar Hammerstein II and the writing team of Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse.

Suggested by "The Story of the Trapp Family Singers," this classical musical sets a personal journey of faith and love against the political backdrop of Austria's national struggle to surrender to the German Third Reich. Maria, a young postulant who is sent to be the governess of the von Trapp family, is torn between her love for the church and for the Captain and his children.

The Sound of Music opened on Broadway in 1959, and ran for 1,500 performances, won eight Tony awards and sold more than three million albums.

The theatre department at Eastern Nazarene College recently celebrated its 26th anniversary. Over 100 plays have been performed since the department first opened in 1975. Performances include modern plays, such as Songs of a New World, and traditional plays like Shakespeare's Great Expectations.

Eastern Nazarene College supports educational theatre by holding weekday matinees with post-show discussions. Interested teachers should contact the Box Office at the earliest date to reserve space.

For more information, call 617-745-3715, or visit the theatre website at www.ENC.edu/theatre.

FALL CAR CARE

AAA Car Care Month Is Time For Annual Vehicle Check-Up

With a typical family spending 15 percent or more of its annual household budget on motor vehicle-related expenses, AAA Southern New England is urging motorists to protect their automotive investment with an annual maintenance and safety inspection during AAA Car Care Month.

During October and November, participating AAA Approved Auto Repair facilities will be offering members a special $1 pre-winter inspection of fluid levels, including oil and windshield wiper fluid, belts and hoses, windshield wipers and battery.

A listing of participating AAA facilities can be found in the October issue of the official club publication, AAA Horizons, online (www.aaa.com).

The average annual cost of owning and operating a new car is estimated by AAA to be $7,533, 15 percent of the average family income.

"It's easy to help safeguard this large part of the family budget and protect against hazardous breakdowns," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's car doctor. "Motorists with an appointment will usually need no more than 15 minutes to have their vehicle looked at by a professional technician. A professional can quickly determine if any maintenance or repairs have been overlooked and need to be performed."

AAA reminds motorists that a good place to learn about maintaining a vehicle is as near as the glove compartment. A vehicle owner's manual is the authoritative source for specific information about the vehicle you drive.

Get Better Fuel Mileage: Easy Changes Save Money At The Pump

(NAPS) -- The following tips may help you save money at the gas pump.

• Make life easier for your engine.

Engines hate friction, so anything you can do to reduce it will make your motor -- and your wallet -- happier. For starters, be sure to change your oil regularly, and use a high-quality or synthetic motor oil to further reduce internal friction. You also can use oil additives to reduce friction.

• Breathe deeply.

If you've every tried to drink a thick milkshake through a straw, you know how hard it is to pull fluid through an opening that's too small. Your engine may feel the same way, if it's trying to gulp air through a small intake system. Something as simple as changing to a high-flow air filter can help your engine inhale more easily and so can a larger throttle body and a performance intake manifold.

• Let it out.

If your engine is trying to exhale through an exhaust system that's too small, a high-flow muffler and performance exhaust system will really help.

Also, make sure your catalytic converter isn't clogged (you'll know, because your exhaust will smell like rotten eggs). When it's time to change, a high-flow "cat" will increase your fuel economy.

• Light a fire.

Is your engine overdue for a tune-up? If it is, new spark plugs and wires will make a huge difference.

Even if you're not behind in maintenance, an upgrade to high performance spark plugs and low-resistance plug wires can improve fuel economy and performance. Plus, high performance coils and ignition boxes make it easier for an engine to burn air and fuel, so it can make more power from the same amount of gasoline.

• Shift quicker.

If you have an automatic transmission, a shift improver kit will enhance gas mileage and power. This kit reduces slippage, so your transmission shifts quicker and harder -- which actually prolongs the life of your transmission, too.

• Improve aerodynamics.

Pickup trucks generally can get the biggest gains when it comes to aerodynamics. That's because, in many cases, air flows into a pickup's bed and runs smack into the tailgate. To reduce wing resistance, you can drive around with your tailgate down, or your can remove your solid metal tailgate and replace it with a tailgate net, so the air can flow through. An "air gate" operates under the same principle, but it's made from metal tubing or mesh, instead of vinyl netting.

Another option is a tonneau cover or truck cap. Not only do these products smooth the air flow over your bed, they also provide plenty of secure storage space.

Spoilers and ground effects can also improve a vehicle's aerodynamics. However, these products originally were designed to work on race cars, and many street versions do more to make your vehicle look racy than to reduce wind resistance.

• Check your tires.

Do you need to add air to your tires? Tires that are running low not only reduce fuel economy, they also wear out faster.

If you're not diligent about using a tire pressure gauge, you might consider installing a tire monitoring system to alert you whenever it's time to add air.

• Add overdrive.

If your vehicle didn't come with an overdrive transmission, you can make a huge improvement in your highway mileage but changing to an overdrive unit, which allows your engine to spin more slowly at cruising speeds.

You can also add extra overdrive gears to a transmission by installing a "gear splitter." It enhances acceleration and towing abilities, too.

• Don't idle while you're waiting.

It takes more gas to sit around with your car running than to restart it, so shut off the engine while you're waiting for passengers to arrive.

• Don't floor it.

It may be fun to see how fast your vehicle can accelerate, but it's definitely not the way to optimize your fuel economy.

They Want Instrumental Program At Elementary Schools

(Cont'd From Page 1)

"Both Mark and Jenna are in advanced placement," said McAufliffe. "Music has been a big influence on their work. I don't know if music will be around to affect Timothy's life."

"The kids will have after-school music but what's the benefit of that? If you have it in-school it's good for your self-esteem. You don't have to be smart to play music."

Ed McDonagh, who once played the bassoon and beat the bass drum at Quincy High School, has two sons, Michael, who plays the clarinet, and Kevin, who plays the trumpet at the Merry Mount Elementary School. A daughter, Carolyn, is not yet in school.

"She may not play anything," said McDonagh. "She won't have the same opportunity her brothers had. I had a wonderful experience with music in the schools. It's a disgrace that a city this size should have no music."

Supporters of music in the Quincy schools are seeking a minimum of one teacher at a cost of $35,000 to keep instrumental music programs alive in the elementary schools.

"Quincy has had an elementary school program for 50 years," said Striano, who graduated from Quincy High in 1960 and came to work in the system in 1968. "Once it is stopped, it may never come back."

Historical Society's Opening Program Offers JQ Adams View

The Quincy Historical Society will open its 110th season Thursday, Oct. 24, at 7:30 p.m. offering a rare opportunity to view the Society's collection of John Quincy Adams memorabilia.

The program will highlight a wide range of works on paper from images to contemporaneous publications to manuscripts, including rare editions of Adams' literary and political works.

Historical Society Director Dr. Edward Fitzgerald will discuss how the written word and the printed image were essential to John Quincy Adams' life and career.

Patricia Keenan-Byrne, the Society's educational consultant, will discuss Adams' role in the debate on slavery and a new curriculum on the subject the Society is developing for the Quincy Public Schools.

The program is free of charge and refreshments will be served.

Phelan Seeks New Open Space Plan

tion that the city should move with regard to open space acquisition, park improvements and rezoning.

They will submit their recommendations to the Mayor by the end of the year.

Quincy has had an open space plan for years but this is the first time that a funding source has been available to finance the necessary open space projects.

An Open Space, Park and Recreation, and Tourism Fund was established by city ordinance in May, 2000, to handle the receipts from by the city from the state's new room occupancy tax.

The Mayor's committee is charged with determining how best to use the new funding source for both park improvements and the acquisition and protection of open space.

Vote On New Auditor Nov. 12

help with a smooth transition to the new auditor.

The applicants will be interviewed at a special Council meeting Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 7 p.m. at which time they may make a presentation and answer questions put to them by the councillors.

Other meetings may be necessary depending on the number of applicants.

The city auditor serves a three year term before he comes up for reappointment by the City Council. McFarland had just been reappointed to another three year term when he resigned.

Although it is not mentioned in the job description, Raymond said the winning applicant should have "effective personal skills."

"The next auditor will be open, respectful and accommodating," said the Council president. "The next auditor will have the necessary verbal and written skills to effectively communicate, inform and educate."

He also must have "the ability to maintain positive relationships with the members of the Quincy City Council, the Mayor, members of the Schools Committee, Department Heads, the Quincy College community and State elected and appointed officials."

The next auditor must have an undergraduate college degree in business, accounting, public administration, finance or a related field and at least three years experience in government finance as a fulltime auditor.

REAL ESTATE

Member Of Planning Committee For Interfaith Social Services Benefit Dec. 4 Mary Dawson Part Of Feed The Hungry Campaign

Mary Dawson, Century 21 Annex Realty's Sales Manager and Broker/Owner, believes in giving her all on the job and in the community where she lives and works.

The Quincy-based Realtor has a long history of community involvement and charitable efforts.

In addition to being involved with South Shore Habitat for Humanity, Dawson is active on the Planning Committee for Interfaith Social Services' (ISS) annual Feed The Hungry campaign.

This year's event will take place Wednesday, Dec. 4, at Lombardo's Function Facility in Randolph. The evening will feature entertainment from the nationally acclaimed "For Sentimental Reasons," which will perform a patriotic USO holiday revue.

MARY DAWSON

Proceeds from Feed The Hungry benefit the Pantry Shelf, a program of ISS. This organization has supplied nutritious and wholesome food to the hungry and counseling to those in need in the South Shore community for more than 55 years.

Last year, the Pantry Shelf served over 7,500 people throughout the region. More than 3,000 of these individuals were children. For more information on Feed The Hungry, call Bettyanne Murr Lang at ISS at 617-773-6203.

"Mary is a remarkable person who blends a strong work ethic with sincere compassion," said Art Foley, Century 21 Annex Realty broker/owner and licensed appraiser. "Her dedication to service shines through in everything she does, both professionally and personally."

"I'm honored to do anything I can for the places and people that have done so much for me," Dawson said. "I grew up in the neighborhoods of the South Shore and greater Boston. This area holds a special place in my heart and volunteer work is how I choose to give back."

A graduate of Mount Saint Joseph Academy in Brighton, Dawson is a mother of six and has five grandchildren. She lives in Quincy with Ronald, her husband of 45 years.

For information about Century 21 Annex Realty, call the Quincy office at 617-472-4330, or toll-free 800-345-4614.

First-Time Homebuyer Program Citizens Bank Donates $15,000 To Quincy Community Action

Citizens Bank recently donated $15,000 to Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.'s (QCAP) First Time Homebuyer Program.

"This generous donation is particularly timely as we strive to provide affordable housing opportunities to families in one of the nation's tightest housing markets," said QCAP Housing Director Trish Appert.

Recent reports show that although Massachusetts' median income is 20 percent higher than the U.S. average, the state ranks the sixth lowest in homeownership rates. Massachusetts also has the distinction of having the third highest housing burden in the country, making homeownership a more elusive dream, particularly for younger and lower-income families.

QCAP's partnership with Citizens Bank works to reverse these trends by educating low- and moderate-income families about homeownership and giving them the tools they need — assistance with down payment and closing costs, as well as connections to special mortgage products — to bridge the gap from renting to successful homeownership.

"Citizens is proud to partner with QCAP and empower low- and moderate-income homebuyers with financial support and housing education," said Julie Connolly, vice president of Community Investments at Citizens Bank of Massachusetts. "Our goal is to help our community members find real housing solutions in the Quincy area through supporting the First Time Homebuyer Program."

In 1992, QCAP recognized a need in Quincy and pioneered a First Time Homebuyer counseling program for low- and moderate-income buyers. Since then, QCAP has helped over 3,000 first-time buyers navigate the homeownership process.

QCAP doesn't turn out successful homeowners alone. The agency calls on a network of experts from the lending and real estate communities to deliver comprehensive educational workshops to people seeking to make their first home purchase. QCAP's workshops are uniquely designed to lead participants through all facets of the homebuying process and give them information they need to make educated decisions about their purchase.

"We are pleased to receive recognition and support for this program from Citizens Bank," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo. "This generous donation will help us meet the demand for our high quality workshops and enable us to help families realize the goal of homeownership."

The donation will also enable QCAP to continue special programming, such as the Cantonese workshops now offered in the fall and spring. These workshops were developed in response to the growing diversity of Quincy and offer the same high-quality homebuyer education programming to Cantonese-speaking households. QCAP is currently the only organization offering such programming to non-English speaking homebuyers in Quincy.

To learn more about upcoming First Time Homebuyer workshops, register for a workshop on-line or learn more about QCAP's Housing Program, check its web site (www.qcap.org) or call 617-479-8181.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party

November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Quick Tips To Avoid Household Headaches

(NAPS) — Aspirin isn't the only thing that you should have on hand for headaches. For common household headaches there are a few common products you should keep under the sink to save you time and money when these types of ailments arise.

Sticky Situations: Tired of tripping over the piece of pecked up linoleum? Still haven't reattached that loose ceramic tile? Be sure to always have a multi-purpose adhesive on hand to repair small damages throughout the house. Water based products, such as Loctite's Power Grab line are a good choice since they do not give off any fumes and provide a strong, quick grab. In addition, the pressure pack allows for easy dispensing since no extra caulking guns are needed.

Bugs Driving You Buggy?: Tired of scrubbing the bug splats off your windshield and bumper after a long drive? Keep some Pledge Furniture Polish in your trunk and spray it on all parts of the car exposed to bug smashing. The polish will help make them easier to remove when you return home.

Rinse Away Residue: Sticky residue is always a challenge to remove from picture frames or other decorations. Save your fingernails and use Duck brand adhesive remover to quickly and easily remove sticky labels. Just spray a little of the adhesive remover on, let it sit for a few minutes, and the gunk is gone.

Crystal Clean Windows And Floors: To clean spots on rugs and carpets you can use expensive rug and carpet cleaners. But to cut down on products (and cost), window cleaners work just as well. Just spray it on and scrub away stains.

Duck Of All Trades: Some products can do just about anything. Be sure to keep some Duck brand duct tape on hand to get you out of a bind when it comes to a wide range of home repairs. This includes repairing shower curtains, hems on dresses, sweeper bags or hoses, vinyl inflatable toys, tents, holding down floor mats and loose carpet, covering exposed bolts and more.

Await Marlboro-Clinton Winner Granite In League Championship Game

By CHRIS POISSON

Finally, the Quincy Granite will be playing for the Eastern Football League championship.

After coming up short last season — when they strutted into the semifinal with a perfect record but exited early with a loss to Springfield — the Granite found away Sunday night to slip and slide past Middleboro, 18-12, at Battis Field.

Quincy (9-3), only in its fourth year, will face the Northern Conference champion, which will be decided Sunday when 11-team round-robin champion Marlboro takes on Clinton.

If the Shamrocks win, as expected, then Quincy will travel to Marlboro the following week for the Super Bowl. If Clinton somehow prevails, then Quincy would host the Super Bowl the following week.

"It's satisfying after what happened last year," said head coach Ken McPhee. "The guys are psyched."

"This is what we've wanted for the last four years," said captain and co-founder David Harris. "Last year we made some mistakes and I had to suffer for a whole year. I was dreaming of that moment out there in Middleboro when we won."

"Personally, I want to play Marlboro just because we've never beat them in the Super Bowl," added Harris, who lost two championships to the Shamrocks as a member of the Boston Cowboys. "I mean I haven't beaten them

Granite Fundraiser Saturday At The Fours

The Quincy Granite will hold a fund-raiser to help pay for their Super Bowl expenses Saturday night from 8 to midnight at The Four's restaurant, 15 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center.

There is a $15 donation, or $25 per couple, at the door. The first 100 people will receive 2002 Granite T-shirts.

There will be a 50/50 raffle, a cash bar and appetizers. The public is welcomed to attend. The event is for ages 21 and older.

Quincy will play the Super Bowl the following week-end against either Marlboro or Clinton.

time proved to be a charm.

The Granite fell behind 12-0 in the first quarter when quarterback Anthony Comer scrambled for a 49-yard touchdown. On the Cobras' next possession, Comer connected with Paul Dunderdale for a 73-yard score. However, Middleboro missed both extra points.

"We were down 12-0 in the first quarter," McPhee said. "Comer took one in and then they scored on a huge crossing route. But they missed both point-after tries which hurt them. We held them to 207 total yards and if you take away those two plays it's even less."

Late in the first, Quincy's offense began to click and eventually found paydirt when quarterback Liam Higgins tossed a 35-yard TD pass to captain Derrick Wright. Matt Kulesza's extra point cut the deficit to 12-7.

Early in the second quarter, Quincy struck again when Higgins connected with wide receiver Jeff Lang for a 64-yard TD. The 2-point conversion pass failed and Quincy held a 13-12 lead.

Kulesza nailed a 27-yard field goal later in the quarter to hand the Granite a 16-12 lead going into halftime.

In the second half, the steady rain came down even harder to create slick field conditions, which helped explain the 13 fumbles between the two teams (7 for Middleboro).

Red Raiders Battle Barnstable, Bow 28-27

On a damp night last Friday, the North Quincy High School football team almost hung Barnstable out to dry.

Coming off two demoralizing losses on the road, the Red Raiders returned home to Veterans Memorial Stadium and turned in their best performance of the season against one of the Old Colony League's big boys.

In a game that seemed like a tennis match of big plays, the Red Raiders of the Cape came up with the final points, rallying late in the fourth quarter for a 28-27 victory.

"We played an excellent Division I program to a one-point loss," said head coach Tony Green. "I'm proud of the kids. We're finally healthy now and when we're healthy we're a competitive team."

North Quincy (1-4) will try to carry over its strong play tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when it travels to Taunton.

On the opening kickoff Chris Dolbeare bobbled the ball at the 10-yard line, but the senior speedster recovered and jetted 90 yards down the middle of the field for a touchdown.

On the extra-point attempt, Barnstable blocked senior Corey Piazza's kick and Andre Barboza scooped it up and raced 80 yards as North Quincy led 6-2 after just 23 seconds.

And there were more special teams' plays. After the Red Raiders' first possession, Barboza returned the punt 69 yards for a score to put his team ahead, 8-6, with 3:50 left in the first.

In the second quarter, senior quarterback Kevin Holleran converted a third-with 7:15 left.

North Quincy's defense forced Barnstable to turn the ball over on downs and the offense responded with another scoring drive that featured Holleran and Dolbeare. Dolbeare caught two passes for 43 yards and carried three times for 30 yards, including a 19-yard run in which he tipped the left sideline for the touchdown. North Quincy missed the extra point and led 27-20 with 9:17 left in the fourth quarter.

"What we envisioned was a 1-2-3 punch with our backs," Green said. "But Ryan Farnham is out with a concussion and James Coughlin has a broken hand. Right now Dolbeare is the real workhorse. He had an incredible game. We knew he was going to be open. We practiced all week long getting him the ball."

After Barnstable punted on its possession, North Quincy got the ball at its 14 with 6:24 left and managed to take nearly three minutes off the clock before it had to punt. And when it lined up in formation, somehow you just knew the game was going to be decided by special teams.

Barboza received Francis' punt at his 40 and made another sensational run, returning the ball 47 yards to the North Quincy 13. On the next play, Ellis darted through the middle of the line untouched into the end zone to tie the game.

Barnstable immediately signaled for the 2-point conversion and Hill scored the go-ahead points on a naked bootleg to the left side.

"We have to work on our special teams this week," Green said. "That's why we lost. We need to work on our coverage."

The Red Raiders still had one last chance when it took over at their 35 with 3:28 left in the game. And they put a scare into Barnstable when Holleran hit Mooney for a first down at the Barnstable 16 on a fourth-and-20 play. Two plays later, though, they fumbled to end the game.

MODERN TRANSMISSIONS

It used to be that a vehicle with a manual transmission would usually be faster than a vehicle with an automatic transmission. Slick shifts also tended to get better mileage because less of the available power was lost through the slippage inherent in an old-style automatic and its fluid-driven torque converter. Now it is commonplace for efficient "lock-up" torque converters to physically connect the engine to the transmission, at least part of the time (mostly at road speed), by means of a special clutching mechanism. As a result, the parasitic power losses associated with automatics have been reduced to the point where a vehicle with a manual transmission enjoys only slight performance and fuel economy advantages over its automatic counterpart.

No matter what type of transmission your vehicle is equipped with count on us if you need service. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is small enough to provide friendly personal service, and large enough to have the latest, most modern test equipment and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and retrained. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 9am-5pm, Sat. 9am-5pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: Today's automatic transmissions have also been programmed (via electronic controls) to deliver crisp, high-performance shifts that were once solely associated with manual transmissions.

PAUL BREGOLI of Quincy has made the fall baseball team at the University of Rhode Island as walk-on. He was one of five walk-on players selected among 30 candidates. A former standout at North Quincy High School, Bregoli is a first semester freshman at URI.

Granite In Championship game and then it started to pour in the second half," Harris said. "That just made it a more interesting game."

Midway through the fourth quarter, the Cobras were backed up near their end zone when corner back Derrick Lipp blitzed, forcing Corner to get rid of the ball. The only problem was he was called for intentional grounding and the Granite was awarded two points for a safety.

Quincy could've really blown open the game but it tumbled twice inside the Middleboro 5-yard line due to the weather conditions.

"Defensively, they only scored 13, 6 and 12 points against us in three games," McPhee said. "They didn't exactly light up the scoreboard. We had trouble scoring but we fixed that in this game. Higgins threw the ball extremely well under those conditions. We could've had more points but we fumbled twice inside the 5."

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team still probably can't believe what happened last Friday night at Whitman-Hanson.

Trailing 19-18 with 1:46 left in the game, the Presidents scripted a remarkable comeback, marching 70 yards for the go-ahead touchdown with only 17 ticks left to knock off the defending Division 3 Super Bowl champs.

If only that was the way it ended. In a crazy game of high school football, the Panthers still had 11 seconds after retrieving a squib kick at their own 17-yard line.

Just enough time to design the following play, which probably would've been perfect in those old Larry Bird-Michael Jordan commercials:

A Hal Mary pass that deflects off two Quincy defenders and a W-H receiver into the hands of another W-H receiver standing 5 yards behind the group, who races 40 yards into the end zone to tie the game.

And it gets better. The Presidents blocked the extra point to send the game into overtime, giving a glimmer of hope for their fans. But when a team scores on an 83-yard prayer, there's no way it can lose in OT.

W-H scored a touchdown and 2-point conversion to Quincy's touchdown, taking the Atlantic Coast League show down, 33-31.

"It was absolutely a fluke play," said head coach Bob Noble. "But luck is a byproduct of hard work. Unfortunately, it happened to us. It was tough."

Quincy (2-2) now travels to Randolph tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 to take on a Blue Devils team that has caused them fits in the past.

"We haven't beat them in the last four years," Noble said. "One of our goals in the preseason was to beat Randolph before we think of anything else, any league titles."

While on the topic of league titles, the loss to W-H hurt but it didn't decide the ACL championship. There's still five league matches left in the season for both teams.

"It's disappointing, but not discouraging," Noble said. "We could easily be undefeated. Two of our losses are overtime losses. I have a heck of a football team. We're going to win more than our fair share of games."

W-H took a 7-0 lead late in the first quarter. Quincy trimmed the deficit to 7-6 when junior tailback J.J. Niamkey broke loose for a 70-yard run, setting up senior wing back Matt Ramponi's 2-yard score.

Quincy seized a 12-7 lead with 56 seconds left in the half when senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell plunged into the end zone from 1 yard out. The 2-point conversion failed.

In the second half, Quincy recovered a W-H fumbled deep in Panthers' territory. Soon after, O'Connell hit senior wide receiver Anthony Boyle with an 11-yard TD pass for an 18-7 lead.

On W-H's next possession, two banks of floodlights went out causing a 20-minute delay. When play resumed, the Panthers marched down the field for a touchdown thanks to two costly Quincy penalties that kept their drive alive.

After Quincy went three-and-out, W-H again received help from the Presidents on its next drive. On a fourth-and-3 play, Quincy was called for having too many men on the field. Instead of punting, W-H had a first down and it later scored to grab a 19-18 lead.

On what appeared to be Quincy's game-winning drive, O'Connell connected with Ramponi for a 40-yard completion, setting up Ramponi's 1-yard TD run. Senior Thiago Goes hit the extra point for a 25-19 lead.

"Ramponi's rushing numbers aren't Niamkey-esque, 44 yards on 10 carries, but he's our short-yardage, between-the-tackles guy and he's doing an outstanding job for us," Noble said.

After the Panthers' miracle finish at the end of regulation, their good fortune continued in OT when they scored on fourth down and added the 2-point conversion pass.

On Quincy's series, O'Connell (9 of 15, 112 yards) and Niamkey hooked up for a 15-yard TD on a screen pass. But the 2-point conversion pass fell incomplete to end the game.

"It was one of the most exciting high school football games I've ever been associated with," Noble said. "We played our hearts out."

Niamkey finished with another spectacular game, gaining 143 yards on 17 carries. For the season, he has rushed for 538 yards on only 49 carries — an incredible 11 yards a pop.

"Niamkey had another fantastic evening," said Noble, who also noted Niamkey had two interceptions as he's developing into a great corner back. "The offensive line, the backs and the receivers are doing a great job blocking for him."

Houghs Neck Manets Down Elks To Remain Undefeated

The Houghs Neck Manets remained undefeated with an 18-6 win over the West Quincy Elks in recent Quincy Youth Football action.

The Elks took an 8-0 lead early in the first quarter, but the Manets stormed back on Camilio Arrendondo's TD run which was set up by Tom Conley's 30-yard reception. They missed the 2-point conversion.

Houghs Neck grabbed a 12-8 lead on Brian Sullivan's 30-yard TD run and it added its final touchdown in the fourth quarter. The Elks tried to come back but the Houghs Neck defense stopped them on the goal line.

Playing well for the Manets were Mike Little, Diego Arrendondo and Tom Hazelhurst.

North Quincy Girls Closer To Playoffs

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team inched closer to a tournament berth by taking one of three home games last week.

North Quincy (8-6-1) needs three points in its final five games to secure its sixth straight tournament appearance. The Red Raiders traveled to Barnstable Tuesday and today (Thursday) they host Plymouth South at 4 p.m.

"Our frustration is beginning to build with our inability to finish good scoring chances," said head coach Paul Gregoli. "We have not been able to capitalize on our chances while the few mistakes our defenders make seem to cost us. I still feel confident we'll qualify because the team continues to give a great effort."

Last Monday, senior forward Katy Mercurio scored her first career hat trick to power North Quincy to a 5-1 win over Martha's Vineyard. Mercurio scored on a penalty kick four minutes into the game and then fed junior Katy Faherty, who one-time a shot to the near post.

Mercurio struck again 1:20 into the second half, taking a pass from Faherty and rifling a shot from 18 yards out. She completed the hat trick when she redirected a Faherty pass from 12 yards out.

Mercurio has 11 points this season, placing her seventh on the school's all-time scoring list.

Senior quad-captain

SOCCER

Christina Conley scored her fifth goal of the year, netting a cross by senior quad-captain Rachel Enos from 8 yards out. Conley also has seven assists.

Also playing well were seniors Nancy Yankun, Jess Smialek and Meagan Randall along with junior Breaime Therrien and sophomore Eileen Price.

North Quincy dropped its next two matches to O.C. league leaders Falmouth and Bridgewater-Raynham.

Last Wednesday, the Clippers edged North Quincy, 1-0, on a goal scored four minutes into the game. The Red Raiders had the better of play throughout but could not put one in the net.

Their scoring drought continued last Friday with a 2-0 loss to the Trojans. Again, two goals early in the game were the difference as North Quincy dominated the final 70 minutes.

Freshman Lauren Milone hit the crossbar from 35 yards out in the first half and senior Jen Venuti just missed connecting on a cross. In the second half the B-R keeper made a nice save on senior quad-captain Lauren Kalil.

Senior backs Lisa Schifone and Jessica Jacques, along with senior sweeper and quad-captain Erin McFarland turned in strong games.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Dr. Joshua Dubin Member Of Team USA Medical Staff

By CHRIS POISSON

Dr. Joshua Dubin almost didn't get to participate in the recent ITU Duathlon Long Distance World Championship.

That's because the event, held in Weyer, Austria, was taking place around the same time Europe had its biggest flood of the century.

"Weyer was flooded the day before we arrived," said Dubin, who noted the town had 1,400 participants among its own 2,500 people and 3,500 cows. "They spent 24 hours cleaning and getting the course ready."

Dubin did not compete as an athlete, rather, he participated as a member of the Team USA Medical Staff for the sixth time in the past seven years. He has also taken part in the world championships held in Italy (1996), Spain (1997), Sweden (1999), Denmark (2000) and France (2001).

"I love it," Dubin said. "I enjoy training with the athletes and it's fun helping them get better from their injuries. It's like a hobby."

Indeed, Dubin's full-time job is as a licensed chiropractor. He has an office, Dubin Chiropractic, located 1250 Hancock St., Quincy, where he specializes in the management of musculoskeletal disorders as well as sports and work-related injuries. He's also a certified strength conditioning specialist and a certified chiropractic sports physician.

"I compete personally," he added. "Two years ago I qualified for the national team at the Marlboro Duathlon in the Clydesdale Division. But these are pro elites at the world championships."

In other athletic endeavors, Dubin has run the Boston Marathon twice (1995-96) and cycled in the Pan-Mass Challenge for the past six years, raising a combined $14,000 for cancer research.

At the Duathlon World Championship, Dubin arrived a week before to train with the athletes and wound up working with about 50 of the 120 U.S. athletes every day from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

And one athlete he worked with was personally gratifying. Two days before the event, Andrea Ratkovic of Oklahoma had an injured hamstring near her pelvis which caused extreme pain while running.

Ratkovic sought out Dubin, who performed his magic, and in just 48 hours she was pain-free and set to take on the hilly course. Ratkovic, who won her second U.S. title a month earlier in the 2002 Dannon Duathlon in California, placed fifth overall among women.

Dubin, who resides in Quincy, graduated magna cum laude from Palmer College of Chiropractic in 1995. In 1999 he published a paper on the treatment of low back injuries in "Dynamic Chiropractic."

Protecting Your Child From Computer Overuse Injury

Whether typing a school term paper or surfing the Internet, your child may be spending many hours at the computer both at school and at home. As a result, children are beginning to experience the same computer-related disorders that have plagued their parents for years.

However, preventing these conditions is much easier than treating them after they develop. By designing a child's computer workstation in more ergonomically correct manner, you can help your children avoid the stresses associated with computer use and thus prevent injury.

"Too often, children are using equipment that is not set up for their size, putting them at postural risk," said Norma Glennon, OTR, CHT, Manager of Occupational Therapy Services, Kessler Rehabilitation Centers. "Poor posture usually leads to discomfort in the neck, shoulders, back, arms and hands."

Repetitive stress injuries (RSI) are most commonly associated with computer overuse. RSI are a group of conditions, such as carpal tunnel syndrome, tendonitis and cervical radiculopathy, generally caused by placing too much stress on the muscles, tendons and nerves in a particular joint.

"When stress on a joint occurs repeatedly the body does not have time to recover and therefore becomes irritated," Glennon said.

Resulting symptoms can include tightness, soreness or burning in the hands, wrists, fingers, forearms and elbows; tingling, coldness and numbness in the hands; decreased strength and coordination in the hands; pain that increases at night or with sleep; and feeling a need to massage hands, wrists and arms for relief.

To help reduce the possibility of your child suffering from RSI or other computer-related injuries, Kessler recommends the following:

- Proper computer placement. Position the computer monitor at or slightly below eye level, centered and approximately 18 to 24 inches from the eyes. "Any greater distances may contribute to poor posture if the child needs to lean forward or look up or down to read the screen," Glennon said.

- Correct seating position. According to Glennon, proper seating may be the most critical aspect in preventing computer-related injury. Make sure your child is seated properly with the monitor eye level, feet flat on the floor and back supported. If the chair is non-adjustable, you can improvise. Have the child sit on a firm pillow, old telephone book or a ream of paper. Or, use a telephone book or a backpack as a footrest. Also, a rolled up towel can be placed in the small of the child's back for added back support. Adjustable armrests are also recommended for additional arm support.

- Encourage good posture. Slouching forces shoulders down and forward and causes the chin to jut out and, thus, places considerable strain on the neck, back and entire upper body. "In fact, the pressure on the back is greatest when sitting in a slouched position," Glennon said. Good posture is demonstrated by the head in a neutral position with chin tucked in; back straight; shoulders relaxed; elbows at right angles to arms; and wrists aligned with the forearm. "But, even 'perfect' posture can result in problems if it is held too rigidly for long periods of time," Glennon said.

- Teach proper typing techniques. While typing, allow the arms to move the hands around instead of resting the wrist and stretching the fingers to reach the keys. "Wrist pad should be used for rest only," Glennon said. Strike the keyboard gently and utilize both hands to perform double-key operations such as Ctrl-P. Wrists should remain neutral without bending sideways, up or down. If using a mouse, grasp it lightly without squeezing and keep it as close to the keyboard as possible to reduce awkward movements.

- Emphasize breaks every 15 to 20 minutes. Encourage children to stand, walk around and stretch. "Stretch breaks help reduce the muscle tension caused when the body remains in a fixed position for too long," Glennon said. Stretches can include: tucking in the chin and slowly turning the head to the right, hold for 30 seconds, and repeat to the left; shoulder shrugs and rolls; making a fist and then spreading fingers open; with hands behind the head, pinching shoulder blades together; and while standing, with knees slightly bent, try and touch palms to the floor.

Most importantly, set a good example yourself when working or playing at the computer and your children will follow your ergonomically correct lead.

For more information about Kessler's comprehensive physical medicine and rehabilitation programs, call 1-888-KESSLER or visit its Web site (www.kessler-rehab.com).

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A BONDING EXPERIENCE

The good news for those with chipped or stained teeth is that there is a quick, effective, and relatively low-cost fix available. "Bonding" involves the application of a composite resin material to cover damaged areas of the teeth. This material is matched to natural tooth color and the procedure usually requires only a single visit. The dentist first prepares the tooth for treatment by roughing and shaping the surface. Next comes an application of a conditioning agent and bonding solution that act together to ensure strong adhesion of the composite material, which is then applied. Next, it is sculpted and cured with a high-intensity light. Finally, the bonded area is smoothed and polished to give it a natural contour.

If you would like to know more about how bonding can enhance your smile, ask us. We'll help you decide if this procedure would be right for you. We know your smile says a lot about you. After all, it's the first thing most people notice when they meet you. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer professional dental care, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic services for all ages. Remember, we're your complete dental care provider. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesia and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Bonding may be employed to close small gaps between teeth.

SCOTT HEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Napoleon could have ridden in an automobile, Shakespeare could have made "talkies," of his best plays, Caesar could have telephoned the news of his victories to Rome, Cleopatra could have had a steam yacht, Socrates could have recorded his dialogues on phonograph records.

The principles on which all modern inventions are based, the materials out of which they are made, and the forces which operate them, have always existed. The world had to wait for a few men to discover and utilize them.

In the years before us, amazing inventions and improvements will be made in every line of work. Opportunities for fame and wealth await men and women of intelligence, imagination and ingenuity who can perceive new or better ways to serve mankind, and put them into operation.

Yes, it is true that the greatest achievement of the human spirit is to live up to one's opportunities and make the most of one's resources. . . .

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch that you don't unwittingly reveal work-related information to the wrong person. Best to say nothing until you get official clearance to open up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) With things settling down at work or at home, you can now take on a new challenge without fear of distraction. Be open to helpful suggestions from colleagues.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your creativity can help resolve an emotional situation that might otherwise get out of hand. Continue to be your usual caring, sensitive self.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You could impress a lot of influential people with the way you untangle a knotty problem. Meanwhile, a colleague is set to share some welcome news.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Aspects favor recharging your social life and meeting new people. It's also a good time to renew friendships that might be stagnating due to neglect on both sides.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Congratulations. Your talent for working out a highly technical problem earns you well-deserved praise. The weekend could bring news about a friend or relative.

Cahill Endorsed For State Treasurer By Congressional Delegation

The Massachusetts Congressional delegation has endorsed Tim Cahill, Democratic candidate for state treasurer.

The 10 Congressmen hosted a reception for him Tuesday at the Seaport Hotel ballroom in Boston.

Cahill, Norfolk County treasurer and Quincy city councillor, said in announcing the endorsement:

"I am honored to have the support and backing of the Massachusetts Congressional delegation," Cahill said. "I look forward to working with the Congressmen on issues facing the communities in their respective districts and issues facing the state treasury."

"I am pleased to have received tremendous support across the Commonwealth. We have gained a lot of momentum and backing since winning the Democratic primary Sept. 17."

Cahill was first elected to the City Council at-large in 1987 and last year was re-elected to his eighth term, topping the ballot.

In 1996, Cahill defeated Norfolk County's only Republican elected official, Treasurer Robert Hall. Cahill said he immediately inherited a county hospital facing bankruptcy. He said he worked with others to save the hospital, got a commitment to keep it open and save jobs, retired an $8 million debt and returned a surplus to the county.

Cahill said that under his leadership, Norfolk County's retirement system has grown from $241 million to $393 million over the last five years and made a profit each year, even during the decline in the stock market the past two years.

Cahill lives in Quincy with his wife, Tina (Falco) Cahill, an elementary school gym teacher, and their four daughters, Makenna, Nicole, Devin and Kendra.

Germantown Program Hosts 'Steel Magnolias'

The Germantown Neighborhood Center will host those involved in its women's self-esteem workshops at a night out tonight (Thursday) to attend the Norwell Company Theater's production of "Steel Magnolias."

Members of the Center's staff and those who attend the workshops have been invited to the show at 5 p.m.

For the second year, the Center will hold the citywide program that provides childcare and dinner for 28 women and 36 children every Tuesday from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Roomers, Transients Blamed For Crime In Quincy Center

Lt. William Stenmon of the Community Policing Unit urged resident to record issues and continue to report them on a regular basis and he agreed with McKenna that a program is needed to keep homeless people busy during the day.

"Capt. Robert Crowley and I tossed around the idea of a chip system," he said. "If they want to stay at Father Bill's or any other shelter they need to work at the DPW (or any other participating organization) for four hours and get a chip. No chip and you can't get into the shelter."

Lt. Michael Shea of the MBTA told the meeting that "keeping trains and buses safe is a main concern of the MBTA police. I want to listen to any suggestions the citizens of Quincy have and act on them."

He informed the meeting that the MBTA police are mounting "No Smoking" and "No Loitering" signs at the station and will arrest trespassers. However, he added, arrests for loitering are a "trickier" situation.

"There is a fine line," he said. "People have a right to wait for a bus. We do make arrests but you need to know the right time to make a move."

Loitering, the police officers were told, is a big concern of the residents, not only at the T Station but at the Crane Library and McIntyre Mall in front of City Hall.

"With Mayor (William) Phelan's focus on tourism it is important that the area not look like a flop house district," said Nancy Jolly. "In addition, two high rise buildings have been approved for luxury apartments. Will anyone want to live in them if the neighborhood is filled with vagrants?"

McKenna, an architect, commented that the library is an architecturally significant building and should be listed on tourist routes — but the view was liable to include public urination, fornication and homeless sleeping on the library steps.

"We are all just neighbors getting together to help solve issues that concern us and this situation has changed the way we live," said Jolly. It has made us feel very defensive when we go out in our own neighborhood, day or night.

"If something is not done about these social issues, then a 'For Sale' sign will be going up on my house and many others."

Some of the other issues discussed at the QCNA meeting included:

- 50-52 and 54-56 Spear St. are under contract to be purchased by Caritas Communities, a non-profit organization based in Braintree. City Councillor Greg Hanley will meet with the attorney for Caritas to discuss the sale and its effect on the city.

- The Keyspan gas leak is still a problem. Complaints of the smell of gas were received as recently as Friday. The plan is to bring Keyspan before the City Council again to address a request for monthly monitoring reports and a map, which have not yet been furnished.

- The recurrence of rats if the DPW goes forward with test borings on Faxon Field once the ground freezes. Jolly indicated she had spoken with the Health Department's Chief Sanitarian Cynthia DeCristofaro about the rats and DeCristofaro told her she would take it up with the DPW. The Army Corps of Engineers said the field is under their jurisdiction and the city will need a permit from them.

- One of the stores at 90 Washington St. will be before the Zoning Board of Appeals Oct. 29 at 7:15 p.m. for a change in usage. George Cook, owner of Coddington's restaurant, wants to open a 36-seat restaurant and bar in the former print shop. Gutro said he feels this is a dramatic change and poses a significant traffic and parking issue. The location is also with 500 feet of the Central Baptist Church.

- Parking is a significant issue in the city with several new restaurants in the area. Fajita's and Rita's and Gypsy's Kitchen lost nine parking spaces due to construction. Gutro said he has worked to arrange free parking through Lincoln Properties at President's Place. The establishments will be provided parking vouchers which can be used by their patrons.

- Gutro reported he has been keeping up with needed maintenance in Ward 1. Work has been completed

On Life Insurance Increase Issue: Council Votes 'Yes' But Phelan Says Money Not There

By LANCE MORGANELLI

The City Council Monday night voted to increase the basic life insurance of current and former city employees from $7,500 to $10,000, but Mayor William Phelan says the money isn't there to do it.

Phelan told a crowded City Council chamber that the city cannot fund the additional $2,500 because of lack of funds.

A resolution by City Council President Daniel Raymondi calling for Phelan to honor a commitment made by former Mayor James Sheets to increase the insurance benefit to $10,000 was passed by a 7 to 1 vote, with Councillor Francis McCauley the lone dissenter. Councillor Tim Cahill was not present.

"The person I criticize is Mayor Sheets," said McCauley. "I think he raised [the insurance increase higher than originally agreed upon] because the heat was on."

Raymondi's resolution would make the $2,500 increase retroactive to July 1.

MAYOR William Phelan tells current and retired city employees there isn't money to fund a $2,500 increase in basic life insurance. He said he would continue to review the matter. At right is City Clerk Joseph Shea. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

It declared that Quincy Insurance Advisory Committee and Sheets acted as legal bargaining groups, making the commitment valid.

It also said Phelan refused to honor the commitment.

Phelan, however, said if he agreed to the life insurance promise he would also have to agree to other promises made by the Sheets administration.

"I'm here to tell you that there were more promises than the one that is at issue tonight," he said.

"We had to transfer monies from other funds and in particular from the reserve account ultimately to balance last year's budget because not only this particular fund

Federal Grand Jury Wants City Records Dating Back To 1990

Phelan Pledges 'Highest Priority' To Fed Subpoena

By TOM HENSHAW

Mayor William Phelan, with his city under the investigative gun for alleged past corruption, has pledged "open and thorough" cooperation with a federal grand jury's subpoena seeking city records dating back to 1990.

The subpoena was served on City Clerk Joseph Shea, the keeper of the municipal records, last Friday asking that he provide investigators with all documents, such as licenses, permits, etc., relating to certain individuals and entities.

Shea is directed to comply by Oct. 29.

"This matter has the highest priority," said Phelan, who has held office only since January. He called a meeting of department heads Tuesday morning to impress upon them to give their full cooperation with the subpoena.

The Mayor declined to speculate on the target or targets of the subpoena but already former City Councillor Michael D'Amico has been indicted for extortion and retired Plumbing Inspector Ralph Maher faces felony charges.

Individuals and companies whose recorded dealings with the city since Jan. 1, 1997, have been subpoenaed include:

- Maher and the St. Moritz Social Club, a private club located at 91 Penn St., South Quincy, in a building owned by Maher.

- All the plumbing permits issued by the city.

- Quincy Housing Authority records involving smoke alarms.

- Quarry Hills Associates, including "but not limited to" water use records.

- 14 acres of land off Quincy Avenue purchased by the city and later rejected as possibly contaminated for the site of a new high school.

- The Waterworks, an open air night club in Marina Bay.

- Ron DiBella's plumbing company.

- Jack Chennette and his plumbing company/

- Derbes Brothers construction company.

- P. J. Kennedy, a plumber.

- Jeff Aronson, a carpet installer.

It was the second time in a month that Quincy officials have been subpoenaed to supply records to federal agents. The nine current members of the City Council were subpoenaed for their records in September.

The charges against Maher, who retired as chief plumbing inspector in January, grew out of a December break into a city hall office from which a portion of his own personnel records, subject of another subpoena two years ago, were taken.

The feds began their interest in Maher several years ago when it was found that he loaned more than $1 million to Francis Fraine, an associate of missing gangster Whitey Bulger, for real estate deals in South Boston and Braintree.

D'Amico, who was beaten for reelection to the City Council last November, was indicted by the federal grand jury for extortion in a road construction deal and lying about it to federal agents. He pleaded innocent to the charges in federal court Oct. 10.

Concerns Raised Over Sale Of New Product With Alcohol To Underage

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Det Lt. Robert Perchard asked the License Board at Tuesday's meeting to place restriction on the selling of a new product called "Underberg" which contains 44 percent alcohol.

Perchard, who is liquor inspector and license board agent, said it is being sold at some 7-Eleven stores and at Pacini's in Quincy Center. He said Pacini's owner had some concerns over the product being sold to those under 21 years of age.

Chairman Joseph Shea read an ordinance which stated it is unlawful to sell non-alcoholic beer or other similar items to those under 21 years of age, and said it should stay within the guidelines.

Shea said he would petition the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission to get an official ruling and then notify everyone who is selling the product.

Perchard said the six-ounce bottle of liquid is a natural herb bitter which is supposed to be taken if a person overeats, but said it gives "quite a buzz" and is supposed to make the person feel "light and alert."

Perchard said he was concerned because it is being sold "without restrictions."

Candidates To Attend

City Democrats To Hold Annual Breakfast Sunday

The Quincy Democratic City Committee will hold its 15th annual breakfast Sunday with state and county Democratic candidates attending.

The 9:30 a.m. event will be at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad Street.

Candidates Shannon O'Brien, governor; Christopher Gabrieli, lieutenant governor; Tim Cahill, state treasurer; and Patrick McDermott, Norfolk County Register of Probate, are expected to attend.

The Dennis Ryan Community Award will be presented to Marcia A.

McCarthy of North Quincy, principal of the Merrymount elementary school.

The award is given annually to a person that exemplifies the principles of the Democratic party.

A lifelong Democrat, she is an active member of the Ward 6 Democratic Committee and currently its Affirmative Action Officer.

She has been recognized as an outstanding educator, as recipient of the 1999-2000 Norfolk County Teacher's Association Honor Award and selection by the U.S. Department of Education to represent Massachusetts at the National Teacher Forum in Washington, D.C.

Democratic City Committee Chairman Mike Cheney said: "Marcia has been in the trenches on behalf of the Democratic party and is a committed individual who has illustrated by example the principles of the Democratic party."

Tickets for the breakfast are $15 and can be obtained by mailing a check or money order, payable to the Quincy Democratic City Committee, to Treasurer Joanne Condon Walsh, 80 Harbourside Road, North Quincy, MA 02171. Tables of 10 are available at $125.

Dedication Nov. 11

World War II Statue To Be Temporarily Outside City Hall

Quincy's World War II Memorial Statue will be dedicated in front of new City Hall Monday, Nov. 11, but it won't have a permanent home until sometime next spring.

The statue, featuring members of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps (there was no Air Force in those days), will be unveiled during the annual Veterans Day ceremonies.

Later it will be moved to its permanent location in Merrymount Park at the corner of Southern Artery and Hancock Street once the configuration of the intersection has been decided.

"We had hoped to get state funds for the move by this fall," said Mayor William Phelan, "but we may not be able to move it until next spring."

The dedication ceremony will immediately follow the annual Veterans Day parade, which will begin on School Street at 10:30 a.m. and finish at City Hall at 12 noon.

"We are thrilled that we were able to get the World War II Memorial Statue in place by Veterans Day this year as we had planned," said Phelan.

"The Committee has worked very hard to make sure that this project has remained a priority and I am dedicated to helping raise the remainder of the funds necessary to complete this project as a component of the Merrymount Park Renovation Project."

The members of the committee include: Leonard Morris, John Donelin, Peter Gacicia, John "Butch" Mahoney, Linda Montillio, Herb Skellet, Liz Fitzpatrick and Ronald Donovan.

Houghs Neck Marshes Topic Of Meeting Oct. 28

An ad hoc group of Hough's Neck residents that has been fighting to restore the local salt marsh plans to discuss its progress at a fall meeting with city, state and federal officials.

The meeting will take place Monday, Oct. 28, at 7 p.m. in the St. Thomas

The 14-foot statue features not only members of the Army, Navy and Marines but a woman representing all the women who served during the war.

All engraved bricks and stones purchased will be located at Merrymount Park, surrounding the statue as originally planned. Bricks and stones are still available at $50 and $250 respectively.

The money raised through their sale is the main source of funding for the project.

Those interested in purchasing a brick or a stone, contact the Mayor's Office at 617-376-1990.

Quincy To Have New Police Chief By Oct. 31

Quincy will have a new police chief by the end of the month.

Mayor William Phelan said Tuesday that he has received from Civil Service and extension until Oct. 31 of the list of those eligible to succeed Thomas Frane, who retired in July.

"It's a big decision," said Phelan. "It will impact the city for years to come."

There are three names on the list of eligibles — acting Chief William F. Falco, Capt. Robert L. Crowley and Capt. James E. McNeil.

Crowley scored a 90 on his Civil Service test. Falco an 87 and McNeil an 86.

The Mayor can choose any one of the three but if it is not Crowley, the top man on the list, he must explain his decision in writing.

The former Chief Frane retired after undergoing heart surgery in January, 2000.

Red Cross Holiday Stocking Program

The American Red Cross is planning its annual Holiday Stocking Program to help disadvantaged children in the community.

The program is focused on children age 1 to 12. The public is asked to fill the stockings with appropriate gifts, indicate the age of the child the gifts are for and deliver them to the Red Cross office, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The Red Cross has lists of suggested items for different age groups and the plastic mesh stockings available.

The stockings need to be returned to the Red Cross by Dec. 6.

For more information call the Red Cross at 617-770-2600.

New 'Purple Pages' Ready For Printing

The Mayor's Office of Constituent Services announces the fourth edition of the "Purple Pages," a guide to Quincy's activities in Quincy, will be available this fall for all children.

Over 7,000 copies of the purple booklet are distributed to each elementary and middle school in Quincy, as well as to the libraries, community centers and City Hall.

First conceived by the Commission on the Family more than five years ago, the last edition listed 70 different community groups that educate and entertain children.

"We hope to add new listings this year," said Tom Fabrizio, Director of the Office of Constituent Services. "This is a wonderful resource for families, schools and newcomers to Quincy."

All individuals, non-profit groups and businesses that would like to be listed in the Purple Pages are invited to call the office at 617-376-1500.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Oct. 25 1929, during the Teapot Dome scandal, Albert B. Fall, who served as secretary of the interior in President Warren G. Harding's cabinet, is found guilty of accepting a bribe while in office. Fall was the first individual to be convicted of a crime committed while a presidential cabinet member.

• On Oct. 27, 1932, poet Sylvia Plath is born in Boston. "The Bell Jar," a semi-autobiographical account, was published in early 1963. With sick children, frozen pipes and a severe case of depression, Plath took her own life in February 1963 at age 30.

• On Oct. 21, 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signs an executive order transferring the brilliant rocket designer Wernher von Braun and his team from the U.S. Army to the newly created NASA. Von Braun was the mastermind of the U.S. space program.

• On Oct. 22, 1962, the Cuban Missile Crisis begins when, in a televised speech of extraordinary gravity, President John F. Kennedy announces that U.S. spy planes have discovered Soviet missile bases in Cuba.

• On Oct. 26, 1965, the Queen of England awards the Beatles the prestigious MBE (Member of the Order of the British Empire) at Buckingham Palace. John Lennon famously commented to a newspaper reporter, "We're more popular than Jesus Christ right now."

• On Oct. 23, 1985, a suicide bomber drives a truck packed with explosives into the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut, Lebanon, killing 241 U.S. military personnel.

• On Oct. 24, 1997, Circuit Court Judge Benjamin Kendrick announces that he will dismiss the sexual assault case filed against sportscaster Marv Albert by 42-year-old Vanessa Perhach if Albert agrees to get counseling and stays out of trouble for a year.

4-Year Terms: Still A Bad Idea

One of the worst ideas that gets resurrected every now and then is four-year terms for the mayor and city councillors.

It was recently dug up again in a local newspaper column. (Not here.) The column trumpeted for four-year terms for the mayor but not for the city councillors.

But it gave former Mayor Frank McCauley, now a city councillor, who has proposed four-year terms, the opportunity to give the matter another nudge.

The writer of the column argues: mayors, especially new mayors -- need four years -- not two to do their job and not get bogged down so quickly in campaigning for re-election.

And that two-year terms don't really make a mayor more accountable.

He is entitled to his opinion. As is McCauley. And, so are we.

"It just makes so much sense to have a four-year term for mayor," McCauley is quoted. "New mayors need at least a year to figure out how to do the job. It's not just enough time to get a program through."

And adds:

"For the same reasons it makes sense for the mayors, it makes sense for councillors."

McCauley who has made three unsuccessful attempts to get the terms extended noted two years ago when the last one got shot down:

"The trouble with two-year terms is that you get elected and before you know, it's election time again."

Well, that might be an inconvenience to incumbents. But not to voters who like them to be accountable every two years -- not every four years.

"Four year terms," McCauley has said in the past, "would give the mayor and councillors more time to concentrate on their duties and not on running for re-election."

But, it would also give them more time for "coasting" in office between elections.

Four year terms are political comfort cushions.

The best argument against four-year terms is electing the wrong mayor. Or the wrong councillor -- especially the wrong ward councillor.

Having to wait four years to correct election mistakes is a long wait for voters. Too long.

A mayor and councillors doing their job right shouldn't have any fears about facing the voters every two years. And if they are doing their job right, they really shouldn't have to spend a lot of time -- and money -- campaigning for re-election.

Voters are intelligent. They know a good mayor or councillor when they see one.

A charter change would be required to implement four-year terms. Tinkering with the charter is serious business.

There has been no outcry from the people to start tinkering.

As Tim Cahill said two years ago voting against a McCauley introduced home-rule petition for four-year terms: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

"This system (two year terms) has worked fine . . . four years is a long time to wait if your (constituents') phone calls aren't getting returned."

Dan Raymond, now the City Council president, also voted against the petition for four-year terms, calling it "The Incumbent Protection Act."

RAYMOND

The late Paul Harold, who then was the council president, also opposed it as did Stephen Durkin.

Harold noted that with the exception of Weymouth, most towns converting to a city form of government decided on two-year terms for their mayor and councillors. Not four years.

If four year terms ever did become a reality here, there should be term limits to go along with them. Like two terms for mayors and councillors.

Frank McCauley, as we have said before, has served the city well as a school committeeman, councillor and mayor in a political career spanning three decades.

He has been a fiscal watchdog keeping a close eye on how the taxpayers' money is being spent. And, thankfully, he is still there doing the job and doing it well.

He has had some good ideas down through the years.

But four-year terms for mayors and councillors is not one of them.

McCauley is now giving up what has been pretty much a one-made crusade.

"I'm still in favor of four-year terms," he says. "But I'm not pushing for them. I've tried three times and haven't made it. Let someone else try."

And if Frank McCauley couldn't do it, it's doubtful there is someone else who could.

Time to put four-year terms to final rest. Period.

South Shore Tobacco Programs Fall To State Budget Cuts

Budget cuts by acting Gov. Jane Swift have decimated anti-smoking programs on the South Shore.

The programs eliminated include a treatment program for the Asian community, a cessation program providing treatment serving Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Norwood, and a youth tobacco prevention program.

"Hundreds of people have been left without critical treatment services," said Rivera and Spinks. "Bay State houses the largest tobacco treatment program on the South Shore."

"Last year, the agency provided free cessation services to over 3,500 individuals including services to the Asian community."

The Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program that was slashed from the budget has been recognized as one of the most effective in the nation, trimming cigarette consumption in the state by 36 per cent from 1992 to 2000.

The Ward 5 Community Association will award two $250 scholarships at its November meeting.

The meeting is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 21, at 7 p.m.

Students who apply should submit proof of Ward 5 residency and a letter from the post secondary school they are attending.

Letters should be addressed to Stephen Golden,

Ward 5 Scholarship, 32 Ridgeway St., Quincy, MA 02170.

The winner will be selected by random drawing the night of the meeting.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 POSTCARD view of the old Washington School in Quincy Point. Designed by young Quincy architect Albert H. Wright this building was erected in 1903 on a large lot diagonally across from the fire station on Washington Street. The red brick building was demolished in the late 1960s, and the site is now home to the Constanzo Pagnano Towers Senior Citizens housing complex. The site was originally used for one of Quincy's first public schools in the early part of the nineteenth century.

$363 For Food Per Person Yearly

By TOM HENSHAW

A Sales Management survey showed Quincy residents spent an average of $362 per person a year on food, far above the national average of $218 and the Massachusetts average of $268.

It was explained people in Quincy had higher incomes and therefore were able to spend more money on food. It was estimated 35 percent of Quincy incomes went into food; 26.6 percent elsewhere.

Guide To Senior Housing A Nugget Of Valuable Information

The Guide to Senior Housing in the City of Quincy, published recently by the newly organized Office of Constituent Services, is a most important and valuable compendium of information.

It describes in concise detail the going market rate for rentals in 18 senior housing buildings throughout the city.

Listed are the addresses and telephone numbers of each building, age restrictions, maximum income for eligibility, the number of units in each facility, the monthly rental charges and how to apply by application or appointment interviews.

The listing is diverse and explains what services might be available in each facility. Age restrictions begin at age 50 for some and up to age 62 and older for others. Categories are broken down into independently owned, and state and federally subsidized units.

Units under the aegis of the Quincy Housing Authority are covered in detail. The listing of QHA units is quite appropriate because the City of Quincy played a major role in supporting low-income affordable housing units dating back to 1946.

The Quincy Housing Authority was organized by a vote of the Quincy City Council in April of that year under the provisions of Chapter 121 of the Massachusetts General Laws. The QHA is a public corporate body, whose function is to administer local public housing programs. An Authority is not a city, state or federal department, but a subdivision of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

A vocal group of young World War II veterans petitioned Mayor Charles Ross and the city council to address the great need for low-income affordable housing for returning veterans and their families. During the war years the emphasis was on defense and little or no building of domestic housing was done.

A city-wide survey of veterans housing needs was undertaken and resulted in the approval and organization of the Quincy Housing Authority. Quonset huts located on Pond Street and Cleverly Court were then being used for government personnel engaged in defense installations such as Fore River and Hingham shipyards. These units were later transferred to the Quincy Housing Authority as a starter.

The QHA later proceeded to approve construction of the Snug Harbor housing units for veterans in Germantown.

The need for affordable housing in Quincy still exists. The Guide to Senior Housing in Quincy serves as a great source of information for adults and particularly seniors and baby boomers who are interested in knowing what senior housing does exist.

Congratulations to Mayor William Phelan and the officials of the Office of Constituent Services: Thomas Fabrizio, director; Linda Stice, director of the Family Commission; John Chen, Asian coordinator; and Jonathan Yip, affirmative action director for researching, compiling and producing this four-page nugget of information. It should become the number one source of ready information about housing facilities in Quincy. John Noonan, Chairman Quincy Council on Aging

Don't Deny Quincy College Students

The media has drawn up a battleground of sparks and angry words about the rise in rent for Quincy College.

I now turn to the student body, for which without students, there is no Quincy College. This is the most diversified student body in any college I have attended. Asians, Haitians, Muslims, handicapped, Hindus, all studying side by side.

Most of them working night or day jobs to help pay for their college education. A mother of five helps a confused classmate. A mother with a baby carriage wheels into the elevator. How is a drastic raise in rent going to affect this student body? Why a raise in tuition, of course.

The tuition has just been raised this fall. Please, we implore you, don't deny the students the right to pursue, many with great sacrifice, their long sought after goal — a college education.

Nancy's Apple Cobbler

With so many people picking apples this past month, they are so prevalent that I have been preparing them all sorts of ways from apple pie, apple crisp to apple cobbler.

The cobbler is a recipe given to me by our daughter Nancy who brought it one day as her contribution to a family dinner. I spotted a similar recipe in the paper also. It's so simple that I have been making that instead of pie.

Nancy's Apple Cobbler

For the topping

- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter (softened)
- 1 egg slightly beaten

For the filling

- 5 cups peeled sliced apples
- 3/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour (1 use tapioca)
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 tablespoon soft butter (I used margarine)

Mix all the filling ingredients together except the butter. Place in a 9 by 9 inch pan, add 1/4 cup water and dot with butter.

Mix all the topping ingredients together and beat until smooth. Drop the batter in 9 portions evenly over the apple mix. Bake in a 375 degrees oven for 35-40 minutes. Serve with ice cream or cream. (the batter will resemble pancake mixture)

PAGANO TOWERS RESIDENTS recently held a dinner to show their appreciation to members of Engine 3 at the Quincy Point fire station. They presented gifts for the station, including a microwave oven. Seated are firefighters Steve Golden, Paul Moody and Lt. Gary Patten. Standing are Marion Cross, Doris Christie, Camille Fischer, Diane Kane, Agnes Frazer, Mary O'Neil, Louise Bornstein, Macilla Cellini, Alice McCarthy, Craig Jackson, Mary Francis, Scott Jackson and Eunice Ford, who organized the event. Office Of Constituent Services Publishes Senior Housing Guide

The city of Quincy's newest department, the Mayor's Office of Constituent Services, has produced a publication to help senior citizens who are interested in senior housing.

The "Guide To Senior Housing in the City of Quincy" lists each of the 18 apartment buildings for seniors in the city.

"We receive many calls from senior citizens who have questions about senior housing, but who don't know where to start with the whole application process," said Thomas Fabrizio, director of the Office of Constituent Services.

"The chart we have put together puts all of the useful information in one place. It lists market-rate buildings as well as those that have income restrictions.

"We've even noted how many units are in each of the buildings; some folks do not want to live in very large developments," Fabrizio said. "Others just want to know how rents are determined and how to get an application. We think we've condensed everything into one easy-to-read chart."

Copies of the new guide can be obtained by calling the Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500. Office staff are available to help all Quincy residents with questions about city departments, services around the city, landlord and tenant issues, and where to go for help.

Services are available in Cantonese and Vietnamese as well.

Germantown Center Accepting Holiday Assistance Applications

The Germantown Neighborhood Center will start accepting applications from those who need assistance at Thanksgiving and Christmas on Monday, Oct. 28 from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The Center will again share information with food pantries and agencies in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth that assist families for the holidays. Applicants should have information about any other agency that aids them during the holidays.

Project S.A.F.E. Reaches 160 Quincy Homes

Smoke Detectors Installed, Batteries Replaced

Smoke detectors were installed or batteries replaced by Project S.A.F.E. in 160 homes of Quincy seniors during Senior Serve Day recently.

"Every ward in Quincy was visited by service teams between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.," said Kathy Prince, director of Elder Services at Beechwood on the Bay.

"Twenty-two teams, comprised of Quincy firefighters (on and off duty) and Quincy Rotary volunteers, visited Quincy neighborhoods throughout the city."

Elected officials also were invited to help out and City Councillor Dan Raymond of Ward 2, Kevin Coughlin of Ward 3, Doug Gutro of Ward 5 and Joe Newton of Ward 6 responded.

"Twenty-eight Quincy Rotarians volunteered for the day, teaming up with on and off duty firefighters, 12 new firefighters (recent academy graduates) and councilmen," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

"This is the sixth consecutive year of this unique community partnership. It provides and essential service at no cost to senior recipients or to the city."

"Since we launched this initiative, we have installed more than 5,000 smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy seniors."

"The National Fire Protection Association has provided wonderful guidance through the energies of Sharon Gamache, executive director of the Center for High Risk Outreach."

"Additionally, NFPA has provided grant awards for detectors and community outreach. The Quincy Rotary

FALL CAR CARE

Good Visibility Requires

Periodic Vehicle Maintenance

Driving safely requires good visibility and a vehicle with good visibility requires regular maintenance, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Visibility is a critical component of driving safely because it directly affects the driver's ability to anticipate and respond to the driving environment," said Alfred Ruggiero, AAA manager of Approved Auto Repair.

During AAA Car Care Month in October, AAA is urging motorists to consider visibility when maintenance is performed on their vehicle. Items that are necessary for good visibility are:

- Clear, clean windows unobstructed by decals, dark window tinting or objects that interfere with the driver's view of the road.
- Windshield wipers changed twice per year will ensure the rubber remains soft enough to efficiently remove water, snow and road grime from the glass surface.
- Vehicle lights, including headlights, brake lights, turn signals, parking lights, emergency flashers and the center, high-mounted brake light should all be inspected regularly and replaced immediately if needed. Lights can also become dirty which limits their brightness. They should be cleaned regularly.

(NAPS) — Do you know the difference among each type of fuel additive on the market today? Tackling everything from condensation to clogged fuel injectors, dirty intake valves and carburetors, there are several to choose from. Deciding which product will benefit your vehicle, as well as knowing when to use it, can be a daunting task.

Richard Courtney, director of Prestone Products Research & Development and Technical Services, suggests you pay attention to what type of problems your fuel system is having when deciding which additive to use.

For example, Prestone Gas Treatment is a multipurpose fuel additive that can be used regularly by drivers who want to maintain vehicle performance, whereas Prestone Super Concentrated Fuel Injector Cleaner should be used if your fuel injectors are clogged and you're experiencing performance or acceleration loss. If you want to clean the entire fuel system, consider adding a super concentrated cleaner like Prestone Fuel System Cleaner every 4,000 miles.

Complaining of knocks and pings or poor acceleration? Courtney recommends an octane booster, such as Prestone 0 to 60 Booster. It's a premium 2-in-1 additive designed to raise the octane of regular unleaded gasoline by up to 10 points (1 point is equal to 0.1 octane number). It helps restore lost power and improve the overall performance of the fuel system by cleaning fouled injectors and dirty carburetors.

Certain times of the year can also pose different problems to a vehicle's fuel system. If necessary, purchase a seasonal fuel additive. Winter, with its low temperatures, leaves vehicles susceptible to gas line freeze. An additive such as Prestone Cold Start Fuel System Antifreeze & Cleaner is specially designed to prevent that problem.

But if you are also interested in keeping the fuel system clean, a product like Prestone Winter Fuel System Cleaner with Cold Start Technology can do double duty, cleaning fuel injectors, intake valves and carburetors in one tank, in addition to fighting gas line freeze.

"It's important to remember that using a fuel additive will not prolong the time between regular maintenance or serve as a substitute," Courtney said. "However, for just a few dollars, adding a fuel additive for preventative maintenance is well worth the investment."

AAA's Experts Advice For Car Care Month

AAA's auto repair experts are recommending that motorists self-evaluate the fuel efficiency of their vehicles just prior to having their annual maintenance performed by qualified service technicians during Car Care Month in October.

"Knowing whether or not your vehicle is achieving full fuel economy will help your technician determine if a maintenance issue might be costing you extra money at the gas pump," said John Paul, AAA Southern New England's Car Doctor.

Motorists can find out the average estimated fuel economy for most vehicles by visiting the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency web site (www.fueleconomy.gov). The site lists the estimated city and highway driving fuel economy ratings for all makes and models of vehicles sold in the United States since 1985.

Once the fuel economy rating for a vehicle is determined, motorists can easily evaluate the actual fuel economy of their vehicles by performing the following calculation:

Begin by purchasing a full tank of gasoline and writing down the exact number of gallons purchased and the vehicle odometer reading. Do this several more times and then total the amount of fuel purchased and the number of miles driven. Divide the total miles driven by the total number of gallons to estimate the fuel economy of your vehicle.

"If the fuel economy of your vehicle varies from the EPA estimated rating by more than five miles per gallon, a maintenance issue could be a partial cause," Paul said.

Some of the common maintenance issues that ran for cars and trucks of fuel efficiency are dirty air filters and under-inflated tires.

"Other contributing factors to reduced gas mileage could include personal driving habits, the addition of optional equipment, such as roof top carriers not on the vehicle when originally manufactured, or the constant use of air-conditioning," Paul said.

Personal driving habits that waste gasoline are excessive idling, driving faster than posted speed limits, rapid acceleration and abrupt braking.

"Knowing whether or not your vehicle is achieving its full fuel-economy potential is important in helping service technicians understand the condition of a vehicle and accurately diagnosing solutions to potential problems," Paul said.

Fundraiser Nov. 15 For Paralyzed 14-Year Old

Jack Comes Home, But Medical Expenses Mount

Jack Shadduck, the 14-year-old son of a Quincy businessman, has finally made it home after five months in the hospital, to be greeted by a swarm of well-wishers — and a life-saving medical bill of at least a half million dollars.

Jack, who lives in Braintree, was stricken last May with a rare and paralyzing infection which was quickly turned into transverse myelitis, an equally rare inflammation of the spinal column induced by his immune system's reaction to the infection.

Paralyzed within hours, he spent the next five months in Boston hospitals, most recently at Franciscan Children's Hospital in Brighton, where he was able to regain some feeling in his fingers. Still paralyzed from the neck down, he can breathe with the use of a ventilator for 11 hours.

Jack's medical care is expected to cost more than $500,000 for the first year alone, much of it not covered by insurance.

For this reason, the Friends of the Shadducks have scheduled a fundraising event for Friday, Nov. 15, at the Quincy Marriott, a cocktail party featuring a live band, a disc jockey, a live and silent auction, and a raffle with a one-week stay in St. Martin as a first prize. Guests will include past and current Boston sports fig-

FAMILY FRIEND Mary Shea Kelly of the Friends of the Shadduck Committee greets Jack Shadduck, 14, paralyzed by a rare infection of the spinal column, on his return to his Braintree home after five months in the hospital.

The Friends, who have already raised some $100,000, are seeking individuals and local businesses who may wish to donate items for the live and silent auction, as well as people to purchase tickets to the event at the Marriott and/or raffle tickets.

Jack Shadduck is the son of Joseph and Maria Shadduck of Hollingsworth Avenue, Braintree. His grandfather is John Gilleather, a retired Quincy police officer. His father is the owner of Shadduck Financial Group on McGrath Highway, Quincy, and a member of the Quincy Rotary Club.

For more information on the Shadducks and the event at the Marriott, contact committee member Daniel J. Flynn III at 617-479-9000.

JACK SHADDUCK is among friends and classmates as they celebrate his homecoming after five months in the hospital for treatment of a rare spinal infection that left him paralyzed.

Home Decorating Tip

When painting a room in a house, avoid painting in the direct sunlight and use an ultraviolet-resistant painter's tape.

Paint the wet and south sides in the morning, and the east and north sides in the afternoon. This will make the painting process more comfortable and prevent the paint from drying too quickly.

HOW DO YOU RATE?

When you shop for a mortgage, realize that the APR (Annual Percentage Rate) is different from the quoted rate. The APR required by truth-in-lending laws demands that the lender include "points" (one point is equal to one percent of the loan) and other costs when determining the rate. On the other hand, the interest rate that is usually quoted on mortgages is the rate for just the interest itself, without additional monies being figured in. Both figures, however, are useful. While the APR tells you the true rate you will pay, based on most costs, the quoted rate gives you the interest rate used to determine your monthly payments. The APR can be useful when comparing different types of mortgages.

This week's column describes the difference between the APR and the quoted rate. At CENTRAL REAL ESTATE, we work in the best interest of our clients by providing them with complete information. When we locate a home, we provide you with guidance on mortgage lenders. Are you renting? With interest rates at their lowest in forty years, you may be able to afford your first home. To experience our award-winning service, call us at (617) 328-1312, or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: The more points you are willing to pay, the lower you can expect the interest rate to be.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Achieving Bathroom Bliss

(NAPS) — Is your bathroom a relaxing haven or a source of anxiety? If you're like millions of people with an overflow of products, unmatched accessories and outdated decor in your bathroom, you're probably ready to update the look.

But redecorating doesn't have to break the bank.
Accessorizing with the latest design innovations and products that combine style with practicality simply requires a little ingenuity. Consider these hints to achieve bathroom bliss that even the "design challenged" can follow:

Organize

It goes without saying that removing excess clutter is the first step to redecorating your bathroom, but let's be real — families don't live in decorating magazine's version of a powder room.

So, what can you do? First, store only the most frequently used items in your bathroom.
Use drawer dividers to separate items among your family and place translucent containers on the countertop for easy access.

Hidden Beauty

Select toiletries and cosmetics that will look beautiful in your bathroom and are easily stored. Two-in-one beauty products such as a shampoo with conditioner and a shave gel with moistur-izer can save space and time.

An attractive shower caddy can hold all of your products together neatly in the bath; consider a hanging unit in which bath gel, shampoo and conditioner are dispensed from clear tubes, eliminating bottle clutter.

Some beauty products even come with their own storage: the new Gillette for Women Crystal Clear Venus razor features a shower compact for conveniently storing extra blades, while the translucent handle complements virtually any bathroom décor.

Accessorize

Consider fresh paint in a vibrant color or an oversized mirror; both are less expensive than adding new tile to the wall but can spruce up your décor. Updating bathroom faucets and door and cabinet handles also can dramatically change the look of your bathroom.

Finally, consider these space savers: a faucet with a built in soap dispenser; a hanging toothbrush holder; a built-in shelf in your shower or bath; and a multi-pronged heated towel rack that not only swings out to hold several towels at once, but dries them quickly. If you have a small vanity, consider a wall-mounted shelf to hold scented candles, soaps and fresh flowers.

Quincy Bedevils Randolph, 32-6

By CHRIS POISSON
For a change, the Quincy High School football team bedeviled Randolph last Friday night.

The Presidents (3-2) routed their neighboring nemesis, 32-6—finally beating the Blue Devils (1-4) for the first time in four years. And in head coach Bob Noble's tenure, Randolph has been his personal heart-breaker.

In his first year in 1999, Quincy held a 21-6 lead and appeared it was going to snap an 11-game slide before crumbling and losing, 23-21, on a field goal with five seconds left.

In 2000, Quincy dominated in all facets of the game, except special teams, as it gave up two kickoff returns for touchdowns in a 19-14 loss. Last season, Quincy hit rock-bottom against Randolph with a 14-14 tie.

"Randolph is a team that had beaten us the last four years," Noble said. "One of our preseason goals was to beat this team. We accomplished that. If I had to sum it up, we were pretty efficient with what we had to do."

With four of the first five games on the road, Quincy returns home Saturday afternoon at 1:30 to face Nauset (2-3), which is coming off a 33-6 loss to Plymouth North. It will host Sandwich and Dennis-Yarmouth the following weeks before traveling to Plymouth North for a game that could decide the Atlantic Coast League championship, if all goes well.

And Goes, as in senior kicker Thiago Goes, went well in the Randolph game. Goes and the defense consistently pinned Randolph deep in its own territory, while Quincy's average starting field position began near midfield.

"Goes is a tremendous weapon," Noble said. "And our defense played extremely well. We forced Randolph to play deep in their own territory for a majority of the game. We had great field position. When we had opportunities to score, we scored."

In the first quarter, senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell connected with senior wide receiver and quad-captain Shawn Munchbach for a 39-yard pass down to the Randolph 4-yard line. On the next play, senior quad-captain Mike Cox rumbled into the end zone for a 7-0 lead after Goes' extra point.

Still in the first, Randolph punted deep in its end and junior Roger Palermo returned the ball 38 yards, setting up junior tailback J.J. Niamkey's (13 carries, 79 yards) 6-yard TD run for a 13-0 lead. The extra point was blocked.

Again Randolph punted deep in its end and Palermo returned it 28 yards to the 12. Quincy's offense stalled, but it faked the field goal attempt and holder and backup quarterback Truc Troung fired a 12-yard TD pass to a wide-open Cox for a 19-0 lead. Randolph blocked the extra point and headed the other way for 2 points before Goes chased the runner from behind at the 50.

"That was the real turning point in the game," Noble said. "Instead of getting a field goal or maybe no points, we got a touchdown to put us up 19-0. It was big momentum boost for us."

Late in the half, Quincy partially blocked a Randolph punt and took over at the Randolph 25. It capitalized on senior wing back and quad-captain Matt Ramponi's 3-yard plunge for a 25-0 lead at the break.

With about five minutes left in the third, O'Connell fired a 23-yard TD pass to Munchbach for a 32-0 advantage. O'Connell finished the day by completing 5 of 6 passes for 93 yards and the one touchdown.

"I think I just jinxed him," said Noble, after noting O'Connell hasn't thrown an interception this season. "We need that type of play from him. It just makes you a better football team being able to pass the ball as well as running it."

Randolph scored its touchdown in the fourth quarter against Quincy's backups, which played the final quarter and a half. With the huge lead, Noble was able to get all 29 seniors and the rest of the reserves into the game.

"It's nice to see a lot of the guys, who work extremely hard in practice, get into the game and get significant playing time," Noble said.

"To this point of the season, it has been a success," he added. "But we're hardly done yet. We still have more goals we're working at."

Munroe MacLean Number Retirement Sunday

The Quincy High School Alumni Benefit Fund will retire football jersey No. 1 in honor of the late Munroe "Mac" MacLean Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St.

A former three-sport standout at Quincy High School (class of 1926) in football, basketball and track, MacLean also went on to become a successful head coach in those three sports at his alma mater.

MacLean will be just the second person to have his number retired, joining Sullivan whose No. 15 was honored in October 2000.

The event will begin at 1 p.m. with a cocktail hour and end at 5 p.m. Tickets cost $20 per person, which includes dinner.

For tickets and more information, call Ron Ivil at 781-337-0062 or Vin Moscardelli at 617-328-1312.

Other finishers were Katelyn Girard (24:05), Jenn Kane (26:25), Danielle Larose (26:30), Sheila Lynch (27:17) and Valerie Ayer (27:33).

Brenna O'Brien (fourth, 22:13), Lauren Ready (fifth, 22:16), Lily Luo (sixth, 22:16), Sheila Jafarzadeh (seventh, 22:20), Lisa Rubino (ninth, 23:26) and Adrienne Doucette (10th, 23:27).

Freshman Kayla Martin took second and junior Evan Allen third, both in 20:44, to lead the Red Raiders (2-5) on the 2.85-mile course.

North Quincy also had six other girls crack the top 10:

Sacred Heart Basketball Registration Saturday

Sacred Heart North Quincy Basketball will hold registration Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Sacred Heart Parish auditorium.

The program is open to all boys and girls ages 5-18 (grades K-12) from the Quincy area.

Children (grades K-2) will play one hour a week of fun-oriented instructional basketball Saturdays, beginning early December at the North Quincy High School gym from noon to 2:30 p.m.

Children (grades 3-12) will practice once a week on either Thursday or Friday night and will play a schedule of games on Saturday afternoons.

Fee is $30 for grades K-2 and $60 for grades 3-12.

Travel teams will be selected from certain age groups and this will involve an additional fee. No child will be turned away for financial reasons.

For more information call program director Mark Jaehnig at 617-472-3311.

Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth In Fall Championship Sunday

The Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth team will be playing the fall championship game this Sunday at noon at Merrymount Field against either Wareham or Rockland.

After finishing the regular season with 8-1 record behind the pitching of Ryan Conley (4-0), Jeff Tam (2-1) and Steve Reardon (2-0, save), Wollaston blanked Marshfield, 8-0, Sunday in the semi-finals.

Conley tossed the three-hit shutout with seven strikeouts and no walks. Rich Zapata, Brendan McDonald, Kris Kirshner, Mike McLaughlin and Tim powered the offense. Catcher Andy McAllister, second baseman Jason Fidalgo and shortstop Reardon played well defensively.

COOL IT!

More than half of engine failures are attributable to the cooling system, which only works well when it's clean. Antifreeze has no cleaning effect, and most people work to overcome the additive package in antifreeze by adding mineral-laden tap water to the system. Deposits inside the cooling system can significantly reduce its ability to cool visual engine components. Thus, it's a good idea to have your vehicle's cooling system inspected twice yearly. This should include a radiator pressure test, a thermostat check, pressure test to identify external leaks; belt and hose inspection; a check of system pH and electrolysis; system power flush and refill; engine fan test; and a check of clamps, connectors, and radiator mounts. Regularly scheduled maintenance can greatly extend the life of your car, especially important if you are considering buying your car at the end of its lease. ATLEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we want you to be well informed about every system of your car. Our friendly, ASE Certified professional service staff, here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Give us a try. We'll earn your trust! Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: While cooling system service is most frequent on vehicles with more than 50,000 miles, the mileage on a vehicle is not as big a factor as the maintenance of the cooling system.

City Crowns Tennis Champs

The winners of the premiere events in the recent 32nd annual Quincy Recreation Department City Tennis Championships are Jirawat Anektanasap in the Men's Singles and Phoebe Chan in the Women's Singles.

The tournament crowns the best Quincy resident champions in 12 events for young and old. Quincy Municipal Credit Union sponsored the event for the sixth year.

Recreation Leader Barry Welch praised the quality of play in this year's event, which was conducted under the watchful eye of John Franceschini, who has been at the helm for over 20 years. Franceschini was assisted by Michelle Hanley of the recreation staff.

"This tournament has over 100 matches and is played over 14 days on outside municipal courts at Russell Park, and the key to its success is the professional manner and enthusiasm shown by the two directors," Welch said.

"I am also pleased that the Quincy Municipal Credit Union was our sponsor for the sixth year. Their commitment to our community in general and the tournament in particular provides countless hours of worthwhile recreational activity. The participants are also to be congratulated in their fine play and great sportsmanship."

The championship matches were all hard fought, well played and in most cases could have crowned the finalists as champions if not for a few great shots.

In Men's Singles, Anektanasap defeated Frank Nguyen, a former champion, 6-4, 6-3, and was awarded the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl.

In Men's 35 and Over, Joe Ryan, who holds more championships than any other Quincy resident, knocked off Job Chan, 6-4, 6-4. In Men's 50 and Over, Ryan topped Lenny Ciavarrro, a past champion, 6-4, 6-2, for his third straight title.

VICTORIA WONG holds her award for winning the Girls 16 and Under event.

In Mixed Doubles, the high school duo of Anektanasap and Lorena Aslanai defeated the husband-and-wife team of Job and Phoebe Chan, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, for the William I. Ryan Bowl.

In Under 16, Victoria Wong won her first city championship in the girl's division, while Michael Chan ousted Nathan McGaffin, 6-0, 6-1, in the Under 16 boy's division.

In Women's 35 and Over, Phoebe Chan defeated Janet Coughlin in two sets.

In Women's Doubles, Garl MacDonald and Aileen Eley knocked off Phoebe Chan and Wong, 7-6, 6-0.

In Men's Doubles, Anektanasap and Chan topped Ciavarrro and Bruce Riddick, 6-3, 6-4, for the Henry "The Master" McAuliffe Bowl. Ciavarrro and Riddick had played with McAuliffe for many years.

In the longest match of the tourney, Geoffrey Meade of the recreation staff outlasted his dad, Rich, Director of Planning and Development, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, to retain his City Employee's championship.

In Men's B, Job Chan defeated a strong challenger in Liam McAuliffe, 6-2, 6-2.

Red Raiders Edge Taunton, 13-12

By CHRIS POISSON
Perhaps, the North Quincy High School football team is turning the corner in the 2002 season.

Coming off a well-played, one-point loss to a strong Barnstable team, the Red Raiders edged Taunton, 13-12, last Friday night to snap their four-games losing streak.

"It was an ugly, messy game with both teams slogging it out," said head coach Tony Green. "It's nice for us to get the win, regardless of how we got it."

"It's been two-fold," he added about the team's turnaround after back-to-back blowout losses to Cohasset and Falmouth. "We're getting kids back from injuries and they're starting to learn how to play our defense."

Tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 North Quincy (2-4) hosts Plymouth South, which fell to Bridgewater-Raynham, 27-14, last Saturday afternoon. "Plymouth South doesn't have a whole lot of wins, but there is some talent and they're dangerous," Green said.

In the Taunton game, both defenses turned in stellar performances as both offenses struggled to put points on the board thanks to untimely turnovers.

North Quincy struck in the first quarter when senior tailback James Coughlin plunged in from 1 yard out for a 7-0 lead.

In the second quarter, the Tigers got on the board on quarterback Scott Pollard's 1-yard sneak, but trailed, 7-6, when they missed the 2-point conversion. North Quincy committed a penalty on fourth down to keep Taunton's drive alive.

Late in the half, senior strong safety Rob Mooney intercepted a pass in the end zone to preserve North Quincy's 1-point lead at halftime.

"Both defenses dominated," Greensaid. "They put nine or 10 in the box and our offense couldn't get on track. We didn't have time to throw because they were bringing so many guys."

On the opening possession of the second half, the Red Raiders' passing game came up big when senior quarterback and quad-captain Kevin Holleran found senior tailback Chris Dolbear (142 rushing yards) for a 67-yard TD pass for a 13-6 lead. The extra point was blocked.

"We knew Dolbear would be open," Green said. "We made an adjustment at halftime and snuck in a touchdown to Dolbear. After that, they took that away."

After a bad Taunton punt, North Quincy began its next series at the Taunton 21-yard line but couldn't take advantage when the Tigers picked off a Holleran pass and headed the other way for the touchdown.

Holleran, though, never gave up on the play and caught the Taunton defensive player at the North Quincy 12. Andon Taunton's first play of scrimmage it fumbled the ball.

"Kevin Holleran threw an interception and the kid had nothing but green grass and white sidelines in front of him," Green said. "He ran about 70 yards and caught him from behind. That shows the toughness of a typical North Quincy kid."

With under two minutes left in the game, Pollard fired a 21-yard TD pass to Justin Paull to pull within one at 13-12. On the go-ahead 2-point conversion attempt, senior linebacker and quad-captain Matt Francis picked off Pollard's pass.

Taunton did get the ball back with about minute left after North Quincy went three-and-out, but Mooney came up with his second interception of the game to seal the victory.

"It was a great team effort on the defensive side," Green said. "We're finally learning how to play it and we almost have it perfect."

Senior defensive end Kosta Kakpakidis turned in a monster game with 17 tackles and two sacks. Dolbear, who recently moved to safety, registered 12 tackles and Francis finished with 14.

Granite Go For Title Saturday

In only four years, the Quincy Granite has a chance to elevate from expansion team to Eastern Football League champions.

Saturday night at 7, the Granite will duke it out with the 11-time defending EFL champion Shamrocks at Kelleher Field in Marlboro — with the league championship on the line.

Quincy (9-3), upset in the semi-finals last year, reached the Super Bowl by ousting undefeated Charlestown in the quarterfinal and knocking out Middleboro in the semi-final.

Marlboro cruised past Rhode Island and Sunday night it topped Clinton, 35-21.

The teams split the regular season series, 1-1. In the first meeting at Veterans Memorial Stadium Quincy rallied from a 14-3 halftime deficit for a 27-22 victory.

Quarterback Liam Higgins fired two touchdown passes to wideout Jeff Lang, including a 61-yarder late in the game for the game-winner.

Quincy's defense picked off two Ralph Barone passes, both by safety John Skabeikis.

In the second meeting in Marlboro, the Shamrocks brought many former players out of retirement and cruised to a 44-15 victory.

Veteran quarterback Dave

Palazzi returned to the field too many costly turnovers and penalties. They scored on Lang's 54-yard TD reception from Higgins and Derrick Wright's 80-yard kickoff return.

The Granite was never in the game as they committed too many costly turnovers and penalties. They scored on Lang's 54-yard TD reception from Higgins and Derrick Wright's 80-yard kickoff return.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

THE AMERICAN LIVER FOUNDATION will honor Boston Red Sox great Dwight "Dewey" Evans (far left) and Quincy's George Regan (far right), founder and president of Regan Communications Group at an All-Star Tribute Dinner Oct. 30 at the 4.06 Club in Fenway Park. The event will include a live auction emceed by WBZ-TV Sports Reporter/Anchor Bob Lobel. With them are Judy Kaplin Elkin, executive director of the Liver Foundation and Dr. Roger Jenkins, chief of Hepato Biliary Surgery at the Lahey Clinic, who recently led Evans and Regan through a tour of the Burlington-based Lahey Clinic. The tribute, established in 1989, raises funds for the Foundation's mission of research, education and advocacy.

'Fight Cellulite' Seminar Today

The Milton Hospital Community Education Department is offering a lecture entitled "How To Fight Cellulite" today (Thursday) at 9:30 a.m. in the hospital's conference room, 92 Highland Ave.

The lecture will be presented by Rita La Rosa-Loud, associate fitness research director at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy.

The free seminar will detail a strength training program designed to lessen the appearance of cellulite, a kind of fat tissue in the subcutaneous layer of skin often found in women.

The program is based on extensive research conducted from "Workout for Cellulite Reduction," a series of cellulite studies in conjunction with the South Shore YMCA and Nautilus.

To register, call the Milton Hospital Community Education Department at 617-696-8810.

First Seniority Info Session At Harvard Vanguard

Harvard Pilgrim Health Care will host a "First Seniority" information session today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, 1250 Hancock St., S. Tower.

The session will address First Seniority, a Medicare+Choice plan for Medicare beneficiaries.

Online Database Of Cancer Support Services Available To South Shore Residents

Cancer patients and their families on the South Shore can now access a comprehensive, updated online database of cancer support services.

Hundreds of local, regional and national cancer care organizations can be found in the Patient Resource Directory of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology P.C.'s web site (www.chomed.com).

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology (CHO), based in Quincy, is the largest private practice cancer care network in New England. CHO has developed the site to help patients take an active role in their medical treatment.

"People are discovering that they can empower themselves by learning more about their disease and knowing what support services are available to them," said Walt Kagan, M.D., Ph.D., president CHO.

Services range from American Cancer Society chapters and Visiting Nurse Associations to such personal care services as stores that specialize in wigs or adaptive clothing.

CHO's web site also provides information on screening, early detection of cancer and different treatment options. Educational and informative material is also available to health care professionals as well.

CHO has offices and clinical sites throughout Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. It was the first group practice in the state to develop treatment guidelines for specific cancers and the first group practice in the area to develop a computerized software program for chemotherapy ordering.

For more information call CHO's Quincy office at 617-479-3550.

Wollaston Dental Care Opens At 688 Hancock St.

Dr. Jennifer Lee announces she has accepting new patients at Wollaston Dental Care, 688 Hancock St.

Dr. Lee graduated from Tufts Dental College and worked as an associate dentist in Lynn and in New York City before opening this practice in Wollaston.

She studied biochemistry at Vassar College for four years before attending Tufts Dental College where she trained to become a general dentist. She has seven years dental experience.

For the safety of patients, Dr. Lee said all small instruments are heat sterilized between patients and all surfaces, including chairs and working surfaces, are wiped with antibacterial solutions between each patient.

All staff change gloves and wash hands with soap before treating each patient. She said all dental supplies which cannot be properly sterilized, such as patient napkins, cups, suction tips, are disposed of after each patient.

General safety features of the office include:

- Neat and orderly treatment rooms
- High quality dental equipment

- Exit signs visible from all areas in case of emergency

- Aprons are routinely used on all patients during x-ray taking for extra protection.

Dr. Lee said Wollaston Dental Care offers complete family dentistry for all ages. Children are provided oral health instructions, routine cleaning and fluoride application and care for baby teeth and adult teeth.

For adults, Dr. Lee offers gum treatments, crowns and bridges, root canals and cosmetic dentistry among other treatments which on elderly patients include partials and dentures.

The office is handicapped accessible with two handicapped accessible bathrooms. Hallways, doors and treatment rooms are can accommodate wheelchair patients comfortably. The receptionist countertop is low for convenient transactions for wheelchair patients.

A multi-lingual receptionist is available for non-native patients who speak Mandarin, Cantonese and Korean.

Wollaston Dental Care accepts most insurance and offers competitive prices, Dr. Lee said. Credit cards and personal checks are also accepted.

During her grand opening, Dr. Lee is offering a special: 10% off any one procedure of choice; or $39 for bite-wing, x-rays, cleaning and exam.

For more information or to contact Dr. Lee, call 617-984-5888. Saturday and evening appointments are available.

SOMETHING IN THE WATER?

The dental community has long embraced fluoride, a mineral that promotes the growth of strong teeth and prevents tooth decay. So, it comes as good news that almost two out of three Americans who drink public water are now getting fluoride from the tap. Since the early 1970s, when fluoridated public water became widely available, dental caries among school children have fallen by more than 60%. Although some of that reduction can be attributed to better brushing habits and fluoride toothpaste, much is due to the fluoride in drinking water. At the same time, bottled water consumption has risen to nearly 20 gallons per capita annually, but only a minority of brands put fluoride into their bottled water.

Are you getting enough fluoride? Good oral healthcare is important for your overall good health. When was the last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We make every effort to see you promptly and listen to your concerns and needs. Keeping you healthy and happy is our first concern. We will let you know about new procedures and technologies and what they can do for you. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The average American drinks 3.6 servings of tap water and 1.7 servings of bottled water daily.

COUNCIL HONORS -- Cindy and Charles Ryder were honored by the City Council Monday night as they prepare to retire after 26 years as owners of Ryder's Home Decor & More shop in downtown Quincy. A commendation was presented to them by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

Cindy, Charlie Ryder Honored By City Council

Councillor Joseph Finn presented a commendation to Charles & Cynthia Ryder of Ryder's Home Décor & More for their 26 years in business and contributions to Quincy Center as they are both retiring at the end of the month.

The commendation recognizes Ryder's as both a popular and highly respected business in Quincy Center and for their leadership and commitment to Downtown Quincy and the many charitable endeavors which they have so graciously supported over the years.

"Thank you for believing in downtown Quincy and dedicating your professional lives to our city," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro. "You have indeed left an indelible mark."

"Twenty-six years ago when we started our business there was no doubt in our minds that Quincy Center was the place we were going to do it," said Charles Ryder. "And we never had any regrets."

"Though we live in Hull we spend most of our waking hours here in Quincy so we kind of consider ourselves residents here too," said Ryder.

Quincy Center Business and Professional Association are hosting a farewell party Wednesday, Oct. 23 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Alba Bar & Grill, 1495 Hancock Street.

5 To Be Honored By Father Bill's Place For Food Fest Success

Father Bill's Place will honor five community members for the success of the eighth annual Food Fest & Auction which raised more than $300,000.

The five, to be honored at the annual meeting and recognition night Tuesday, Oct. 29, at Raffael's, One Monarch Drive, North Quincy, are:

Kevin O'Brien, Roche Brothers Supermarkets; Jean Roche, Raffael's Restaurant and Banquet Facilities; Uncle Sam Rounseville, Century 21 Abigail Adams; Ed Kane, Eat Well, Inc.; and Paul Harris, Boston Party Rental.

The $300,000 realized was essential to the operation of the shelter because of this year's reduction in state funding.

The annual meeting will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be at 6:30. Advance reservations are required.

For reservations call Janice at 617-376-2255.

Tickets are $30 each and will not be available at the door.

Dunkin' Donuts License Transfer Delayed For Traffic Conditions

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO
The License Board delayed voting for a transfer of a common victualer license at the Dunkin' Donuts, 366 Centre St., from Paul Govostos to Mark Cafani until they agree on certain conditions.

At Tuesday's meeting, Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from Ward 4 Councillor Brian Connolly, who requested that the board not grant the transfer until certain conditions are agreed upon.

Conditions include the granting of necessary easements and right of entry across his property to reconstruct the intersection of Centre St. and Crown Colony Drive, in front of Dunkin' Donuts.

The project would create a new lane and alter traffic patterns, according to Connolly.

Also the owner must agree to hire staff for policing the neighborhood for litter and debris resulting from Dunkin' Donuts.

The owner must agree to the hours of operation as defined by the License Board not to extend the hours unless approval is requested.

In discussing a traffic plan with the advent of the opening of the new Home Depot, Atty. Robert Fleming, representing Home Depot, said the widening of Centre St. and the process of designing a new ramp plus a proposed new road out of Congress Street are all part of a big piece in which Home Depot plans to spend about $400,000 working with the Flatley Co., who owns a portion of the island in the area.

Atty. Adam Chu, representing Dunkin' Donuts, said as a tenant, Cafani doesn't have influence on granting permission for an easement, but the landlord does.

Shea said the hearing will continue until Oct. 29 when the owner of Home Depot, the traffic engineer and Dunkin' Donuts will all "be on the same page."

The board granted the transfer of the common victualer license at the Dunkin' Donuts at 125 Hancock St. next to Cathay Pacific.

Wollaston Garden Club Planning Newport Ave. Clean-Up

The Wollaston Garden Club is organizing a clean-up of Newport Avenue Saturday, Oct. 26, from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The clean-up is being planned with the City Public Works Department and is part of a nationwide volunteer program. Millions of Americans across the country are doing volunteer projects on Oct. 26 to improve their communities on "Make A Difference Day."

Interested volunteers of all ages should report to the Wollaston Fire Station on Beale Street at 8 a.m. Volunteers will receive rakes, shovels, brooms and plastic bags and be assigned a particular part of Newport Avenue for work. Plastic gloves will also be available. Coffee, juice and donuts will be provided by Dunkin' Donuts.

The Public Works Department will assist in hauling away the collected debris. Co-chairwomen from the garden club for this civic beautification project are Jo Costello, Marcia Smith, Pat Arlis and Rebecca Dinsmore. For more information, call Costello at 617-471-3669.

King Crossword — Magic maze

Salome's Stars

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're eager to Ram headfirst into that new project. But before you do, find out why some of your colleagues might not appear to be as gung-ho about it as you are.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) All that dedicated hard work you've been putting in pays off better than you expected. So go ahead, reward yourself with something befitting a beauty-loving Bovine.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to take on that new challenge. And if your self-confidence is sagging, instead of telling yourself why you can't do it, list all the reasons why you can.
- CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is one time when you might want to put some distance between you and the job at hand. It will give you a better perspective on what you've done and still need to do.
- LEO (July 23 to August 22) Resist that occasional lapse into Leonine laziness that sometimes overtakes the Big Cat. Don't cut corners. Do the job right at this time, or you might have to redo it later.
- VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You know how you like to do things. And that's fine. But watch that you don't impose your methods on others. A current financial crunch soon eases.

- LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone might try to take advantage of your generosity. But before your sensitivity toward others overwhelms your good sense, check his or her story out carefully.
- SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your strong Scorpion sense of fairness lets you see all sides of a dispute. Continue to remain impartial as you help each person work through his or her particular grievance.
- SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Trust your keen Sagittarian insight to help you see through an offer that might not be all it claims. A closer look could reveal disturbing elements.
- CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) With the Goat exhibiting a more dominant aspect these days, you could find it easier to make your case in front of even the most skeptical audience.
- AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Aspects favor relationships, whether platonic, professional or personal. On another note: Be a mite more thrifty. You might need some extra money very soon.
- PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Recent news from someone you trust could help you make an important decision. Also, be prepared to confront an upcoming change in a personal situation.
- BORN THIS WEEK: You can be firm in your own views, but also flexible enough to welcome the views of others.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Tie the arm to the side and it withers; cease exercising the mind for a prolonged period and thinking can be recovered no more than spoiled fruit can regain freshness.

What great energy there is in thought! It can be good or it can be bad! New ideas and powerful thoughts have affected the destiny of mankind.

Thoughts become a part of us and are reflected in our lives. If our thoughts are so filled with faith, cheerfulness, gratitude, encouragement, happiness, love and friendship, there can be no room for such destructive thoughts as greed, despair, fear and vulgarity.

Our thoughts of today will be creating a new tomorrow, adding purpose to life. Life without a purpose is like a train without a track -- all power but no place to go.

Purpose in thought adds depth to life -- a depth of faith; it adds dimension -- the dimension of hope; it adds a discipline of patience -- an ingredient of a happy life...

Incidentally, we welcome any thoughts you may have about this column.

PRESENT AND FORMER city employees filled the City Council chamber Monday night on the issue of a $2,500 increase in basic life insurance benefits.

(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

Council Votes 'Yes' But Phelan Says Money Not There

but many funds were unfunded last year.

Phelan added:

"Once the financial house is in order we will review this matter and will continue to review this matter and I do want to keep the lines of communications open."

"The fact of the matter is the $7,500 life insurance policy is actually ahead of schedule...[compared with] the schedule the advisory board came up with had it been followed," Phelan said explaining that the board was originally looking for a $1,000 a year increase plan.

Phelan brought up the question of whether he has a moral obligation to fulfill the insurance agreement.

"To carry that logic through, that would appear to mean that I would have to continue the same over spending of the past," Phelan said. "If I would to fund all those [other] promises it would be a lot more than $120,000 to $140,000 which would be the cost of this particular item."

"We have $2 million in reserve account for $200 million budget and that's woefully inadequate and until we get that reserve up I'm going to watch every single penny," said Phelan.

Raymond said the next step is now in the hands of the various union officials who have indicated pursuing unfair labor practices suits.

Phelan said Personnel Director Roberta Kety announced at Quincy Insurance Advisory Committee meeting June 10 that the 2002-2003 fiscal year budget does not contain funds to cover the increase to $10,000. He stressed that it was made clear to the insurance committee members prior to last July 1 and the death of William Maver.

Maver, a retired city employee with nearly 40 year of service in the Water Department died that day. His death brought to light that the life insurance had not been increased from $7,500 to $10,000.

His wife, Jean Maver of Faxon Lane, told the council her husband informed her from a letter he received nine months before his death that she would receive $10,000 in basic life insurance coverage.

"To my knowledge he has never received notification that his insurance would not be increased to $10,000," she said. She said she received a check for $7,500 after his death.

A four member panel said it was their understanding all that present and retired city employees would receive the two increases: one on Jan. 1 and the second on July 1 of this year.

The four are Paul Phillips, Chairman of the Quincy Insurance Advisory Committee; Pauline Kennedy, member QIAC; Stephen Moynihan, President Quincy Retiree Association; and Arthur Foster, president Quincy Retired Teachers Association.

"Employees are expecting the city to fund the things that they [the city] have agreed to with the employees," Phillips said.

"It was a lack from communication from the city's side. Nobody told us anything. We didn't know what was going on. We thought we had a deal. The benefit was going to increase on July 1. It didn't."

"Our initial attitude was that the city was renegeing on a deal they had made with us," said Phillips.

Kennedy said, "I always thought that if one agreed on a contract, shook hands on it, they would continue no matter who the mayor was to agree."

Citing two state supreme cases, Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin noted one case states that minutes of a meeting serve as a legally binding contract when agreements are made. The other case held that when a new corporation takes over a company that it will be held to all agreements and contract made by the previous one and Coughlin likened it to this situation with a new mayoral administration being in place.

Councilor Joseph Finn was in agreement to the resolution and to the obligation to uphold the insurance increase.

"No plan for recovery, or no budget, should be solely built on the backs of the people who least able to afford it," said Finn. "Given this set of circumstances, these people who need those resources."

Appointment Deadline Today

Falco Or Crowley Seen New Chief

The deadline for naming a new police chief has arrived and speculation is that the choice is between acting Chief William F. Falco, 54, and Capt. Robert F. Crowley 56.

The third man on the Civil Service list is Capt. James A. McNeil, 59. The list expires today (Thursday), unless Mayor William Phelan, the appointing authority, secures another extension.

Some police sources say that Falco has an edge on the basis of experience in the post he has held on an acting basis since January, 2001, in the absence of former Chief Thomas W. Frane.

If Phelan chooses to appoint Falco, he will have to give a reason to Civil Service since Crowley outscored the acting chief, 90 to 87 in the test in May. McNeil scored an 86.

Former Chief Frane, 55, had been chief since 1997 when he underwent heart surgery in January, 2001. He was out on sick leave until his retirement in May, 2002. Just last week, the Quincy Retirement Board overruled a medical panel of three physicians and voted to give Frane a disability pension totaling $105,900 a year, $98,000 of it tax-free.

The Retirement Board found that Frane's heart problems were indeed caused by stress of the chief's job.

Governor's Race, Cahill Treasurer Bid Spark Interest 65% Voter Turnout Seen Here

With a heated governor's race and three Quincy candidates in ballot contests -- one statewide -- an approximate 65 percent voter turnout is seen here in next Tuesday's state election.

"I am hoping for a 65 percent turnout," said City Clerk Joseph Shea Tuesday. "It should be around that."

Shea points to two other factors indicating mounting election interest:

- Nearly 1,000 absentee ballots already returned.
- An 857 increase in the number of registered voters since the Sept. 17 primary bringing to 52,977 those eligible to vote next Tuesday.

The city's 30 polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Deadline to obtain an absentee ballot is Monday, Nov. 4 at noon.

But there are three other races of special interest for Quincy voters:

Timothy P. Cahill, Norfolk County treasurer and eight-term city councillor, seeks the state treasurer's post O'Brien is leaving.

If elected, he would be the first Quincy resident to hold a state-wide office since Francis Bellotti was attorney

City Receives $290,000 For Fire Dept. Equipment

Quincy will receive a $290,763 grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, enough to outfit the entire 215-member Quincy Fire Department with new firefighting coats, helmets and boots and acquire "lifeline" hook-and-line safety equipment.

The grants were announced in Quincy Monday by Congressman William Delahunt, accompanied by Mayor William Phelan, FEMA Regional Administrator Daniel Craig and Quincy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell.

"The events of Sept. 11 were a dramatic reminder of the extraordinary risks and routine heroism of those on the front lines of public safety," said Delahunt, who serves on the House Judiciary Committee, which oversees legislation relating to public safety.

"From car crashes to arson to bioterror, the volume and complexity of the challenges facing firefighters is staggering. The grant will help equip, train and protect first responders throughout the city."

"We have a great group of guys working in the Fire Department who risk their lives each and every day for the residents of Quincy," said

Jewish War Veterans To Honor John Noonan Sunday

John D. Noonan, president of the Quincy Council Aging, will be honored Sunday by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans as their 22nd annual Citizen of the Year.

Noonan will receive the award at a 9:30 a.m. breakfast at the Beth Israel Synagogue, 33 Grafton St., Quincy Point.

Thomas I. Clusby Jr., director of the city's Department of Elder Services, will be the guest speaker.

Noonan will be recognized for his contributions toward improving the quality of life for Quincy's senior citizens, said Post Commander Irving Isaacson, program chairman.

A life-long Quincy resident, Noonan has been chairman of the Council on Aging for the past 20 years.

A World War II veteran, he served as a sergeant in the 5th Airways Army Air Corps Squadron.

Council Seeks Wireless Fees To Fund School Music Lessons

The City Council has jumped into the school music controversy, with both feet.

The School Committee has referred to its Budget Subcommittee a Council resolution to fund instrumental music instruction in the schools with a license fee for the use of city-owned facilities to host wireless communication equipment.

The resolution was introduced by Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin, who earlier in the year filed a successful resolution to earmark such funds to supplement the seriously underfunded school budget.

His current resolution, approved at the most recent Council meeting, would fine-tune the original resolution to earmark a portion of the monies to the restoration of instrumental music instruction in the elementary schools.

Quincy schools have had such a program for more than four decades, and reaches at least two to three hundred children a year. It was just one of a series of cuts from the school budget for 2002-03 academic year.

One plan to reinstate the in-school program in elementary schools could be accomplished with the rehiring of one teacher at an estimated expense of $35,000.

The ultimate decision on the Council's resolution rests with Mayor William Phelan regarding an appropriation and the School Committee with respect to an allocation of the funding.

Great Nephew, Friends Plead Innocent

Three Youths Held Without Bail In Murder Of Woman, 84

Three Norton youths, one of them the victim's heir, pleaded innocent Monday in Quincy District Court to murder charges in the slaying of an 84-year-old Quincy woman, whose death in a fall Dec. 19 was originally thought to have been an accident.

Judge Mark Coven ordered that the trio — Anthony Calabro, 19, Thomas Lally, 21, and Jason Weir, 17 — be held without bail for pretrial conference Nov. 21 at 9 a.m. They were sent to Dedham for possible action by a Norfolk County Grand Jury.

They were accused of killing Mariana Calabro, a longtime hairdresser at Marvel Beauty Shop in Quincy and the great aunt of Anthony Calabro, and making it appear that she had fallen down a flight of stairs at her 55 Bedford St. apartment.

Based on the findings of an autopsy conducted Dec. 21, the medical examiner ruled that Calabro died as the result of a blunt neck trauma and that the manner of death was accidental, allowing Anthony Calabro, who lived with his great aunt, to collect a share of her estate.

When the three-family house on Bedford Street was sold in July, the estate amounted to $503,000.

The medical examiner may have ruled the death accidental but police began to doubt it when the three youths moved into the Bedford Street apartment and began living a lavish lifestyle, throwing parties and purchasing a Corvette.

A source familiar with the case said that a few weeks ago Weir cracked under the strain and told a friend who in turn told Norton police. Police taped a wire to the friend and heard details of the death as they were related by Weir to his friend.

"The whole scene" was staged to give the appearance of a fall, Norfolk District Attorney William Keating told a news conference.

The source said Lally hit Mariana Calabro twice on the head with a frying pan, breaking her neck. Then the three arranged her body at the foot of the stairs in her apartment building to make it appear that she had fallen down the flight.

Free Phone Time For Seniors Dec. 7

Merrill Lynch and the Quincy Council on Aging will again sponsor worldwide telephone calls for seniors Saturday, Dec. 7.

Each senior will be given one hour of free phone time to call anywhere in the world they would like. Refreshments donated by local businesses will be served.

The staff of Merrill Lynch will volunteer their time. The event will be held at the Merrill Lynch Offices, Two Battery March Park on the fifth floor. The entrance to the office complex is located opposite the Shea Skating Rink on Rte 37, Willard St., West Quincy.

Those who would like to participate are asked to call the Quincy Council on Aging at 617-376-1245. No transportation will be provided. Deadline is Nov. 26.

St. Moritz Social Club License Suspended

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After counsel for the St. Moritz Social Club, 91 Penn St., acknowledged it was in violation of selling liquor without a license, the License Board Tuesday suspended its club license and requested further police investigation.

A 180 club license means that it is a non-profit club and is not allowed to sell liquor without a liquor license. The club was asking the board to grant them a liquor license.

Atty. Louis Cassis, counsel for Bernard Sharpe, manager, said he was told that the club had a club license which was hanging on the wall and Sharpe thought that included a liquor license. Cassis said he couldn't find anything in the club license indicating that liquor could be sold.

However, Cassis said he didn't think the club was in violation, because as a private club, members are allowed to bring in liquor but not to sell it. He said this was the case where the club had made a "long series of mistakes."

Capt. Robert Crowley, who was investigating the violation, said on July 28 at 1:43 a.m. he and Officer Kevin Tobin went to the club and found no manager on duty and six persons sitting at the bar with drinks. On Oct. 11 he returned at 8 p.m. where there were 16 persons at the bar. Crowley said there was cash on the bar as well as a cash register.

An angered City Solicitor Jay McRitchie said that "this is a criminal statute and requires the Police Department of the City of Quincy to initiate proper proceedings."

He said the club has been operating for years even though Det. Lt. Robert Perchard told them they could not do so. Perchard said that on Nov. 1997, illegal poker machines were found and then again in 1998 they were found in the back room of the club.

McRitchie said that the club was established by a convicted book maker and that the owner is under indictment. Ralph Maher is listed as the owner.

He said someone in the police department must have known about the poker machines.

He said "What's the city going to do?" This is a serious matter, and the board should be "outraged."

He advised the board to take some appropriate action.

Cassis said he didn't think criminal prosecution would solve any problems and said Sharpe is a fine man. He said he saw the list of members and said they are all good people. He said it is "unfortunate" that the landlord who is not a member of the club is now under "indictment."

Cassis told the board that if they didn't wish to grant a liquor license to the club it was "their prerogative."

McRitchie said the board has to send a message to other establishments "you cannot operate an unlicensed facility."

Acting Police Chief William Falco said he was unaware that the club existed until a few months ago. He called it "unbelievable" that license board members knew about this.

He was told that the club had a state license, but said after all investigations there was not a state license.

He said what started out as a small club has grown and now serves non-members by a mere ringing of a bell. He also questioned whether or not the club is a non-profit one, noting that they have never donated to any charity.

He said there is bookmaking and betting going on in the club and said he finds it "incomprehensible" that people knew this was going on. He said he can't believe that no one has brought charges.

Nine Firefighters Promoted

Fire Capt. Joseph Barron, whose father once held the same rank before his retirement from the Quincy Fire Department, has been sworn in as a deputy fire chief.

Barron, who joined the department in June, 1978, was one of nine Quincy firefighters to be promoted and sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea last Monday.

His father, William J. Barron, became a firefighter in 1947 after a year as a policeman and was promoted to deputy chief in 1961 and retired 20 years later.

Barron was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in April, 1992, and to captain in October, 1994.

Promoted to permanent fire captains were:

Lt. Clinton Tierney, hired in May, 1970, and promoted to lieutenant in February, 1987.

Lt. Ed Fenby, hired in July, 1987, and promoted to lieutenant in October, 1996.

Lt. Gary Smyth, hired in July, 1987, and promoted to lieutenant in 1998.

Lt. Paul Griffith, fired in July, 1987, and promoted to lieutenant in July, 1995.

Promoted to permanent fire lieutenants were:

Firefighter Peter O'Hare, hired in August, 1979.

Firefighter Joe Jackson, hired in October, 1998, and whose father also was a deputy fire chief.

Firefighter Kevin O'Connor, hired in October, 1998.

Firefighter Patrick Dee, hired in August, 1996.

Kidney Donor Sought For Quincy Man, 44

His family is seeking a kidney donor for Daniel J. Kelley, 44, of Amesbury Street, Quincy, who has been diagnosed in renal failure and faces four to five years of periodic illness from kidney dialysis.

Family members and friends, says his stepmother, Mary Kelley of North Falmouth, have been tested but they have failed to turn up a good match.

"Dan has always been hard-working and kind and it's hard for him going through this," said Mrs. Kelley.

"Anyone willing to donate to his cause may call Linda Nexius at Brigham & Women's Hospital, 617-732-6446, Kidney Transplant."

"Sometimes people make arrangements to have their organs donated and it could think of him it would be great."

Kelley, who is employed as a Boston Globe truck driver, was born with nephritis, a kidney ailment, but was unaware of it until 21 years ago.

"He was treated for it and was doing great," said Mrs. Kelley, "but in early June of this year, after going for a check up and a blood test, he found out he was in renal failure."

"He was taken to Brigham & Women's Hospital for a series of tests and was shocked when he was told he was going on dialysis and was in need of a kidney transplant."

"He is on dialysis three nights a week and many times he becomes really ill. There is a four to five year wait for a kidney."

Kelley was raised in Quincy, the son of Joseph M. Kelley and the late Eleanor Kelley and attended St. Ann's School and Archbishop Williams High School.

His brother, the late Joseph M. Kelley Jr., died of cancer at the age of 22. A sister, Nancy Piscatelli, a Boston school teacher, lives in Norfolk, Mass.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Oct. 29, 1929, Black Tuesday hits Wall Street as investors trade 16,410,030 shares on the New York Stock Exchange in a single day. Billions of dollars were lost, wiping out thousands of investors and leading to the Great Depression.

• On Oct. 30, 1938, Orson Welles causes a nationwide panic with his broadcast of "War of the Worlds" — a realistic radio dramatization of a Martian invasion of Earth.

• On Nov. 2, 1947, the Hughes Flying Boat — the largest aircraft ever built — is piloted by designer Howard Hughes on its first and only flight. Built with laminated birch and spruce, the massive wooden aircraft had a wingspan longer than a football field and was designed to carry more than 700 men into battle. It never went into production, primarily because critics alleged that its wooden framework was insufficient to support its weight during long flights.

• On Nov. 1, 1969, "Suspicious Minds," by Elvis Presley, hits No. 1 on the "Billboard" charts. The song was Presley's first chart topper in seven years and would be his last.

• On Oct. 31, 1984, Indira Gandhi, the prime minister of India, is assassinated in New Delhi by two of her own bodyguards. As Gandhi was dying from her wounds, her supporters argued — ultimately in vain — with each other over who would be able to deliver the blood.

• On Nov. 3, 1986, a Lebanese magazine reports that the United States has been secretly selling arms to Iran in an effort to secure the release of seven American hostages held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

• On Oct. 28, 1994, Susan Smith reports that she was carjacked in South Carolina by a man who took her two small children. After nine days of intense national media attention, Smith finally confessed that the carjacking tale was false and that she had driven her car into a lake to drown her children.

One More Time . . .

Every once in a while I find myself thinking of things I wish I could see, do, or hear one more time.

And I always find myself thinking of such memories as the following:

• Take in a movie at the Lincoln, Strand or Quincy Theater.

• Sit down to a 45-cent luncheon special at the Howard Johnson restaurant downstairs at the Granite Trust. (Now Fleet Bank).

• Order a Coke with a dash of lemon at the Alhambra Team Room.

• Plunk a nickel in the jukebox and get Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Harry James or Jimmy Dorsey with Bob Eberly and Helen O'Connell.

• Look at Munroe MacLean on one side and Jack Donahue on the other plotting strategy at the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving football game.

• Hear former Mayor and Councilor Tom Burgin stand up and tell his colleagues: "It's time to fish or cut bait."

• Henry Prairie at Point Junior High School stressing: "Always give it (effort) that extra ounce."

• Percy Lane, punster, newspaper man and bachelor observing: "You don't have to be crazy to be a newspaper man, but it helps. . . . 'Marriage is an institution, but who wants to live in an institution?'"

• Dorothy Lamour, at our second meeting 10 years later, pulling me down beside her at the Latin Quarter and kidding: "C'mon now, you're not a cub reporter anymore."

• Ruth Gordon, calling from her apartment in New York City or her home on Martha's Vineyard all excited about her latest movie or TV show and asking me to keep an eye on her birth certificate at City Hall.

• President-elect John Kennedy in his father, Joseph's, home in the Kennedy compound a few hours after his slim win over Richard Nixon pouring drinks for and chatting with the press. When asked to explain what he thought made the difference between victory and defeat, he replied: "He (Nixon) screwed around too long in the South." And confessing he was going to play some golf when he got to Florida. "But don't print that, they'll think I'm another Ike."

• Watch Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa walking through City Hall turning off unnecessary lights.

• Ride a street car from Quincy Point to Quincy Square -- and for only a nickel.

• See John Gillis in a crew cut.

• Buy a suit or sport coat from Ray Josephine at Remick's.

• Or a TV set from Remo and Pete DeNicola at South Shore Television.

• And a big band album from Jason Feldman at Jason's.

• Walk up the runway at Fenway Park and see Jimmie Foxx, Bobby Doerr, Joe Cronin and Ted Williams taking batting practice.

• Take a seat in the stands at Fore River Field and see Jay Desmond, Fran Desmond, Nick Malvesti, Clappy Wildridge, Joe Shapiro, etc. in action.

• Stop at the Quincy Arena to boo Ted Germaine or Tony Papalino.

• Get up at 4 a.m. for Quincy High School hockey practice at the Boston arena. (I'm not so sure about doing that again.)

THE STORK SEEMS to be on a busy Quincy course.

Patrick McDermott and his wife, Tracy Wilson, welcomed their first child, Alana Wilson McDermott, last Thursday at Brigham & Women's Hospital.

Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro and his wife, Sue, are expecting their first little constituent in January.

ANDJEANNEREARDON, the City Council's right arm and clerk of committees, is thrilled with the arrival of her first granddaughter.

Amber Marie Reardon was born to son Mark and daughter-in-law Faith Reardon Oct. 11 at South Shore Hospital.

Amber is their third child and third grandchild for Jeanne and Bill Reardon, joining Mark, Jr. and Brett.

Great grandfather is Tony Delmonico, retired Quincy Park Department mason who, when he built a wall or anything else with bricks, they stayed built.

Congratulations, all around.

Environmental Program Plans Study Of Year's Lowest Tide

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program continues Sunday, Nov. 3, with an examination of the shoreline during the lowest tide of the year.

Dave Gaber, an environmental and water resources engineer, will speak on tides in science, folklore, history and music at 1:15 p.m. in the clubroom of the River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St.

Participants will have an opportunity to walk across the street to view the Southern Tide Mill and learn about its use of the tides and effort that are underway to restore it.

Participants joining the group can meet around 2:30 p.m. in the CVS parking lot next to the mill on the Southern Artery. Both of these events are wheelchair accessible.

Adventurous members of the group will meet in the Caddy Park parking lot on Quincy Shore Drive around 2:30 p.m. for an exploration of the Wollaston Beach tide flats.

Waterproof boots or shoes are recommended for participants in this event. The program is free and public attendance is welcome at one or more events.

For more information, call Dave Murphy at 617-376-1254.

Ward 5 Association To Award Scholarships

The Ward 5 Community Association will award two $250 scholarships at an "Educational Forum" Thursday, Nov. 14, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

The winners of the scholarships will be selected by random drawing the night of the forum.

Students who apply should submit proof of Ward 5 residency and a letter from the post-secondary school they are attending.

Letters should be addressed to Stephen Golden, Ward 5 Scholarship, 32 Ridgeway St., Quincy MA 02170.

Roomers, Transients Have Rights, Too

I find the need to respond to the Oct. 17 Quincy Sun article "Roomers, Transients Blamed For Crime In Quincy Center."

Most absurd is having a chip system to get into the shelter based on forced labor to keep these "undesirables" busy during the day. Are you telling me Father Bill would let a man or woman freeze to death or go hungry because they didn't earn their chip? Please.

These are people. They have a right to sit, relax and talk to one another as much as anybody else. Most of them are friendly and law abiding. Perhaps a day shelter with a TV, pool table and donated chairs and couches should be offered, but certainly not a mandatory herding of people to anywhere they don't want to go.

Cities have poor people — period. Some are mentally ill, physically injured or impaired. Many receive small monthly checks. They can only afford rooming houses or shelters.

If people are publicly urinating, we need better bathroom access. People fornicating in broad daylight on the library laws is something our tourists are liable to see? Ridiculous. An occasional person napping. Don't some of you take a little nap at homesometimes. Well, guess what, they don't have a private place to nap.

Instead of treating these people like some sort of scourge, maybe some of our "good" citizens could actually walk over and say hello, maybe buy them a cup of coffee once in a while.

Everyone has a reason for being here on your earthly walk. Perhaps, God allows some of these "down and outs" to be in our sights to see the reactions in our hearts. Is it one of prayer, concern, love and compassion, or is it one of scorn, ridicule, distrust and callousness? Your eternal destiny may somehow intertwine with just how you internally and externally react to the less fortunate. God bless you all.

Stop Turning Shelters Into Mental Health Centers

According to a story in The Quincy Sun, the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association held a meeting to share stories about crime and the fear of crime in the residential neighborhoods surrounding downtown Quincy.

People are rightly upset about their quality of life being impacted by folks living in society's cellar, but the homeless and rooming house residents aren't the enemy. Getting drunk in public, urination in public, drug abuse and public sex are unacceptable behavior by anyone, whether they're homeless or not.

I was glad to see representatives from the Quincy Police Department there at the meeting. Lt. William Stenmon from Community Policing had some pretty good observations from what I've read of the meeting.

However, I would disagree on the usefulness of a "chip" program, where homeless folks get chips for doing part-time work during the day while Father Bill's is closed. It will probably be just as good as passing out bags of potato chips. You can't force people to work for their shelter. You just can't do that.

One of the biggest problems surrounding the homeless crisis is that there are so many homeless mentally ill out there living in the streets because we as a society do not care to do what is right. We "cure" folks by dumping them into homeless shelters often without real treatment. The Department of Mental Health budget, thanks to our politicians, keeps slashing funds from serving the mentally ill.

The other problem seems clearer. Why has the city of Quincy licensed 20 out of 39 rooming houses in one area of the city setting up a ghetto for rooming houses?

The homeless population causes many problems but not every problem is theirs.

Get more funds into the Department of Mental Health. Stop turning shelters into mental health centers. Create more real housing.

Enforce the law but don't scapegoat the homeless.

Board Bans Crime Comics, Paperbacks, Author's Works

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy Literary Review Board moved to ban 15 crime comic books, four 25-cent paperback novels and the complete works of author Nelson Algren from newsstands in the city.

The four-member board was also examining closely several "slick" magazines containing pictorial layouts of a New York City brothel, a nudist colony and "suggestive cheesecake."

Already on the proscribed list were all the novels of Donald Henderson Clarke.

The review board was made up of the Rev. Joseph D. Parkman, chairman; newly appointed Police Chief Joseph E. Hughes, Mrs. Ida Glasser and Mrs. Katherine Quinn.

FENNO ST. SCHOOL PLANNED

The City Council passed an order to take by eminent domain 10 acres of land on Fenno St. for a new school as some 300 school officials and supportive parents packed the Chamber.

Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert estimated the land damages at $6,512.

William D. Morrisson, principal of the Massachusetts Fields School, told the Council that his school was so badly overcrowded that two of the classes had to attend the Francis W. Parker School.

POLICE COMMENDED

Six Quincy police officers were commended by Brintree Police Chief Edward D. Cahill for their assistance during a serious traffic accident on Granite St. in Brintree.

Cited were Capt. William McIntyre, Lt. John E. Wuerth, Patrolmen Joseph Casagrande, William Crooker, Edward Gentile and Frederick Tighe.

DELAY BLAMED ON CITY

The Vara Construction Co. charged that the failure of the city of Quincy to move the old fire station was the big factor in the delay in completing the new fire station in Houghs Neck.

QTA Forum Skeptical Of New Quincy High

A majority of some 20 persons who attended a Quincy Taxpayers' Association forum at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center doubted the need for a new Quincy High School.

"City leaders have provided no evidence to the taxpayers that any alternatives were fairly and fully considered, as Department of Education regulations require before we can get state reimbursment for building a new high school," said Alan Cousin, the QTA president. Vice President Robert Haley pointed out that a June, 1997, report of the Mayor's school building needs task force had not called for a new high school or for replacing Central Middle School, both integral parts of the plan for a new Quincy High School.

Five months later, he said, the task force changed its recommendations and called for Quincy High School to be renovated to serve as a new Central and a new Quincy High School to be built.

Cousin noted that Cole & Goyette, the chosen planners for a new high school, had done an evaluation of renovating or reusing Quincy High School and the Center for Technical Education, but the evaluation "appeared to be a thinly veiled attempt to justify the new high school."

Citing an account statement sent by Cole & Goyette to the DPW, Cousin said it appears that some evaluation of reusing Central Middle School was done but that this was never made public.

"I want to see that report," said Cousin. "And I want all of Cole & Goyette's reports examined and evaluated independently."

Several persons who attended the forum suggested they petition to the School Committee to hire an independent consultant to report of the city's options.

It was also suggested that the city has provided no evidence to show that Central Middle School needs to be replaced.

"I don't necessarily want the city to pay someone to reinvent the wheel," said Cousin. "But our members and I do want to be satisfied that the city's plans are really the best, most cost-effective option."

"Considering all the costs of a new high school that are not reimbursable — like the $7.7 million needed to make Faxon Field buildable — we aren't taking any further action."

"Also reimbursement is explicitly not guaranteed, even if the Department of Education approves a grant, and it would probably be eight or nine years before the city saw any reimbursement."

"We would have to front all the costs until then. That would entail serious tax effects. Education is almost everyone's top priority, as it should be, but the people who have to pay the bill deserve to know they're getting the best deal for their money."

Assessors' records were cited to indicate that the school has a steel frame, rather than a wood frame, which might preclude state reimbursement for renovating Central.

PATRICK McDERMOTT and wife Tracy Wilson, with their newborn daughter, Alana Wilson McDermott, who arrived Oct. 24 at 11:45 a.m., weighing 6 pounds, 10 ounces.

McDermott Campaign Turns Into A Family Affair

The McDermott Campaign welcomed their newest supporter on Thursday, Oct. 24 at 11:45 a.m. when Alana Wilson McDermott was born to proud new parents Patrick McDermott and Tracy Wilson.

Alana Wilson arrived weighing 6 pounds, 10 ounces at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. Mom and daughter are doing fine, Patrick reports.

Grandparents are Charlie and Linda Wilson of Hanover, and Charlie McDermott of Quincy.

Patrick has been campaigning for the past year for Norfolk County Register of Probate culminating in his Democratic Primary victory Sept. 17. Tracy recently left her law practice in Plymouth to await Alana's arrival.

"There are those in the political circles who believe we planned it this way," mused McDermott. "With her due date scheduled for Oct. 31, there was a good chance Alana could have been born on Election Day, Nov. 5."

"Having a baby always puts life in perspective. I think most parents would agree that a child makes you focus on the simple joys of life. The rest of what we do on a day-to-day basis seems very trivial compared to the awesome responsibility of raising a child," Patrick said.

McDermott reports that the birth of Alana created quite a hectic schedule to maintain between spending time at the hospital with mother and daughter and keeping up with the campaign. On Alana's birthday, and of course with Tracy's blessing, Patrick traveled to Canton for a previously scheduled fundraiser at Nick's Restaurant.

"How many campaign events do you get to attend that have an 'It's a Girl' banner hung across the podium," joked Charlie Wilson, Tracy's father who has been assisting in Patrick's campaign.

Patrick also had the opportunity to formally announce his daughter's birth at the Quincy Democratic Committee breakfast on Sunday morning.

According to sources close to the campaign, Alana will make her political debut on the campaign trail of her father this Friday night at a campaign rally hosted by Norfolk County Sheriff Mike Bellotti at Amelia's at Marina Bay, Quincy, at 7:30 p.m.

Wollaston Garden Club Defies Rain To Clean Up Newport Ave.

Neither rain nor cold nor gloom of day could halt the Wollaston Garden Club from their self-appointed rounds cleaning up Newport Avenue Saturday.

Volunteers, more than half of them Garden Club members, wielded shovels, brooms and rakes as they attacked weeds, trash and cigarette butts littering the roadside from Beale to Brooks Streets.

They discovered that this city block, which combined business, commercial and residential properties, is not up to community standards and vowed to stay focused on Newport Avenue.

A list of recommendations will be presented to Mayor William Phelan, Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin and other city officials.

The clean up on Make a Difference Day was organized by the Garden Club with support from Tom Koch and Dave Murphy of the Park Department, Jay Fink of the Public Works Department and Capt. Michael Orseno of the Wollaston Fire Station.

Firefighters at the Wollaston Fire Station offered hospitality to the cleanup crews and gave them dry space for organizing the assault on trash.

The Garden Club offered a special thanks to Jane McNulty, Fran Guida, Jackie and Fred Drinkwater, Marcia Smith, Rebecca Dinsmore, Pat Artis and Jo Costello for helping to "make a difference."

Residents and business owners along Newport Avenue have been asked to be vigilant in picking up trash and also in reporting abuses to the proper city authorities.

Garden Club members said they were putting into action the words of anthropologist Margaret Mead, who said:

Donna's Pork Chop, Noodle Treat

My husband and I had gone out to breakfast on a Sunday morning when we bumped into Bobby Brown, his wife Donna and their sons. The guys started to talk to each other and Donna and I talked recipes. She gave me this great recipe for pork chops, a family favorite.

Donna's Pork Chops Noodle Treat
4-6 pork chops
1 bottle beer
small package gravy mix or a couple tablespoons onion mix

1 pound noodles
1 garlic clove (chopped)
2 tablespoons olive oil

Sauté the chops in the hot oil and garlic. Remove chops when slightly browned on each side and set aside. Add the beer and the gravy mix and stir until blended.

Place the pork chops back into the pan and cover and simmer until tender. Serve over wide noodles. Easy to prepare and the chops are so tenderized.

At Presidents Place Woodward School's 'Taste Of Quincy' Nov. 3

The Woodward School for Girls will host its third annual Taste of Quincy Plus on Sunday, Nov. 3 from 3 to 7 p.m. at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center, across from the Quincy Center Redline T Station.

Organizers have lined up 23 restaurants which are donating food and in some cases, staff, for the event: Cara Lily's, Durgin Park, El Sarape, Espirit Du Vin, Fajita Rita's, Fowler House, Gennaro's Eatery, Giomatti Restaurant, House of Siam, Java Jo Coffee House, La Paloma, Legal Seafood, Louis' Crossing, Malai Thai Cuisine, Montillo's, Pacini's, Quincy Jade, Sweet Lemons, Venezia, Tullio's, Webster's Eatery, White's Fine Cakes and Pastry, and X & O European Trotteria.

Flowers for the event are being donated by Furnace Brook Florists. Live entertainment is courtesy of Four Great Guys, acoustic soft rock, and BBJ folk music.

"It has been two years since the last Taste of Quincy Plus and everyone is very excited about it," said Ann Kenny, this year's organizer. "The addition of the live auction has added another dimension to this year's fundraiser."

"We are looking forward to a fabulous event filled with fine food, great entertainment and a lively auction," Kenny said.

Auction and drawing items include: dinner and a tour of the State House with Rep. Steve Lynch; a Nomar Garciaparra autographed baseball; a hat signed by New England Patriot place-kicker Adam Vinatieri; use of a condo at Sunday River in Maine during February school vacation week; a hearing aid; a gift basket from Gypsy Kitchen, and gift certificates from the Common Market, Konditor Meister Fine European Pastries and Finian's Restaurant.

Other items are being donated to help the Woodward School.

Auctioneer will be Jimmy Young from New England Cable Network.

Funds raised from the event will help support ongoing renovations to the historic Woodward School building, which was built in 1894, as well as the Woodward athletic and drama programs, and provide for teacher development.

A small portion of the proceeds will also be set aside in the newly established Woodward Endowment Fund.

Contributions to the Woodward School are tax deductible. Send contributions to the Woodward School for Girls, 1102 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169, telephone (617) 773-5610, fax (617) 770-1551.

The event is sponsored and supported by the Woodward School for Girls Board of Trustees, the administration, the Parents' Club and the Alumnae Association.

Ticket prices are $25 per person; $45 for family of four; and $15 for students and senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased at the door, the day of the event.

For more information, contact event organizer Ann Kenny at (617) 859-6307 or e-mail ann.kenny@cy.com.

Halloween Is Also Lions Club's 'Sight Night'

Tonight (Thursday) may be Fright Night to some trick-or-treaters but it's also Sight Night to those youngsters who are interested in helping others with the gift of sight.

Along with their treats, those youngsters will be collecting used eye glasses to be recycled and delivered by LensCrafters and Lions Club volunteers to Third World people who desperately need them.

"Sight Night is a great way to trick-or-treat for a cause," said Christine Cedrone, president of the Lions Club of Quincy. "Sight Night opens children's eyes to the gift of service while they collect glasses from members of their community."

Sight Night is part of a nationwide collection drive by "Give the Gift of Sight," a series of charitable vision care programs sponsored by the LensCrafters Foundation in conjunction with Lions Club International.

Each year, Give the Gift of Sight sponsors optical missions by developing countries such as Mexico, Bolivia, Laos and Thailand.

According to the World Health Organization, one-fourth of the world needs corrective eyewear, but many people, especially those in Third World countries, do not have access to it.

"Be on the lookout for used specs and sunglasses in every nook and cranny of your home or place of work," said Cedrone. "Sight Night volunteers are collecting any types of prescription and non-prescription eyeglasses and sun glasses."

Children's glasses are especially in need, as they are in high demand but in short supply. Whether they are big or small, fashionably "in" or "out," your glasses could change now someone in a developing country sees the world!"

Residents are urged to have eyeglasses ready at your door, or scare up glasses in your community as a Sight Night volunteer. If you're missed on Sight Night, used eyeglasses can be dropped off at a local LensCrafters and Lions Club locations.

MARY VENTO (center) is escorted to her seat of honor by Park School students Elijah Bun (left) and Jeffrey Dao. Mrs. Vento, who retired after managing the school cafeteria for 34 years, was presented with a tiara and an apron which reads, "Parker School Loves Mrs. Vento."

Parker School Students Honor Mary Vento 'Lunch Mother' 34 Years

Parker School children paid a fond and official farewell last week to their "Lunch Mother" — Mrs. Mary Vento of 119 Russell St., North Quincy, who retired this summer after managing the school cafeteria for 34 years.

The entire student body gathered in the Media Center at the school where Grade 4 youngsters performed a tribute to Mrs. Vento, including a poem about her written by their teachers, Aliisa DiMartinis and Joan Youngman.

"I liked every bit of my job and my 34 years at Parker," said Mrs. Vento. "I always looked forward to going there. I loved the kids — and always will."

When she retired, she left behind 378 sick days — "That's how much I loved going to Parker," she said.

Mrs. Vento and her husband, Nicholas, have a son, Anthony, and a daughter, Katharine, who also live in Quincy.

Check Presentation At School Assembly Dec. 6 Squantum Elementary School To Receive $10,000 Award For Improved MCAS Scores

The Squantum Elementary School will receive a $10,000 award as one of 10 schools in the state with the highest gains in this year's MCAS tests.

The awards, known as the Edgerly School Leadership Awards, contribute to improving academics by highlighting the achievement of individual schools.

The Squantum School is being recognized for increasing its score from 238.5 in 2001 to 247 in 2002. The scores reflect tests taken by fourth graders this spring in the areas of English-language arts, science and mathematics. The students are now fifth graders.

"We knew we had done well but we didn't know it was this well," said Principal Donald Houghton. "We are very excited, pleased and very shocked. We worked very hard and it paid dividends.

"This is a celebration of progressive achievement in MCAS scores."

Houghton said an awards ceremony has been scheduled for Friday, Dec. 6 at 9 a.m. during a school assembly in the gymnasium. William Edgerly, chairman of the Edgerly School Leadership Foundation, will present the $10,000 check.

Among those invited to attend are David Driscoll, state commissioner of education; Mayor William Phelan, School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Bruce Ayers and other elected officials including Quincy School committee members.

Houghton will be presented the $10,000 check to be used at his discretion to benefit the Squantum School.

Houghton said he plans to use the money as a "revolving account" to help areas of education in need of extra support.

"I'll be asking the staff to identify needs in the curriculum identified by the MCAS scores. The money will be used to improve our students' ability to help any educational weaknesses," he said. Some specific needs could be composition books to help with students' writing, or science kits.

Houghton credited the school's staff with the MCAS score improvement.

"It's a staff effort. I can set up a plan but it's the staff that implements it. The teachers in grades kindergarten through five who work with the kids -- all the credit goes to them."

Elementary Explorations Registration At Library

Registration will begin Friday, Oct. 31, for session two of the Thomas Crane Public Library's Elementary Explorations, two after-school programs for youngsters in kindergarten and first and second grades.

The six-week series of programs will involve read aloud stories and related activities especially designed for each age group. Activities involve art, science, writing and more.

The programs will take place at the Main Library, 40 Washington St., and are limited to Quincy residents only. Space is limited.

Those youngsters participating in session one of the program are asked to wait until Friday, Nov. 1, to register to give everyone a chance to attend.

Parents need not accompany their children but are requested to remain in the building while the program is on.

• Explorers Club for first and second graders. Wednesdays, Nov. 13 - Dec. 18 from 3 p.m. to 3:45 p.m.

• Kindergarten Kids, a new story group just for kindergartners. Thursdays, Nov. 14 - Dec. 19 from 3 p.m. to 3:45 p.m.

Both groups will be studying art this session. A variety of art forms will be explored, some involving collage and color schemes.

Halloween Tips

- Check that the costumes are flame retardant, so the little one's aren't in danger near burning jack-o-lantern and other fire hazards.
 - Keep costumes short to prevent trips, falls, and other bumps in the night.
 - Try make-up instead of a mask. Masks can be hot and uncomfortable and more importantly, they can obstruct a child's vision -- a dangerous thing when kids are crossing streets and going up and down stairs.
 - Make sure kids wear light colors or put reflective tape on their costumes and carry some type of flashlight or other lighted device.
 - Trick-or-treat kids always should be in groups so they don't become lost or get into trouble. Parents should accompany their children.
 - Make sure costumes do not restrict movement. Trim them if necessary.
 - Make sure costumes do not have long, trailing hems.
 - Make sure costumes do not have long, trailing hems.
 - Make sure costumes do not have long, trailing hems.
 - Parents should check out all treats at home before allowing the children to eat them.
- What to Eat:
- Only unopened candies and other treats that are in original wrappers. Don't forget to inspect fruit and homemade goodies for anything suspicious. By all means remind kids not to eat everything at once, or they will be feeling pretty ghoulish for a while.
- Homeowners:
- Remove any obstacles on your property that might cause a child to trip and fall. Make sure your pathway and doorway are well lighted.
- Drivers:
- Use extreme caution on Halloween. Many younger children are so excited that they forget basic traffic rules.

MWRA Pays City $600,000 To Mitigate Pellet Plant

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) has agreed to pay Quincy $600,000 in partial satisfaction of the city's mitigation claims for hosting its pelletization plant in the Fore River Shipyard.

And that, said Mayor William Phelan, should be only the beginning.

"This is a truly significant development," he said. "The MWRA has acknowledged that, at a minimum, Quincy is entitled to this payment and that the authority should continue to pay the city until a final resolution is reached."

In past years, the mitigation payment has totaled $3.2 million per year, but this year authority officials decided that, since the nature of the pellet plant had changed, the MWRA was entitled to drop the payments.

Phelan disputed the decision.

"I have made it patently clear to the MWRA that Quincy will not stand idly by while payments which are due the city — both legally and morally — are discontinued," he said.

"We intend to aggressively pursue every avenue available to us to ensure that the payments continue. This is a good start and I appreciate the good faith gesture of Executive Director (Fred) Laskey and the MWRA Board — but it's only a start."

At first, the MWRA Board of Directors refused to authorize any payment to the city for the current period.

But after acting City Solicitor Jay MacRitchie informed the board of the city's position, including a city council appropriation to underwrite legal action against the MWRA, the board reversed course and voted to make the payment.

"We budgeted conservatively this fiscal year," said Phelan. "But I was confident that we would identify additional sources of revenue as they developed. This is one such source."

The Mayor indicated that a thorough review of areas of need, including budget cuts and city council spending resolutions, would be conducted before the funds were allocated.

Board Warns Two Bars On After-Hours Drinking

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After much haggling between members of the License Board as to what kind of punishment should be given to Beau's Place at 375-377 Washington St. and The Goal Post Bar & Grill on 226 Water St. for serving patrons after hours, the board voted unanimously to give each establishment a verbal warn-

Acting Police Chief William Falco said he wanted the board to be consistent with punishment given to other first-time offenders.

Chairman Joseph Shea explained that at package stores, punishment is different and more severe than that of pouring establishments.

When Capt. Robert Crowley went to Beau's Place, he found five cars in front of the bar and five persons seated at the bar after 1:30 a.m.

Robert Page, who is now the manager, stated that on the night of July 28, when Crowley came in to investigate, his father was there at the time. His father has since passed away and his son said he could not remember the exact time of the incident.

When the motion was made, it was made with the stipulation that first-time offenders would receive a ver-hal warning, but the next time patrons are served after hours, there would be a suspension.

When Capt. Crowley visited the Goal Post Bar & Grill, he noted there were 10 cars in front of the establishment and 17 patrons seated at the bar.

Owner Kathleen Mulkerrins agreed with Crowley and said she knew that at 1:30 all patrons had to leave. She said she had already told the patrons to leave before Crowley entered.

The hearing for Paddy Barry's on 1574 Hancock St. will be heard at the Nov. 19 meeting.

Messina Contributes $25,000 To Help Stricken Braintree Boy

Developer Frank Messina, of Messina Enterprises in Braintree, has donated $25,000 to the Friends of the Shadducks, an organization formed to raise funds for a Braintree youth paralyzed by a rare spinal cord disease.

"I have been fortunate in my life that I was never faced with this kind of problem, not that someday it couldn't happen to someone dear to me, and I'm just grateful that I'm able to help. All we can do is hope and pray, and my wish is that this will make life a little easier for Jack and the entire Shadduck family," Messina said.

This May, Jack Shadduck was diagnosed at Boston's Children's Hospital with transverse myelitis, a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

"We're ecstatic to have received such generous support from Frank Messina," said Shadduck committee member George Alcott. "His contribution represents a giant stride toward our fundraising goal. We are now looking forward to our November event to help complete the task at hand."

In the next 12 months, Jack will face his toughest challenges. Jack's parents, Joe and Marie, and his grandparents, John and Barbara Gilfeather, have chosen not to dwell on how and why this happened.

Instead, they have put all of their energies into balancing 24-hour care for Jack, who recently returned home after five months in the hospital.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

The Friends of the Shadducks have scheduled a fundraising event Friday, Nov. 15 at the Quincy Marriott. The cocktail party will feature a live band, disc jockey, a live and silent auction, and a drawing with a one-week stay in St. Martin as first prize.

Special guests at the event will include past and present Boston sports personalities as well as other noted guests. The committee hopes to raise $150,000 for the event.

The Friends of the Shadducks are looking for individuals and local businesses to donate items for the live and silent auction, advertise in their ad book to be distributed at the event, as well as people to purchase tickets to the event and/or drawing tickets.

Jack's father, Joe, is a Quincy businessman and a past president of the Quincy Rotary Club.

For more information on the Shadducks or the event, contact committee member Daniel J. Flynn III at 617-479-9000.

Buckley To Head Sheriff's Youth, Senior Services Program

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces the appointment of a coordinator for youth and elder services programs at his office.

Brian H. Buckley, former Quincy Youth Coordinator and director of the Quincy Council on Aging, has been named the Sheriff's Coordinator of Intergenerational Programs.

"We cannot ignore the benefits of bringing together the wisdom and life experience of senior citizens and the exuberance and optimism of youth," Bellotti said.

"Bringing these two groups together and building a bridge between generations enriches and informs all of our lives. My office is very lucky to have Brian Buckley on board. He has the vision and experience to meld these two worlds in a successful and meaningful way."

Buckley was Quincy's Youth Coordinator for 10 years and director of the Quincy Council on Aging for 20 years. Before coming to the Sheriff's Office, he had

BRIAN BUCKLEY

His current affiliations include the American Cancer Society, the Massachusetts Senior Games, the National Association of Basketball Coaches, the South Shore Coalition of Workers with the Elderly and the National Council on Aging.

"I look forward to this unique opportunity at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and the many challenges it will bring," Buckley said.

Currently, Bellotti's office has a variety of separate youth and senior citizen programs.

Senior programs include the TRIAD and "Are you O.K.?" programs, which offer free health, safety and quality of life services to Norfolk County senior citizens.

Youth initiatives include the DARE Jail Tours Programs, the Managing At-Risk Youth Program in Quincy, Teen Dating Violence Seminars and the Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy summer camp in Braintree.

been the North Quincy High School athletic director since 2000.

A former Quincy Public School teacher, Buckley was also Youth Coordinator for the town of Concord.

Buckley has been head coach of boys basketball for Quincy Junior College, and also served as head coach of girls basketball for Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

Buckley is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, Boston State College and Boston State Graduate School.

general in 1986.

Cahill showed a stunning display of political strength in the Sept. 17 primary, defeating three other candidates for the Democratic nomination, including one with the same last name, Rep. Michael Cahill of Beverly.

He now faces Republican Daniel A. Grabauskas of Ipswich, former Registrar of Motor vehicles and Massachusetts Green Party candidate James O'Keefe of Somerville.

Democrat William D. Delahunt, the first Congressman from Quincy since John Quincy Adams, is opposed by Republican Luiz Gonzaga of Barnstable.

Patrick McDermott, former Ward 3 city councillor, now administrative assistant in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, is challenging Register of Probate Richard P. Schmidt of Weymouth.

McDermott won the Democratic nomination against fellow Quincy resident Mark H. Tobin in the primary election.

Schmidt, a Republican, was appointed to the post by Acting Gov. Jane Swift when Thomas Patrick Hughes of Quincy, retired a year ago. Hughes, a Democrat, has endorsed McDermott.

Romney and O'Brien have balanced their candidacies: Romney, a businessman, has Kerry Murphy Healey of Beverly as his lieutenant governor running mate and O'Brien has Boston businessman Christopher F. Gabrielli as hers.

Three third party candidates could possibly siphon crucial votes if O'Brien and Romney lock in a close election. Polls show a still large number of undecided voting.

The three third party candidates are Carla Howell, Libertarian; Jill Stein, Massachusetts Green Party candidate; and Independent Barbara Johnson.

The ballot also contains three state-wide referenda.

Question 1 would eliminate the state income tax after July 1, 2003.

Free Transportation To Polls For Handicapped

Bruce Ayers, of Ayers Handicapped Conversion Center, will provide free transportation to physically challenged persons wishing to vote Nov. 5.

Question 2 would require that all public school children be taught solely in English.

Question 3 would advise the Legislature that political campaigns should be publicly funded.

Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation is virtually re-elected before the first ballot is cast.

State Sen. Michael W. Morrissey and Reps. Bruce J. Ayers, Arthur Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano have no Republican or third party opposition.

Dist. Atty. William R. Keating of Sharon and County Commissioner Peter H. Collins of Milton, both Democrats, also are unchallenged.

Weymouth Councillor Joseph A. Connolly, also a Democrat, is running unopposed for county treasurer. He won the nomination in the September primary defeating Democrats Thomas P. Koch of Quincy and Braintree Town Treasurer Michael J. Joyce.

There are three other state-wide contests on the ballot in addition to the governor's and state treasurer's races.

Sen. John Kerry is opposed by Michael E. Cloud, Wayland Libertarian.

Secretary of State William Francis Galvin is challenged by Republican Jack

E. Robinson, III of Boston.

Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci has two opponents: Kamal Jain of Littleton, a Libertarian, and John James Xenakis, Framingham Independent.

Attorney General Thomas F. Reilly and Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr., both Democrats, are unopposed.

Three Referenda On Ballot Next Tuesday

In addition to the candidates for state and county offices, Quincy voters will be faced with yes-or-no choices on three referenda, two establishing new laws and one advisory only to the legislature. They are:

Question 1 - Eliminating the State Income Tax

A YES vote would eliminate any state personal income tax for income or other gain on or after July 1, 2003.

A NO vote would make no change in state tax laws.

Question 2 - English Language Education in Public Schools

A YES vote would require that, with limited exceptions, all public school children must be taught English by being taught all subjects in English and being placed in English language classrooms.

A NO vote would make no changes in English language education in public schools.

Question 3 - Taxpayer Funding for Political Campaigns

A YES vote would advise that the voters favor taxpayer money being used to fund political campaigns for public office in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

A NO vote would advise that the voters do not favor taxpayer money being used to fund political campaigns for public office in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Question 3 is advisory only and does not have the force of law.

New Voting Locations For Two Precincts

City Clerk Joseph Shea reminds voters in two of Quincy's 30 precincts that they will be casting their ballots at new locations in next Tuesday's state election.

The location for Precinct 3 of Ward 1 has been changed from the Quincy Vo-Tech School to the Thomas Crane Public Library meeting room, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The new location for Precinct 3 of Ward 6, formerly North Quincy High School, is now the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St.

The two new locations were used for the first time in the Sept. 17 state primary election.

Shea said Precinct 3 of Ward 1 was shifted to the Crane library because it is more convenient and is handicapped accessible.

Precinct 3 of Ward 6 was moved to the Beechwood Community Center because of overcrowding at North Quincy High School during voting hours where two precincts were located. Beechwood also has better handicapped accessibility, he said.

Precinct 1 of Ward 6 will continue to vote at North Quincy High School.

Shea said if voters have any questions or wish to verify their registration status they should call his office or the Board of Registrars at 617-376-1142.

Unenrolled In Biggest Gain

City Now Has 52,977 Registered Voters

Quincy has 52,977 registered voters eligible to vote in next Tuesday's state election.

This is an increase of 857 from that of the Sept. 17 primary election.

Democrats still dominate with 24,969 -- up 281.

Unenrolled, however, showed the biggest gain --

713 -- and are in second place with 20,950.

Republicans now number 6,617 -- a drop of 44 since September.

The remaining 441 registered voters are enrolled in eight other parties of which the Libertarian party leads with 274.

The Questions

QUESTION 1 LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve of a law which would provide no income or other gain realized on or after July 1, 2003, would be subject to the state personal income tax. No vote was taken on the initiative petition by the Senate or House of Representatives before May 1, 2002?

A YES VOTE would eliminate any state personal income tax for income or other gain realized on or after July 1, 2003.

A NO VOTE would make no change in state tax laws.

QUESTION 2 LAW PROPOSED BY INITIATIVE PETITION

Do you approve a law on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives before May 1, 2002?

A YES VOTE would require that with limited exceptions, all public school children must be taught English by being taught all subjects in English and being placed in English language classrooms.

A NO VOTE would make no changes in English language education in public schools.

QUESTION 3 THIS QUESTION IS NOT BINDING

Do you support taxpayer money being used to fund political campaigns for public office in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts?

Kids To Cast Ballots Tuesday

Once again, as they have been doing since 1995, Quincy schoolkids from high school down to elementary school age will be able to cast their votes alongside their parents next Tuesday.

But don't expect them to follow the old folks lead in choosing a candidate to their liking.

"Two years ago, they went for 'Al Gore,'" said Arthur Keough, the Kid Voting USA coordinator in Quincy, "but in Wards 3 and 5 there was a big turnout for George Bush."

The Kids Voting USE

curriculum, known as "Civics Alive!" is designed to cultivate awareness of democracy among young people with a goal of building an informed and participating electorate.

Elementary and Middle School youngsters accompany their parents to the polls where they check in, receive a special ballot and retire to a separate booth to cast their votes.

High school students vote at their high schools.

"In the last two years," said Keough, "we have had 46 and 45 percent of the kids show up to vote in presidential, state and local elections at the 30 polling places in the city."

"It is our hope that Kids Voting USA will instill the habit of voting in our young people."

City Receives $290,000 For Fire Dept. Equipment

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Mayor Phelan.

"It is essential that they have the proper equipment to do their jobs and protective gear that meets the necessary standards is a positive step toward ensuring their safety."

The grant request was written in-house by the Quincy firefighters who asked for funding to equip them with structural firefighting equipment that meets National Fire Protection standards.

The total cost to fulfill this request was $415,375. FEMA will provide 70 percent of the total, or $290,763, and the remaining 30 percent, or $124,375, will come out of the 2003 budget from existing funds.

St. Moritz Social Club License Suspended

Chairman Joseph Shea said there are about five private clubs in the city of which some have been in existence for 40 years. He said when they find clubs in violation of selling liquor without a license he advises them to come before the License

Board for a license. He said the clubs that choose not to come before the board have since moved out of the city.

He mentioned one club that advocates no alcohol with sober friends playing cards.

He said he and the board "do not look the other way when they know about these clubs," and quickly added "you have to have a license to serve alcohol in this city."

He said because there seems to be some confusion over the sale of alcohol, he said he will once again begin distributing literature that states the rules and regulations throughout the city. He said the literature was sent on April of this year.

Falco stating that the "truth will come out" said that there would be further investigation into the matter.

Fresh Vegetables, Bread At $1 A Bag

Fresh bread and vegetables are being distributed at $1 a bag Wednesdays at the Fore River Clubhouse, Nevada Road, Quincy Point.

Upgrading Your Living Space

Lighting: An Easy Way To Improve A Home

(NAPS) — In this economy, people turn to investing in things closest to them — particularly the comfort of their homes. One of the easiest and most affordable ways to do that is with lighting. Redecorating with lighting is not only a nice reflection on a home, it can upgrade your living space.

Whether you install a dramatic chandelier, accent your house with outdoor lighting or simply plug in a beautifully designed table lamp, lighting does more than complete the décor — it boosts the value of your home, creates atmosphere and helps to express your personal style.

The reason lighting is one of the most economical investments for homeowners is that it can make a great difference without involving major renovation expenses.

"People see their homes as havens from day-to-day difficulties," says Todd Langner of Kichler Lighting, the world's largest decorative lighting company. "The right lighting sets a comforting tone and conveys to guests that the people who live there value home and family."

Dollar-for-dollar lighting adds more to your home because it makes an impact in more than one way: when it's off, the light fixture or lamp itself is a design element, and when it's on, the light plays can dramatically affect the look and feel of the room.

Lighting also is functional: It can make a small room look spacious and a large room seem cozy. Here are some tips to help you choose the right light:

- Consider the size of the room. Simply put, it should be in the right proportion for your space. It's a good idea to bring a photo of the room as well as its dimensions to the showroom, so the lighting professional will be able to tell you the proper height, width and extension to select.

- Ask yourself what you want the lighting to accomplish? Do you want to illuminate the whole room, highlight a task or accent an area for effect?

- Use a professional, certified electrician for installation. Referral from an authorized lighting showroom can mean the work is backed by service guarantees.

- Bring the inside out. Don't forget that outdoor lighting not only adds to the curb appeal of your house, it can increase its value and provide security for your surroundings.

- Look for quality in design and craftsmanship. Remember that lighting should look as beautiful in a room in the daytime when it's turned off as it does in the evening.

For more bright ideas on lighting, visit www.kichler.com or call 1-800-659-9000 to find a Kichler-authorized dealer.

the Friends of the Shadducks need your help

On May 15th, Jack Shadduck returned home from a school field trip, did his paper route, and went outside to play. Jack's feet started to feel strange and he kept tripping and falling to the ground. After struggling to get home, within one hour Jack was paralyzed from the neck down and was in serious respiratory distress.

Jack was diagnosed with "transverse myelitis", a neurological syndrome caused by inflammation of the spinal cord. After being hospitalized for three months, Jack remains paralyzed and must breathe with the help of a life-supporting ventilator.

The Friends of the Shadducks was formed by a group of friends of the family to raise funds to help offset the incredible costs that are expected to exceed $500,000 in the first year alone, much of which is not covered by insurance.

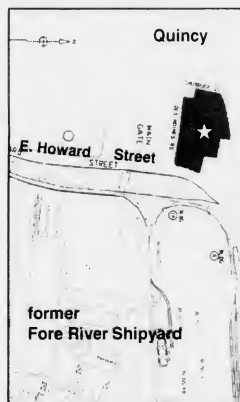

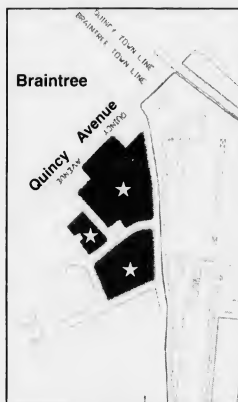

Friends of the Shadducks Cocktail Party November 15, 2002

Featuring a live band, disc jockey, live and silent auction and raffle... prizes include a trip to St. Martin, Patriots tickets & more. Special guests will include past and present Boston sports personalities.

We are in need of unique and desirable auction items for our silent and live auctions, advertisers for our ad book, and people to purchase event and raffle tickets and join us for the fun!

All proceeds go toward easing the burden of costs for Jack's medical treatment and care.

Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

Affordable Window Treatments

(NAPS) — Cost-conscious shoppers may be pleased to discover a window of opportunity in their search for stylish yet affordable window treatments.

Now there is a wide range of alternative wood window treatments that provides the look of wood without the high cost. And, unlike wood, these products will not warp, crack, peel, or fade even in humid areas or direct sunlight.

Two new additions to this category from Hunter Douglas offer the trendy looks of shutters and Roman shades with the convenient flexibility of a blind.

The New Shape of Blinds
An alternative wood window covering that combines the soft, billowing lines of a Roman shade with the convenient control of a blind is Hunter Douglas's Shaperies™.

The blind has gently contoured extra-wide 2 1/2" slats with a textured linen finish that give it the appearance of a fabric Roman shade. But the slats open up for light control and wide view through or shut tight for maximum light control for privacy. Shaperies is available in shades of white and neutral colors.

Shutter Blinds

Everwood® Country Side shutter blinds capture the look of real wood and offer an innovative, board-on-board design that creates a shadow effect. Overlapping extra-wide 2 1/2" slats add depth, dimension and character to a room. The slats can also be reverse-closed for a totally different look that mimics one-inch wood blinds.

The unique locking design and an exclusive light-blocking feature provide optimum light control and privacy, making this blind a good choice for bedrooms. Color options include a range of neutral whites and contemporary wood tones.

For more information, call 1-800-937-7895.

Special Maintenance For Seasonal Changes

Quick Fixes To Prevent Future Headaches

(NAPS) — Seasonal changes require special maintenance to keep your home in good condition. So, although there may still be many sunny days ahead, you'll be happy that you got a jump-start on your home maintenance projects now once the cold winds start rushing in.

In order to prepare your home for rougher weather, there are several simple do-it-yourself projects that can result in substantial savings in the long run. Here is a checklist of projects to keep in mind when you do an inspection of your home:

Roof

Many times homeowners don't notice a roof leak until it's too late. Be sure to inspect your roof at least once a year to check signs of damage or aging. Pay close attention to flashing around chimneys or skylights and check for many loose shingles. A roof and flashing sealant, such as PL Polyurethane Roof and Flashing Sealant, can easily be used to seal the flashing gaps or to reattach loose shingles. The polyurethane formula will create a waterproof and weatherproof seal once cured.

Doors

Caulking is the perfect solution for small window air leaks, but it won't work for large drafts between the door and door frame. For these pesky leaks, weather stripping is the answer. Fall is the perfect time for installation, since the adhesive on most weather-stripping products will not stick properly once the temperature falls below 40 degrees Fahrenheit. When choosing the appropriate product, no single type of weather stripping works for every application. Be sure to read packaging closely. Many brands market a variety of weather-stripping seals to provide a specialized product for nearly any application.

Gutters

Clogged gutters can create a variety of problems such as leaking basements, leaking roofs or rotting wood. To avoid costly home repairs, you need to clean gutters twice a year to remove all leaves and debris. To avoid this yearly hassle, consider gutter shields, such as the PermaFlow Gutter Guard System. It can eliminate gutter clogging and debris buildup while maintaining water flow, even in extreme downpour conditions. This easy-to-use system clips to the edge of your gutter and slides under your shingles for easy installation.

Windows

Small air leaks around windows not only allow energy to escape from the house, but also can cause damage to your insulation from dampness. Luckily, caulking around windows can tackle this temperature and water problem easily. To start, be sure that the surface is clean and dry. Easy-to-use acrylic caulks, such as Polyseamseal Outdoor Window, Door & Siding Adhesive Caulk, are a great choice since they provide a durable weather-resistant, flexible seal with low odor and easy water cleanup.

Furnace

Servicing your furnace annually is the best way to ensure you'll be warm and cozy on those cold winter nights. In addition, dirty air filters in heating units restrict airflow and can cause your system to run longer, increasing energy use. Replace your air filters monthly for maximum benefit. In addition to energy savings, air filters also reduce dust, pollen and lint in the air.

Manager Change At Dunkin Donuts Delayed

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A "gathering of minds" was what Chairman Joseph Shea called Tuesday's License Board hearing regarding a transfer of management at Dunkin Donuts at 366 Centre St. to Mark Cafau.

They included Walter Sterling of Home Depot, the city's new traffic engineer Roy La Motte Jr. Atty. Michael Merisio representing Paul Govostes, the landlord of Dunkin Donuts, and Atty. Robert Fleming, counsel for Home Depot.

Fleming said Home Depot needs a right of entry from Dunkin Donuts and Speedy Oil. He said the plan would not solve all problems, but alleviate the "stacking in the a.m."

Chairman Joseph Shea said everyone is aware of the "snafu of traffic" caused by Dunkin Donuts and that everyone is working with the neighbors to solve the problems.

Walter White, director of inspectional services, suggested the transfer of management and that all agreements between Dunkin Donuts, Home Depot and others be in writing.

LaMotte said the grant for the right of easement would have to be in writing and that is isn't a cure all but will help in general terms.

Citing traffic problems in the early morning hours, Fire Chief Paul O'Connell said he was driving down towards Dunkin Donuts one morning at 7:45 a.m. and said "we could've used a police officer."

Atty. Adam Chu, counsel for Dunkin Donuts, told the board that new operating methods a speed time and the re-arranging of the drive-thru window will help.

Merisio asked the board to grant the transfer for now, and then focus on engineering later.

The board will continue the hearing until Nov. 26, when the traffic engineer and the city's law department review the plans.

Ward 4 Meeting Nov. 4 On Used Car Lot License

Ward 4 Councilor Bryan Connolly has scheduled a neighborhood meeting Monday, Nov. 4, at 6:30 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South

Quincy, to discuss a request by Mark Brewster's G & M Auto Sales for a used car lot at 30 Liberty St., the site of Bay State Equipment Corp.

The license request is slated to be heard by the License Board Tuesday, Nov. 19, at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall.

Fore River Railroad Crossing Work To Start Friday

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority will conduct a $700,000 railroad grade crossing improvement project a Howard St. and Quincy Ave. beginning Nov. 1.

The work involves improvements to these roadways where they intersect with Fore River Railroad. The work includes new roadway surfaces and crossing gates to provide additional safety for commuter and the train's crew.

Commuters in Quincy and Braintree, the MWRA said, should be aware of the following traffic impacts:

- Quincy Ave. will have traffic restricted to one lane in each direction starting at 9 p.m. Friday until 6 a.m. Monday, Nov. 4.

- East Howard St. will be closed to traffic and a detour will be in effect starting at 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 8 until 6 a.m. Monday, Nov. 11.

NQHS Partnership To Be Renewed

Quincy's Oldest school-community partnership, State Street Corporation/Boston Financial Data Services and North Quincy High School will renew its commitment for the 14th year at a partnership signing breakfast Thursday, Nov. 7 at 7:30 a.m. at North Quincy High School's atrium.

The opening of school will be delayed by one hour. Students will report to homeroom at 8:45 a.m.

FALL CAR CARE

Fifteen Ways To Stretch A Tank Of Gas

Sometimes we take our affordable energy sources and our driving styles for granted. But not this year with motorists paying high prices at the gas pumps. There's no time like the present to focus on a vehicle's gas mileage, says AAA.

Consider the significance of keeping a car in top condition. A neglected engine can increase fuel consumption by 10-20 percent. AAA advises motorists that attention to tires, motor oil and other vehicle maintenance will contribute to increased fuel economy.

Driving habits also matter. The U.S. Department of Energy reports that practicing fuel-efficient driving techniques can improve fuel mileage more than 10 percent. With that in mind, here are some tips from AAA to help stretch a tank of gas:

- Be sure your tires are properly inflated. Under-inflated tires can cause fuel consumption to increase by 6 percent. Check tires with a gauge regularly. Radial tires can be under-inflated and still look normal.
- Keep the front suspension and steering in proper alignment, and make sure brakes are properly adjusted to minimize rolling resistance.
- Check motor oil as recommended by the vehicle manufacturer. Consider choosing energy-conserving oil, which contains additives that reduce friction and increase a vehicle's fuel economy.
- Check and replace air filters. Clogged filters can cause up to a 10 percent increase in fuel consumption.
- Follow the recommended engine maintenance schedule in the owner's manual to ensure optimal engine performance and to conserve fuel.
- Don't use premium fuel

if your car does not require it. The expense is not necessary.

- Observe the speed limit. As you drive faster, aerodynamic drag increases. As a result, at speeds above 55 mph, fuel economy decreases rapidly.
- Use your overdrive gears during highway driving. This decreases your car's engine speed, reducing fuel consumption and engine wear.
- Take advantage of cruise control to help you maintain a constant speed when traveling on highways.
- Avoid hard acceleration and drive defensively; try to brake and accelerate smoothly.
- Idling unnecessarily wastes fuel. Keep in mind that most cars today do not need to be warmed up.
- Run errands with a plan. Try to make one trip instead of three.
- Take a load off your wheels. A trunk weighed down with heavy items can increase fuel consumption by 1-2 percent.
- Travel light. A loaded roof rack can decrease fuel economy by 5 percent.
- If possible, take advantage of carpools or ride-sharing programs.

Correct Maintenance Schedule Saves Money And The Environment

October is AAA Car Care Month, an appropriate time for motorists to consider how following the right maintenance procedures can help save money and the environment.

"Knowing what and when maintenance needs to be performed keeps consumers from over-maintaining as well as under-maintaining their vehicle," said AAA Southern New England Car Doctor John Paul. "It also cuts down on the over-use of environmentally sensitive products such as motor oil, aids in the conservation of gasoline and can prolong the overall life of a car."

Today's new vehicles can go longer between oil changes, often between 5,000 and 7,500 miles, meaning that more frequent oil changes can sometimes be a waste of money and an additional burden of the environment.

Proper tire maintenance—including proper inflation, regular rotation and balancing—also saves money by extending tire wear and reducing gasoline consumption.

For information on vehicle maintenance frequency, motorists should refer to their vehicle owner's manual.

A Rain-Ready Guide To Windshield Wipers

Since rain isn't a requirement to make sure your wipers are working properly, make a mental note to check them soon. Get behind the steering wheel of your parked car and press the button to squirt your windshield with washer fluid. (You might want to check your reservoir of washer fluid while you're at it). Watch to see if the wiper is efficiently removing fluid. If streaks are left behind, it may be time to change your wipers.

First, though, try this simple cleaning method to see if the wipers are not simply dirty. Take some of the same washer fluid that you put into your washer reservoir and place it on a rag or paper towel and clean the rubber part of the wiper to remove any dirt or build-up. Removing the dirt allows the rubber blade to make better contact with the window.

Weather and sun can also change the condition of the blades and diminish their effectiveness. If, after cleaning, the wiper still does not clean the fluid off the window, the rubber blade may be cracked or hardened and not making full contact with the window surface. Check the condition of the rubber. A good wiper blade should stand up straight and the rubber part of the blade should be soft and without cracks.

If it is time to replace the wiper blades, there are two types of replacements. The most common is wiper blade refills sold in pairs. These replace just the rubber part of the wiper. Before buying a replacement blade, you will need to know the proper length of your wiper blade. Lengths vary from 18 to 24 inches on most model cars. Metal tabs on the end of the wiper lock the rubber blade into place on the arm. Squeezing the tabs together should allow you to pull out the old blade. Squeeze tabs again to insert the new blade.

The other type of replacement is the complete wiper arm assembly. This type of replacement might require a technician because of certain tools that are needed to remove the wiper arm.

34-22 Victory Over Plymouth South Red Raiders Ride Strong Second Half

By CHRIS POISSON

With the way the first half ended last Friday night, it didn't look like it was going to the North Quincy High School football team's day.

The Red Raiders had just given up a touchdown to Plymouth South with 25 seconds left. Trailing 14-8, they decided not to take a knee with 16 seconds remaining and the ball on its 29.

Instead, senior quarterback Kevin Holleran completed a 22-yard pass to senior split end Rob Mooney and then fired a 40-yard pass along the right sideline to senior Chris Dolbear. Dolbear cut back inside an end, threw the end zone only to be tripped up on an inch short to end the half.

Rather than deflating the team, the play sparked North Quincy as it scored on its first four possessions in the second half en route to a convincing, 34-22 victory at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"Things are starting to come together," said head coach Tony Green. "Defensively, the kids are starting to understand what we want them to do. The schemes and game plans are solid week to week."

North Quincy (3-4 overall, 2-3 Old Colony League) will face a tougher opponent tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 when Silver Lake (5-2) strolls into town. The Lakers are coming off a 36-6 win over Falmouth.

The Red Raiders, who have been injured all season, were missing four starters. Senior Ryan Farnham (concussion), senior Dave Buttimer (ankle), senior Corey Piazza (leg) and junior Jimmy Burke (hamstring) all sat out the game.

"That's a good day for us," Green said sarcastically, as his team has been plagued by injuries this season.

Holleran easily turned his best outing of the season, completing 6-of-9 passes for two touchdowns while also rushing for a score. Senior tailback Chris Dolbear racked up 130 yards on 70 carries (eight TDs) and senior tight end Matt Francis finished with three catches for 67 yards and two scores.

Of course, all this offensive production was made possible by the play of the offensive line, which opened holes for the backs and protected its quarterback well. The boys up front included left tackle Pat O'Brien, left guard George Phipps, center Darryl Zoia, right guard Kosta Kalpakidis and right tackle Rob Fleming.

On the first play from scrimmage in the second half, Mooney made a juggling, 58-yard catch down to the PS 2 and on the next play Holleran scored on a keeper to even the score at 14.

After forcing the Panthers to go three-and-out, North Quincy struck again when Holleran fired a 26-yard TD pass to Francis, who hurled a defender at the 5 to reach the end zone. Senior Linay Laze's extra point made it 21-14.

The defense, which held the Panthers to under 100 total yards in the second half, stuffed Plymouth South on a fourth-and-2 play to hand the ball back to the offense at the PS 42.

Five plays later, Holleran connected with Francis once again for a 30-yard TD pass and a 28-14 lead after Laze's extra point with 2:22 left in the third.

Kevin Holleran threw lights out and Matt Francis had his at home, Green said.

Again, the defense of the Panthers in fourth down forced a 30-yard back and forth TD pass to senior tight end Matt Francis. Dolbear picked up the game with a touchdown in the fourth quarter, including a 9-yard TD run for a 34-14 lead with 10:56 left in the fourth quarter.

Plymouth South scored its final touchdown with about three minutes left in the game on quarterback Adam Long's 39-yard TD pass to Kyle Perry.

In the first quarter Plymouth South fumbled on the opening series and Dalton recovered at the PS 49. North Quincy capitalized, rushing the ball nine straight times before Dolbear found paydirt from 3 yards out. Laze rushed for the 2-point conversion off a fake extra point.

The Panthers answered immediately when Perry returned the ensuing kickoff 78 yards for a score. Long hit Jason Bond for the 2-point conversion to tie the game at 8 with 3:20 left in the first.

Late in the half, Plymouth South ran its two-minute offense to perfection as Long completed six straight passes, setting up Stephen Healey's 5-yard TD run for a 14-8 lead.

will be played this Saturday at 7 p.m. at Kelleher Field in Marlboro.

SENIOR CHRIS DOLBEARE (31) cuts back through a hole opened by senior James Coughlin's (44) block on a Plymouth South defender. Dolbear finished with 140 yards and two touchdowns in North Quincy's 34-22 win last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

North Girls Qualify For State Soccer Tournament

The North Quincy High School girls' soccer team qualified for the Division 1 South Sectional Tournament for the sixth straight year last Friday with a hard-fought, 3-0 victory over Plymouth South at home.

On Monday, the Red Raiders closed the season with a 1-0 win at Hingham to finish the year with a 10-7-3 record.

Head coach Paul Bregoli said Tuesday before the pairings were announced that he expected his team to draw the 18th seed (out of 20) and play its game either today (Thursday) or Friday.

"Our kids have worked very hard to achieve the tour-namment this year," Bregoli said. "Our seniors have done a great job providing the leadership we needed to get us through some bleak times of late."

"We feel we've played very well in the past two weeks. Although we won't have a home game, we learned from last year it is who plays best that day as to who advances."

In the Hingham game, the Harbormen came in with only two losses, one of them a 2-1 set back to the Red Raiders.

North Quincy played sloppy early but got exceptional play from senior midfielder Katie Timmins, sophomore Eileen Price and senior defender Nancy Yankun.

Scoreless at halftime, the Red Raiders were saved time and again by junior keeper Kristina Manganaro, who had 15 saves, six of the spectacular variety.

Junior midfielder Ashley Ridge scored the lone goal, her first varsity score, 18 minutes into the second half, taking a pass from Katy Faherty and finding the net with low, hard shot.

The defense, led by Manganaro, thwarted each Hingham bid. Sarah Gregory, Amanda Saylor and Caitlyn Peters turned in strong games. Manganaro recorded Eight youngsters of the Quincy Track Club along with their coaches were recently honored by the City Council for their performance in last summer's 25th Hershey National Track and Field Championship in Hershey, Pa.

Jacqueline Dugas, Julia Free, Julia Nee and Emily

Hannon (not present) finished seventh in the 4x100-meter relay for girls ages 9-10, while Akil Benjamin, Benson Luc, Mark Jordan and Kevin Borst also finished seventh in the 4x100-meter relay for boys ages 13-14.

Their coaches are Geoff Hennessy, Dave Allen and Kirk Vaughan (not present).

In their road to the national championship, the youngsters won the Quincy championship and the state championship.

They were cited for "outstanding state and national athletic achievement that has brought great honor and pride to the city of Quincy."

Quincy Girls Bow To Hull

The Quincy High School girls' soccer team dropped a heartbreaker at home last week to Hull, 1-0.

Senior center Sammy Caulfield scored the game-winning for the Pirates in the 24th minute of the second half.

The field conditions were less than ideal as both teams, which have struggled this season, slipped and skidded on the rain-soaked, muddy Varsity Field.

Junior goalie Sarah Shea made several outstanding saves in the first half to keep the Presidents in the hunt, including one where she flew into the air to tip the ball over the net.

"I am proud of this team," said head coach Don Martin. "This has been a tough year for injuries, with our varsity team down to 14 players."

Quincy has played tough through these injuries. Martin called up several players from the junior varsity squad, including sophomores Katie Connolly and Danielle Rand along with freshmen Marissa Monaco and Donika Hagizah.

"I have players who play every minute of every game,"

Martin said. "This has really increased their skill level and stamina."

Quincy had two players named to the Atlantic Coast League All-Star team this season: junior captain and two-time all-star Kaila Saxe and senior captain Courtney Peterson.

"Last year Kaila was our leading scorer, who by the way also scored in last year's All-Star game," Martin said. "Kaila plays great in the back and has the speed to challenge any player."

Courtney Peterson has been the heart and soul of this team. She is a real leader both on and off the field. Courtney, due to our injury situation, has been the multi-positional player. She has played five different positions during the course of several games, filling in wherever she is needed."

Senior Kristen Clarke received the league Sportsmanship Award. "Kristen is someone who never complains and demonstrates excellent team spirit," Martin said. "She never gets down and works very hard."

Presidents Blank Nauset 14-0 For Fourth Victory

By CHRIS POISSON

With its 14-0 victory over Nauset last Saturday afternoon, the Quincy High School football is in the hunt for the Atlantic Coast League championship.

Although there are still three leagues games left on the schedule, just being able to talk about championships and Quincy High in relation to each other is...well...something different.

After going through rebuilding phases in recent years, the Presidents now seem to have made the quantum leap to championship contenders.

"Talk to me about that next week," said head coach Bob Noble. "If we win, then I think we're legitimate contenders for the championship. At this point we can play with anybody. The days of us getting our heads handed to us are over."

Quincy is 4-2 overall (both losses coming in overtime) and 2-1 in the ACL, a game behind front-runners Plymouth North (6-0) and defending champion Whitman-Hanson (5-1) with 3-0 marks.

Tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 Quincy will host Sandwich (4-2, 1-2), which is coming off a 21-7 loss to Plymouth North. The following week the Presidents host Dennis-Yarmouth and then they head to Plymouth North for a showdown that could determine the league championship.

"Sandwich is not a bad football team," Noble said. "Defensively, they're very good. They will be the best team we've played since Whitman-Hanson. Our goal is to get to the Plymouth North game with only one league loss."

In the Nauset game, the steady rain created horrible field conditions that limited what both teams could do.

"In my 17 years of coaching I've never seen it rain like that," Noble said. "It's just something you have to overcome."

Although the weather was a factor, the real story of the game turned out to be Quincy's defense. The Presidents held the Warriors to just 106 yards of total offense on 46 plays. Nauset ran the ball 37 times, eight of which resulted in minus-55 yards, and completed only one of nine passes for 19 yards.

"The story of the game was defense," Noble said. "They had the field position advantage much of the game, yet only had 106 yards total offense."

In the second quarter, Nauset fumbled an option play deep in its own territory and senior defensive end and captain Steve Ekunseitan scooped the ball up and ran 10 yards to the Nauset 6-yard line.

On third-and-12, senior quarterback Kevin O'Connell hooked up with junior tightback J.J. Niamkey on a screen for a touchdown pass. Senior Thiago Goes added the extra point. O'Connell turned in another efficient outing, completing 5-of-6 passes for 94 yards and no interceptions.

In the third quarter, Nauset ran 16 offensive plays, gaining only 40 yards, while Quincy ran just one play. And that was all it needed.

After the defense forced the Warriors to punt on the opening series, Quincy received the ball on its 15 and Niamkey broke free for an 85-yard TD run. Goes' extra point made it 14-0.

Niamkey finished the day with 137 yards on 14 carries and now has rushed for 757 yards this season on only 76 attempts — that's nearly a first down per carry.

Dating back to the final four games of last season, Niamkey has rushed for well over 1,000 yards in his first 10 varsity games at tailback, in which the team has gone 8-2.

"Obviously he has been a major factor in our success," Noble said. "We're not coaching any different than when we were 1-10. We're blessed with some great talent right now and J.J. is part of that."

North Girls Tourney Bound

her eight shutout and her fourth in the last five games.

In the Plymouth South game, North Quincy came out focused and fired up, dominating the visitors from the opening whistle. Senior quad-captain Christina Conley combined with freshman forward Lauren Milone to put the Red Raiders on top, 1-0.

Junior midfielder Jenn Ryan netted her fifth of the year two minutes later, again assisted by Milone, hitting a low shot to the right corner of the goal.

The Red Raiders played solid defense in front of Mangano, limiting the Panthers to harmless attempts on net. Seniors Erin McFarland, Jessica Jacques and Lisa Schilone stifled every foray into North Quincy territory.

With eight minutes left in the game, Conley notched her second goal of the game and seventh of the season, taking a long feed from Ridge and rifling a bullet past the Plymouth South keeper.

Conley finished the season with seven goals and seven assists, good for fourth place in the Old Colony League scoring race.

Erin McFarland, Lauren Kalil, Christina Conley Soccer All-Stars

Three senior captains on the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team were named to the Old Colony League All-Star Team.

Sweeper Erin McFarland, midfielder Lauren Kalil and forward Christina Conley all played in the OCL's 4-2 win over the Atlantic Coast League all-stars. Conley scored the OCL's fourth goal, taking Kalil's cross and one-timing a shot into the net.

Also, senior midfielder Katie Timmins was selected to receiver her team's OCL Sportsmanship Award.

DISC BRAKES

The disc (brake rotor) in disc brakes mounts to the hub with the wheel. When the brakes are applied, the hydraulically activated caliper clamps the brake shoes (pads) against the rotor. The friction caused by the pads stopping the spinning of the rotor causes heat, which can soar to over 1,000 degrees F. in a hard stop. This heat must be dissipated very quickly so that the rotor can cool down for the next stop. And because the front rotors do about 75% of the work in a front-drive vehicle (over 50% in a rear-drive), the front rotors have to dissipate more quickly than the rears. Thus, they may have a vented layer sandwiched between the two contact layers. When you bring your car into

The Unseen Danger Of Carbon Monoxide Health And Safety Tips For The Home Heating Season

(NAPS) — The weather is turning colder and it's time to fire up the furnace for winter. Before you turn on that furnace or portable heater for the first time, though, be aware of some important safety steps you need to take every year.

Any heater that burns gas, coal, kerosene or charcoal can leak carbon monoxide. If a furnace or other appliance that burns one of these fuels is not vented properly, carbon monoxide can build up inside your home and cause illness and possibly death.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, invisible gas that kills more than 500 people every year in the United States. Inhaling carbon monoxide can cause headache, dizziness, weakness, vomiting, chest pain and confusion. High levels of carbon monoxide can cause a person to pass out and possibly die.

Follow these important steps to protect yourself and your family from the unseen danger of carbon monoxide.

- Install a working carbon monoxide detector in your house. Check the battery every time you check your smoke detector batteries.

- Every year have an expert inspect all of your appliances that burn fuel, such as your furnace, gas water heater or portable butane or kerosene burner.

- Never burn anything in an improperly vented stove or fireplace and never use a gas oven to heat your house. Such actions can cause carbon monoxide to build up.

- Do not run a gasoline-powered generator in an enclosed space (like your basement) or outside a window where its exhaust could blow into your home.

- Never run your car in the garage with the garage door closed. If your garage is attached to your house, close the door to the house any time you run your car in the garage, even when the garage door is open.

- When it snows this winter, clean snow and ice out of your car's tailpipe. A blocked tailpipe can cause exhaust to enter your car.

New Ally In The Pursuit Of Good Prostate Health

(NAPS) — New research reveals that multivitamins can help defend against chronic diseases including prostate cancer. Here is the latest information on how you can reduce your risk for one of the three top men's health concerns:

- One in three . . . and rising. Current research and statistics show that men account for over 600,000 heat attacks each year, that high blood pressure is the leading cause of heart disease in men, and remarkably, that one in three men is at risk for prostate problems and one in six at risk for prostate cancer. The good news is that there is a new resource available to men to help them protect their prostate health.

- The power of pizza. Emerging research shows that a diet high in lycopene can be a powerful tool to protect your prostate health. Lycopene is found in nature in fruits and vegetables and is the plant chemical that gives tomatoes their red color. It is found in tomatoes and tomato-based foods such as ketchup, salsa and pizza sauce. Research shows that a diet high in lycopene, an antioxidant that helps combat free radicals in the body that can damage DNA and cells, may reduce the risk of prostate cancer. In fact, researchers at Harvard found that men who ate at least 10 servings of tomato-based foods (which contain lycopene) per week were 45 percent less likely to develop prostate cancer.

- "One tomato, two tomato . . ." While lycopene can be found in everyday foods, getting optimal amounts of the antioxidant may be difficult. In fact, researchers estimate that four out of five people do not get the recommended five servings of fruits and vegetables each day. To aid in getting your daily nutrition needs, One-A-Day has introduced a new multivitamin supplement tailored especially for men's health needs. One-A-Day Men's Health Formula is a complete multivitamin with 22 key nutrients, including lycopene, zinc, selenium and vitamin E to support prostate health.

- A little goes a long way. The overall health benefits of adding a multivitamin to a normal healthy diet are substantial. In fact, Harvard researchers recently made the landmark recommendation that all Americans take a multi-vitamin to supplement their diets. The report, released in the Journal of the American Medical Association, showed that multi-vitamins can help reduce the risk of chronic diseases such as heart disease and cancer.

- Commit! Health conscious men can never have too many allies while striving for good overall health. A healthy diet, exercise and multivitamins such as One-A-Day Men's Health Formula with lycopene can provide critical health advantages for years to come.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ORAL HEALTH REPORT CARD

In May of 2000, the Surgeon General suggested that we adopt a national oral health plan. As an outgrowth of that report, Oral Health America issued a report card for 2001-2002, in which it gave the nation an overall grade of "C," up from "C-minus" last year. While this shows a small improvement, much more still needs to be done. One of the biggest problems involves access to care. Nearly one-third of U.S. adults did not see a dentist all of last year. Part of this problem is financial in nature. More than 100 million Americans do not have dental insurance. And, as far as logistics go, there are simply not enough dentists in some rural areas.

It makes sense to do anything possible to prevent injury. This column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Our family oriented practice encourages comprehensive complete care with emphasis on prevention through early detection. We'll be sure to review your oral and general health history and give you all the options available to you. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Your dental health is our number one priority. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for gentle care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

Carol E. Herbai, 79

Recipient Of Clara Barton Award,
Quincy Sun Citizen Of Year In 2000

A memorial service Carol E. (Tunte) Herbai, 79, of Quincy, a recipient of the Red Cross Clara Barton Humanitarian Award and The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year in 2000, was held Oct. 26 at the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy Center.

Mrs. Herbai died Oct. 22 at Quincy Nursing and Rehabilitation Hospital.

She was a volunteer with the Red Cross for 64 years, joining the organization in 1938 when her husband joined the Navy.

She served with chapters all over the country, including California, Virginia, Texas and Maine, and with the British Red Cross in a leper colony in Trinidad.

She received the Clara Barton Humanitarian Award -- the Red Cross organization's highest honor -- for embodying "the spirit of outstanding dedication to easing human suffering and providing humanitarian service, relief, courage and compassion to those in distress."

The Quincy Sun recognized Mrs. Herbai for her outstanding community and volunteer service with her selection as the newspaper's Citizen of the Year in 2000.

She was selected for the honor by a panel of judges from a field of 38 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Mrs. Herbai had served as president of the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary since 1994 and also served in that capacity in 1990 and 1991.

During her tenure, the hospital estimated the Auxiliary raised more than $400,000 for hospital equipment and other needs through operating the Gift Shop, conducting Heart Tag Days, Book Sales and other activities.

CAROL E. HERBAI

"Carol was the heart and soul of the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary," said Christine Schuster, RN, President and CEO of Quincy Medical Center. "She was very much a part of our medical center family and the community of Quincy."

"She had wonderful zest for life and a devotion to helping others, and we will miss her. We will try to capture her 'I can do anything' spirit as we carry out some of her plans for the future," Schuster said.

Mrs. Herbai also served as chairwoman for Volunteers for the Greater Boston Chapter and a member of the Central Area Red Cross Board.

She was also volunteered for other organizations, including the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus.

She was a lifelong resident of Quincy.

Mrs. Herbai is survived by her husband, Zoltan Herbai; three daughters, Laurel Schlosser of Merrimack, Patricia A. Herbai of Charlestown and Carol E. Peicarski of Tucson, Ariz.; a sister, Evelyn Featherstone of Middleboro; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Many wise people have written about one of the most precious of human faculties - Memory... Pleasant memories must be arranged in advance... Memory is the diary that we all must carry about with us... Memory was given to mortals so that they might have roses in December... A bad memory memory is not one that forgets, but one that remembers the wrong things...

We are all ruled by our memories. It is also said that we can choose which of our memories are to rule us. These memories can be painful or they can bring joy...

Some people have long memories. They cherish grudges for a while life-time. They remember unwise and hateful words spoken in anger, or thoughtless acts which hurt. Others, too, have long memories. But these memories are joyful and pleasant. The highlights of all the years are there... favors done in an hour of need. Support given when the burden of life seemed unbearable. Heart-warming reminiscences of friends known, tender thoughts of family, a recalling of work well done...

Let us remember that memory is a God-given gift. The capacity to forget is also a gift when the things that need to be forgotten are bitter to the taste and incapable of being remedied. Let us make remembrances a blessing instead of a burden...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time to speak out on a difficult situation. You're known for your honesty, so people will listen and, perhaps, begin to make long-needed changes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's sharp business sense alerts you to question the positions of those trying to push the Bull into a deal. Demand to see proof of what they profess.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your quick thinking helps you get out of a troubling situation that was suddenly thrust upon you. Later on, you can expect to learn more about why it happened.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel you've dotted all your i's and crossed all your t's regarding that upcoming deal. But there might be some facts you've ignored. Check again.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Time for the Lion to be more physically active. It will help shake off any lingering Leonine lethargy and restore your energy levels, so you'll be prepared for what lies ahead.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Helping those in need at this time is laudable. But don't ignore your own needs, especially where it concerns your health. A medical checkup is a wise move.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good news:

Your outspoken views about a controversial on-the-job situation could find unexpectedly strong support from a most unlikely workplace faction.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might have to draw on your reservoir of spiritual strength to help someone special through a difficult time. Your loving attitude makes all the difference.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your proven leadership qualities make you the perfect person to take on an important workplace task.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although some compromise might need to be reached regarding your stand on an important issue, you'll still be able to get the most crucial points across.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A chance to make a career change carries both positive and uncertain possibilities. Best advice: Check it out thoroughly and don't be rushed into a decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're still a staunch supporter of one side of an important issue. But be prepared to deal with new information that could cause you to question your current stand.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're perceptive and quick to act when you sense that someone needs help. You are an always-dependable friend.

INVITATION FOR BIDS

CITY OF QUINCY INVITATION FOR BIDS

The City of Quincy invites sealed bids from Contractors for Snow Plowing of Brewer's Corner & Surrounding Streets. Bids will be received until: 11:00 a.m., November 6, 2002 at the Public Works Department, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169. Immediately following the deadline for proposals all proposals received within the time specified will be publicly opened and read aloud.

Contract Documents will be available for pickup at the Public Works Department between 8:00 am and 3:00 pm on or after October 23, 2002. There will be no charge for contract documents.

The City offers a minimum annual guarantee of $10,000. To the Successful Bidder.

The award(s) will be for a term of one (1) snow season, commencing no later than November 17, 2002 and ending on May 15, 2003. In addition, the City shall have the option to extend the contract for two successive snow seasons, at the prices stated in the Contractor's proposal. The exercise of each option shall be at the sole discretion of the City. In order to exercise its option, for the 2004 snow season the City will notify the Contractor no later than August 1, 2003 and no later than August 1, 2004 for the 2005 snow season. Multiple contracts may be awarded under this request, if in the best interest of the City to do so.

Surety is not required with this proposal. Proposals must be submitted with one original and one copy.

Any questions regarding this bid must be submitted in writing and faxed to the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 or Fax Number (617) 376-1969.

Municipalities in Massachusetts are not required by law to carry out public bidding for contracts for snowplow services. Interested vendors should take note that the provisions of the bidding laws DO NOT APPLY to this Proposal. In order to obtain the service with the highest value, the City of Quincy has voluntarily undertaken this competitive Proposal. The City also reserves the right to engage in negotiations with contractors after the proposals are opened.

The City of Quincy will be the sole judge of whether or not a proposal meets the criteria of this Open Solicitation, and its decision shall be final. The City of Quincy will be the sole judge of whether or not a particular quotation has the highest value for the City of Quincy compared to other quotation based on the selection criteria, and its decision shall be final.

61% Turnout Here

Romney, Cahill, McDermott Win

Quincy's Tim Cahill won his bid for state treasurer and Patrick McDermott rolled to an easy victory for Norfolk County register of probate in Tuesday's state election.

Shannon O'Brien ran into a bad omen here, barely squeaking by Republican Mitt Romney by a scant 25 votes in this Democratic stronghold.

Her vote of 14,907 to Romney's 14,882 in a city where she was expected to win big, proved a bad forecast for her state-wide.

Trailing 52 to 43 percent, she conceded before 11 p.m.

Cahill was running comfortably ahead of his Republican opponent, Daniel A. Grabauskas, former registrar of motor vehicles with returns incomplete at midnight.

McDermott piled up a huge vote margin throughout the county over Republican Richard P. Schmidt of Weymouth, who was appointed register of probate when Thomas Hughes of Quincy retired a year ago.

Cahill, Norfolk County treasurer and eight-term city councillor, is the first Quincy resident to win a state-wide office since Francis Bellotti was attorney general in 1986.

With O'Brien's loss, Cahill is seen as a potential gubernatorial candidate in the near future.

MITT ROMNEY

TIM CAHILL

Nearly 61 percent of Quincy's 52,977 registered voters went to the polls Tuesday.

Both Cahill and McDermott got a big send-off from voters in their hometown.

Cahill racked up 71 percent of the vote here, 22,105 to Grabauskas' 7,728 and 25 percent. James O'Keefe, Massachusetts Green Party candidate, had 978.

McDermott, former Ward 3 city councillor, had 78 percent of the Quincy vote to Schmidt's 21 percent -- 22,859 votes to 6,238.

Congressman William Delahunt of Quincy easily turned back a challenge from Republican Luiz Gonzaga of

PATRICK McDERMOTT

Barnstable in the 10th District.

Delahunt had 80 percent of the Quincy vote with 23,891 to Gonzaga's 5,869.

Senator John Kerry was re-elected with an easy win over Libertarian candidate Michael E. Cloud of Wayland. Quincy gave Kerry 23,681 votes to 4,997 for Cloud.

Quincy's Democrat Beacon Hill delegation -- Senator Michael Morrissey, and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano -- were re-elected without opposition.

The Quincy vote: Morrissey 24,154, Ayers 9,064, Tobin 10,161, Mariano 4,554.

16 Apply For Auditor Post, Choice Nov. 12

The City Council has received applications from no less than 16 people who are interested in the $84,132 post of city auditor, succeeding the resigned Michael McFarland.

Council President Daniel Raymondi said Councilors were to interview the candidates at a special meeting yesterday (Wednesday) and make a selection at a regular meeting Tuesday, Nov. 12.

Applicants were to have gotten their resumes and letters of interest to the Council office by Oct. 21 but were given an extra week to widen the scope of choice, said Raymondi.

Eight of the 16 finalists are from Quincy and the rest from other South Shore towns and Boston.

Quincy applicants include:

John Cormier, 53 Parke Ave.; Alison L. Djerf, 1 Grogan Ave.; Richard Fitzpatrick, 15 Young St.; Richard W. Kalunchik Jr., 500 Washington St.; John G. McMann, 45 Upton St.; Kevin Malone, 49 Division St.; James E. Mullaney III, 86 Sims Rd.; Warren Sproul, 27 Bell St.

Other applicants are: Steven Andrew Higgins and Annette Pollack, both of Braintree; James E. Peckham

Jr. and Linda Sacchetti, both of Weymouth; Pearlina Hargrove of Holbrook; Robin Leonard of Rockland; Victoria Middleton of Dorchester; and Edward J. O'Connell of Marshfield.

McFarland left the post at the end of October after three years to become business manager of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

The city auditor serves a three-year term before he comes up for reappointment by the City Council. McFarland had just been appointed to a second three years term when he resigned.

New Chief Names Crowley Second In Command

Falco's First Priority: Reorganize Police Dept.

By LANCE MORGANELLI

One of the first official actions to be taken by Quincy's 14th permanent Police Chief William Falco is a reorganization of the department that will make it once again "a strong hierarchical organization."

"We are going to start reorganizing shortly," said the 54-year-old Falco, adding that Capt. Robert Crowley, his leading rival for the post of chief, will play an important role in the newly reorganized department.

"The police department will be broken down into two main sections," said Falco, "one being the operations which will include all uniformed officers, detectives and any line functions that are within the department."

"Capt. Crowley will head this new section and will be second in command of the police department."

The other section will include all the department's administrative functions, said the new chief, whose promotion to succeed retired Chief Thomas W. Frane was announced Monday by Mayor William Phelan.

A Quincy police officer for 31 years, he had been acting chief since May, 2001, after Frane went on sick leave following heart surgery in January, 2001. Frane retired in July of this year.

"The average citizen will not see an immediate effect (of the reorganization)," said Falco, "but the people of the police department will see the immediate effect and that will take place within two to three weeks."

"We are trying to increase the accountability and the supervisory actions of the supervisors. We've gotten away from a strong hierarchical organization and more toward a liberal organization."

The Quincy Police Department has gone through turbulent times recently with the suspension of eight officers for an after-hours incident at a night club and successful law suits brought by two female officers and a civilian employee for sex discrimination.

Falco had the highest praise for his former rival, Crowley.

"I'd like to acknowledge the sincere professionalism of Capt. Crowley," he said. "He's a fine police officer, a dedicated police officer and we've worked many times together through the years."

"Prior to the selection, we met a few times and we said to each other that when the day comes that the selection has been made, whoever it may be, we will work closely with each other for the benefit of the city and the police department."

Crowley scored the highest on the Civil Service exam with a 90 score, Falco was second with an 87 and Capt. James A. McNeil third with 86. Since Mayor Phelan did not pick the man with the highest score, he must by law explain his choice to Civil Service.

"The position of police chief in the city of Quincy requires strong administrative skills and Chief Falco has demonstrated those required skills," the Mayor told a news conference.

"William Falco has proven that he is a good leader and has displayed intelligence and integrity in

Phelan Names Largey Director Of Operations

Mayor William Phelan has appointed Atty. Thomas L. Largey of Squantum as Director of Operations.

Largey, assistant city solicitor since May of this year, succeeds Ronald Donovan, who became Director of Information Technology for the city of Quincy.

Largey, a lifelong Quincy resident, is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and Providence College. He earned a Juris Doctorate with honors in 1985 from New England School of Law, where he was Law Review Editor and a two-time New England scholar for academic excellence.

"I am thrilled to have Mr. Largey join my staff in the Mayor's office," Phelan said. "He has been a strong presence in the community, particularly in the legal community, for many years. His intelligence and ability to grasp complex issues will be an asset to my office and to the people of Quincy."

Largey has been a trial attorney for 17 years, joining the firm of Barry, Sullivan and Largey in Quincy after law school. He and his wife, Kelly (Kiernan), have three children.

They used to make fun of people who didn't have money in the stock market. Not anymore!

Not long ago, some people thought having a Certificate or Passbook Savings Account was hopelessly old-fashioned. Today those former "stock market wizards" — the ones who couldn't talk about anything else! — have developed a new appreciation for the safety insured bank accounts provide. There's nothing like the peace of mind that comes with having money in the bank. And that's a fact that will still be true even when the market starts going up. Come see us today for an FDIC-insured investment that will give you your money back plus interest.

Too Bad Kilroy Won't Be There

Quincy will dedicate its World War II Memorial Statue next Monday, a highlight of this year's Veterans Day observance.

Kilroy won't be there.

It would have been appropriate even though he never wore an Army, Navy, Marine or Coast Guard uniform.

He never made it overseas but his famous calling card "Kilroy Was Here" did. It became a big morale booster for U.S. soldiers, sailors and marines fighting their way to Berlin and Tokyo.

"Kilroy Was Here" became as famous a World War II slogan as "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "Praise The Lord And Pass The Ammunition."

And it all started right here in Quincy.

There was a real Kilroy -- James J. Kilroy -- and he worked as a rate setter at the Fore River shipyard.

He coined the "Kilroy Was Here" phrase in a moment of frustration in 1942 as Fore River was turning out some of Uncle Sam's mightiest warships.

He told me some years ago how it began.

He was in charge of incentive work for testing the tanks of ships under construction. He would figure out how long it should take and how much it would cost to test the tanks for water tightness. Then he would assign the job to various work gangs.

"I was fairly new on the job at the time," Kilroy recalled. "And some of the men were giving me a bad time. They claimed I was making my estimates without first inspecting the job."

"One day, I was emerging from the tanks of a corvette when I overheard one worker saying to another, 'Hey, was Kilroy really here to inspect this job?'"

Kilroy -- somewhat miffed -- pulled a yellow crayon from his pocket and scrawled on the tank hatch for all to see: "Kilroy Was Here."

"And from that day on, he scribbled the same message on every ship he inspected to let everyone know he had been there."

"That did it," Kilroy said. "Soon the whole yard was in on the act."

The message began appearing everywhere in the yard. On ship bulkheads, tool shacks, lunch pails, etc. It sailed with the ships around the world.

The crews picked it up and left it throughout the Pacific: on a wall of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu. On coconut trees. And even eventually outside the Imperial Palace in Tokyo.

It was carried to London, Paris, Rome and Berlin. Scrawled on buildings, billboards, guns, planes, tanks, etc. Even, they say, on a general's helmet and an admiral's gig.

In its own way, "Kilroy Was Here" served as a morale booster during those grim, dark days of World War II. It always brought a smile.

"It scared the hell out of me," Kilroy confided. "I lived in fear someone would jail me for defacing property."

"I'd go into the rest room of a restaurant and find it scribbled on the wall. I was always afraid the manager might happen in and ask me my name."

Kilroy was a former Boston city councillor and former state representative from Jamaica Plain. He later lived in Halifax and served on the Silver Lake Regional High School Board.

After the war, the American Transit Association conducted a nationwide contest to determine who really originated the famed slogan.

Kilroy proved his claim. And for a prize he won a 22-ton trolley car which he converted into a play-house for his nine children.

And on it, they say, someone scrawled, "Kilroy IS Here."

His name belongs to World War II lore along with Roosevelt, Truman, Churchill, Eisenhower, MacArthur, Halsey, Patton, etc.

Jim Kilroy won't be there for the dedication next Monday. He died in 1962 at age 60.

But, then again . . .

ELECTION DAY was also a special remembrance day for six of Quincy's political figures.

McCAULEY

LaRAIA

HANNON

Three of the six -- Frank McCauley, Walter Hannon and John Koegler -- were first elected to the City Council Nov. 5, 1963.

And three of them -- George Burke, Joseph LaRaia

McDONALD

BURKE

and George McDonald -- were re-elected that year. McCauley, who keeps track of things like that, got the others together for lunch at the Quincy Neighborhood Club to mark that 39th anniversary.

McCauley came into the city council that year as Ward 1 councillor; Koegler, Ward 3 and Hannon, Ward 5.

LaRaia was re-elected from Ward 2; McDonald, Ward 4 and Burke, at-large.

Also re-elected that year were David McIntosh and John Quinn, both at-large, and Richard Barry, Ward 6. All three are now deceased.

Out of that council came three future mayors (Hannon, LaRaia and McCauley), a district attorney (Burke), an assistant district attorney (Barry) and a county commissioner (McDonald).

There was also another mayor in that council: McIntosh served as Plan E mayor in 1952.

The six who got together wished it could have been nine.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1915 POSTCARD is a view of the old Quincy Center railway station on the Old Colony Railroad. It was located just south of where the present MBTA Red Line and commuter rail station is today. This view is facing north from what was Irving Place, a short dead-end street west of the tracks that later became part of today's Burgin Parkway. The old depot could be reached from Hancock Street by Depot Avenue or Saville Street, both of which are now under McIntyre Mall. The building on the left was the A.J. Richard & Sons Company that sold hay, grain and mason's supplies. The storefronts visible under the canopy on the right were at the base of the Hancock House hotel, now the site of the Munroe Building.

Quincy's Yesterdays War Time Dimout Enforcement Along QSD

By TOM HENSHAW

John T. Lane, vice chairman of the Quincy Defense Council, said Auxiliary Police will be assigned to enforce the dimout along Quincy Shore Drive as soon as the MDC, which has charge of the highway, gives its permission.

A test of the dimout along the drive between Hancock St. and Sea St. showed that three out of five motorists had their lights on, many at high beam, despite warning signs that it was a dimout area.

Lane said most of the offenders were Fore River workers hurrying home at the conclusion of their shifts between 11 a.m. and midnight and 6 a.m. and 7 a.m.

BURGIN ENDORSES LANE

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, on the eve of leaving office for Navy duty, endorsed Rep. Myron N. Lane as his successor, "qualified by education, training and experience to assume responsibility that goes with the Mayor's office."

All five candidates for mayor -- Lane, former Mayor Charles A. Ross, Neil A. McDonald, Russell T. Bates and Laurence J. Curtis -- pledged economy in government at a candidates' night sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Ross opened his Ward 5 election headquarters at 225 Beale St., Wollaston, with a rousing speech by former School Committee member John P. Flavin backing his candidacy.

NO HEAT AT MASS FIELDS

Pupils of the Massachusetts Fields School were sent home for lack of heat despite the fact that there were 700 gallons of oil in the school's tank.

Due to a mechanical flaw in the system, it was not possible to pump oil unless there was more than 700 gallons in the tank and federal regulations forbid the delivery of oil if there was more than 400 gallons on hand.

Honoring Our Veterans

I remember the days as a child when my parents would take us to the parades on Veterans Day and Memorial Day. The streets were lined with hundreds of enthusiastic well-wishers who had come to honor our veterans, both living and deceased. What a contrast to the small numbers that attend these two parades now.

Have the citizens of this wonderful country forgotten the sacrifices that our veterans made to keep this country free from communism and other forms of dictatorship?

As teenagers, they left their loved ones to travel to foreign lands to fight for our freedom. Some of them went to war before they finished high school. So many of our male and female soldiers, sailors and airmen were killed in the prime time of their lives. Some were tortured before being killed. Shouldn't they, our POWs and MIAs be remembered?

The "lucky" veterans came home alive. Is it good fortune to come home paralyzed or with missing limbs? Their bodies were mutilated by bullets or land mines.

Some veterans came home appearing healthy, but what about the nightmares and flashbacks of the killings and other memories of the wars that they experienced? What about the veterans who witnessed a brother or friend being killed, feeling guilty and question why it wasn't them instead? Are they lucky? Some of these "lucky" veterans are so physically or mentally disabled they will never be able to work and are living on minimal income.

Do we need to be reminded of the freedom we enjoy? When we leave our homes, we are not given a curfew dictated by our government. We are free to come and go as we please. We are free to practice the religion of our choice and celebrate our religious holidays. We are allowed to decorate our homes with Christmas trees, put mangers in windows and place memorials on tables.

Our speech is not dictated, and our mail is not opened and censored by governmental officials. We are allowed to vote for whom we want to put in a government office. Our government believes in a free education for all. There is no child slavery in this country.

Although the economy is low, the government has not frozen our money and forbidden us to withdraw it from our banks as we need it. We shop in supermarkets and purchase what we want without having to wait in line for hours only to be limited to buy one loaf of bread or one container of milk.

In this country, women are equal to men and are not forced to walk behind their husbands. Our country does not dictate how many children we are allowed to have. Our government does not tell us what work we will do. The choice is our if we want to pursue a particular career.

Last, but certainly not least, we are free to pledge our allegiance to our country's flag. We enjoy all of these things without fear of being arrested and killed. These freedoms are not permitted in many countries.

When our country was attacked Sept. 11, 2001, everyone was emotionally torn apart and frightened. Again, our military personnel left their homes and families to protect our country. Wouldn't you think there would have been an enormous increase in attendance at the parades? Sadly, there was not.

I ask only we reconsider our priorities. I am aware we all lead busy lives and some people have to work on these holidays. However, Veterans Day and Memorial Day were made national holidays to allow us to pay tribute to our veterans, not so stores can profit by maneuvering people in for sales. Sales can be started after the parades are over. In some cases the sales are for the entire weekend which gives ample time for shoppers to find their bargains.

Most of us have parents, grandparents and great-grandparents who served our country as veterans. How disappointed they must be. Veterans have earned and deserve our respect and support. Please take one hour of your day to attend the parades and show them we appreciate what they have done to keep our country safe and free. One hour is not much in comparison to what they have sacrificed for us. Thank you.

Villa Rosa Restaurant Celebrates 50th Anniversary
